Faces at the Window.

After the toil of a wearisome day
Homeward I journey, nor stop on the way;
Two happy faces I'm certain to see
Pressed to the window-pane waiting for me.

Thoughts of the loved ones make heavy toil light,
Welcome the day for it presages night;
Hour after hour my heart leaps for joy,
Longing to see them, my girl and my boy.

Two little heads at the window I greet,
Watching for papa, far, far down the street;
Four little hands soon after I see
Pressed to the window-pane, waiting for me.

"Papa, kiss me," is the music I hear
From two childish voices, both loving and clear;
Scarcely can wait their mother's turn first—
Into my arms like the sunshine they burst.

Laura, the oldest, is like her papa,
Frank, the dear boy, is as much like mamma;
Loving them both, two birds in one nest,
How can I tell you which one I love best?

Laughing and carolling out into song
Mischievous Laura is all the day long;
Sweetest of girls as she sits on my knee,
Or close to the window-pane watches for me.

As night-shadows gather and bed-time's at hand,
They sing "Hold the Fort," and "Sweet Beulah Land,"
No matter how sleepy, the last one must be—
And together we sing it—"Yes, Jesus loves me."

The little hands folded, they kneel side by side,
"God bless papa, mamma and grandma beside;"
Who doubts as they pray "I lay down to sleep,"
That the Father in Heaven these charges will keep?

Younger than Laura by nearly two years,
Frank, the dear boy, our baby, appears;
Fairest in features, a temple of grace,
Bluest of blue eyes and round, cheery face.

Only a parent can compass the joy
That enters my heart as I gaze on my boy;
A bud undeveloped, the promise of fame,
A hope for the future, and bearing my name.

I wish I possessed the magic or art
To keep them forever both dear to my heart;
And small as they are, from evil so free,
As close to the window they're watching for me.

Oh, Father in Heaven, be near, I implore
When father on earth can protect them no more;
And if for them first the summons shall be,
May they both with the Saviour be waiting for me.

GRANDMOTHER'S MONEY.

"Bless and save us, mother, what be you doin'?" demanded Farmer Martin in great amazement, as he came in at the kitchen door for a jug of molasses and water.

"I'm a-cleanin'-house," said Mrs. Martin.

If Mrs. Martin had been going to a masquerade party she could have scarcely disguised herself more systematically. Her head was tied up in roller-towel whose ends, escaping behind, "streamed like a meteor to the troubled air;" her portly figure was encased in a white apron, her skirts were pinned up, and her sleeves rolled high above her elbows.

"Didn't know ye calkerlated to commence to-day," said the farmer.

"Well, I didn't, exactly," owned his wife. "But the minute your mother made up her mind she'd have the horse and wagon and go over to Deacon Trudge's widow's to spend the day, I made up my mind to begin the house cleaning. You see, Hosea, you know yourself that Mother Martin is a pleasant old lady, and I set a deal of store by her, but she can't bear to see nothin' disturbed, and them files of old papers up garret, and heaps of rusty tins and old bottles down cellar, and the broken crockery back of the pantry door that she always says she's going to mend when she gets time, and the barrels of rags in the store room she's going to sort over in a minute of leisure—"

"What be ye goin' to do with 'em?" asked Farmer Martin, as his wife paused to draw a long, despairing breath.

"They're gone," said Mrs. Martin, with a roguish twinkle in her eyes.

"Gone where?"

"Matilda sold the rags to a ragman before grandma's wagon was out of sight," said the enterprising matron. "The papers Elder Boley gave me five dollars for, because they dated clear back to President Zack Taylor's time, and he said they'd be a curiosity for the Young Men's Reading Room, and the crockery and the bottles and the old tin cans as ain't good for nothing under creation, I gave Bill Betts a quarter to take 'em down to the old well by the stone fence, and throw them all in."

"What!" cried Mr. Martin; "filling up my old well, eh? Where be I going to water my cattle, d'ye suppose?"

"It ain't but a little further to the brook," said Mrs. Martin; "and that well ain't safe. Never was, since the curb rotted away."

"Many a gourd-shell of pure, cold water I've drank there, when the old house stood close by under the butternut tree," said the farmer, with a sigh, "afore we pulled the old house down and built the new one."

"Well, ye won't never drink no more," said Mrs. Martin. "The water's most all run out since we dug the new well down here, and I've had the children carrying cobble stones there all the spring, at a penny a hundred, to get a huckleberry pasture cleared out a little. And now the old truck has gone a-top of it—and a good riddance of two bad things at once, says I."

Mr. Martin groaned.

"Well, mother," said he, "what bothers me is—what will mother say?"

"I don't s'pose she'll be pleased," said Mrs. Martin, stirring vigorously at a pail of whitewash. "But it's done and it can't be undone; and, after all, what is the use of turning one's house into a magpie's nest?"

The farmer filled his jug and retreated to the remotest fastness of the timothy meadow, resolved to be as far out of the way as possible when the old lady came home.

"Hetty likes her own way," said he, "and so does mother; and when flint and steel come together, there is most generally fire!"

But poor Mother Martin came home in quite a different way from what they expected. Struck down with apoplexy at the neighbor's house, she was carried back across her own threshold dead. And Mrs. Martin, who, in spite of her peculiarities, was fond of her mother-in-law, wept tears of genuine grief, and audibly rejoiced that grandma had never known about the selling of those old papers and the filling up of the old well.

So Mrs. Martin, senior, was dead and buried in the old cemetery by the mountain side.

"Strange, ain't it?" said Mrs. Deacon Trudge. "Everybody s'posed old Mrs. Martin had money in the bank, and now there ain't a sign of it to be found."

"All fooled away in them deceiving shares that her son Josiah was ruined with," said Miss Grundy. "That's the way it's gone you may depend."

But Mr. and Mrs. Hosea Martin could'nt believe that grandma could so far have lost her senses as to fritter away solid money like that.

"As sure as you live, Hosea," said the wife, "she's put it away somewhere. In a stocking or a bag, or up the chimbly, or under the bricks of the old kitchen hearth, and it must be found. For Matilda's sake! Grandma always said Matilda was to have her money, and now that she is engaged to Rufus Burton, and all the"—

"It's my private opinion, Hetty," said the farmer, shaking his head in a sort of discouraging way, "that you sold that money done up in the rag-bags."

"Nonsense!" said Mrs. Martin, growing pale. "It might have been in the files of newspapers, laid flat and stitched down; I've heard tell of such things. And to speak the truth, Hosea, I've been to the Elder's and looked over every identical one of them papers. By good luck the package had not even been untied. But there wasn't nothing there but the printer's ink. But the rags,—O, Hosea, I wouldn't even know the man with the string of bells and the rag-wagon from Job! And where he went and where he came from, the good Lord only knows."

"I reckon you'll find that house cleanin' came pretty expensive," said Mr. Martin, dryly."

All search proved unavailing. Nothing could be discovered of grandma's money, no scrap of paper to afford a clue, no hidden board, not even a word of allusion to it in the old lady's neatly kept memorandum book. And to Matilda's exquisite mortification, Mr. Rufus Burton, after a decent period of time had elapsed, delicately gave her to understand that he didn't feel able to marry at present, and that sooner than bind her by the trammels of a long engagement, he considered it better to release her from her troth.

"Just as you please," said Matty Martin, with true New England spirit. All the tears she shed were wept in secret to the great disappointment of the neighborhood, who were looking out with some interest to see "if Matilda Martin would pine any now that Rufe Burton had mittened her."

But she didn't. Instead of that she married Alva Dean, who had always loved her from a child.

"I ain't college-learned like Rufe Burton," said he: "but I love you, Matty, and I'll be a good and true husband to you, see if I ain't."

The newly wedded couple came to live with the Martins in the old homestead, for Hosea was getting old and rheumatic, and Mrs. Martin could not bear the idea of parting from her only daughter. Time crept by,—Hosea Martin and his wife grew to be white-haired, old people, and Alva Dean had prospered on the farm, and built a new barn up on the hill, when one day he said to his cherry-cheeked wife:

"Didn't there use to be an old well up somewhere near the big butternut tree, Matty, at the south side of the barn?"

"Of course," nodded Matty. "But the curb rotted away, and mother thought it unsafe. So, after the new well by the house was dug, they filled it up."

"I've a notion to open it again," said Alva. "The water would be dreadful handy, now that we keep all the cattle there.

"But," said Matty, "I seem to recollect that it ran dry after the new well was dug."

"I guess we can strike water if we go deep enough," said Alva. "Anyhow, I mean to try."

The old well was reopened—although Alva Dean remarked, with a groan, that all the old trash in creation seemed to have been poked away there.

"Bottles," said he, "and broken-nosed pitchers, and tin cans, half-rusted away, and cobble stones, and goodness knows what all. Enough to set up a junk-shop with."

"Ah!" said Matty, with a smile, "mother filled it up the same spring that she sold grandma's money to the rag peddler, that never came around again, at a cent and a half a pound."

"No use crying after spilt milk, my girl," said Alva, bravely.

"But I'm not crying," said Matty. "I'm laughing. Don't you see?"

Just then in came little Bess, the youngest, golden-haired darling of the flock.

"O, mamma," she cried, "look at the lovely old cracked stone jug that came out of the old well. Mayn't me and Fanny have it to fix liquorice-water in? Look! The cork is sticking tight in it yet!"

"But it's cracked down the side, dear," remonstrated Mrs. Dean.

"But we can putty it, mamma, like Mrs. Dutcher's best china bowl. Please, mamma, may we?" urged the mite.

Mrs. Dean took it up and looked curiously at it—an old, high-shouldered jug of drab, with a sprawling pattern of blue dashed down the side.

"I remember it well," said she. "It used to stand behind Grandma Martin's buttery shelf. I used to fancy the pattern was like a crab. And we"—

"Oh, mamma!" cried Bess, with a shriek, "Oh, mamma!"

For the handle had slipped through Mrs. Dean's fingers, and the jug fell with a crash to the ground. But the stoneware was strong and it separated in two pieces, following the line of the crack.

"It's stuffed full of funny bits of brown paper," cried Bess.

Mrs. Dean gave a little scream and grew pale.

"Grandmother's money!" she cried. "As true as you live and breath, mother," to Mrs. Martin, who had come limping in upon her crutch. "it's grandmother's money, put up there ten good years ago!"

It was true. The stone jug lying almost at the top of the other debris, had kept its treasure dry and safe; and here ten years after the old lady was dead and entombed, her secret hoard—always intended for Matilda—had come to light.

A thousand dollars! Not a great sum, perhaps, but wealth to these primitive people. And Rufus Burton, who had married a pretty shrew and had failed in the grocery business, groaned over "what might have been," and Alva Dean kissed his wife, and blessed God in his heart; and farmer Martin chuckled at his ancient helpmeet, and remarked, with something of his old waggishness:

"That house cleanin' of yours like to cost a thousand dollars, Hetty!"

While Matilda said softly:

"Heaven bless the dear old grandmother!"—Woman's Journal.

A NEW YORK STREET INCIDENT.

A reporter called to a little bootblack near the city hall to give him a shine, yesterday. The little fellow came rather slowly for one of that lively guild, and planted his box down under the reporter's foot. Before he could get his brushes out, another larger boy ran up and calmly pushing the little one aside, said:

"Here, you go sit down, Jimmy."

The reporter at once became indignant at what he took to be a piece of outrageous bullying, and sharply told the new-comer to clear out.

"Oh, dat's all right, boss," was the reply. "I'm only goin' to do it fur him. You see he's been sick in the hospital for mor'n a month, and can't do much work yet, so us boys all turn in and give him a lift when we can, savy?"

"Is that so, Jimmy?" asked the reporter, turning to the smaller boy.

"Yes, sir," wearily replied the boy, and as he looked up the pallid, pinched face could be discerned, even through the grime that covered it. "He does it fur me, if you'll let him."

"Certainly, go ahead," and as the bootblack plied the brush, the reporter plied him with questions.

"You say all the boys help him in this way?"

"Yes, sir. When they ain't got no job themselves, and Jimmy gets one they turns in and helps him, 'cause he ain't very strong yet, ye see."

"What percentage do you charge him on a job?"

"Hey!" queried the youngster. "I don't know what you mean?"

"I mean, what part of the money do you give Jimmy, and how much do you keep out of it?"

"You bet yer life I don't keep none; I ain't no such sneak as that."

"So you give it all to him, do you?"

"Yes, I do. All the boys give up what they gets on his job. I'd like to catch any feller sneaking in on a sick boy, I would."

The shine being completed, the reporter handed the urchin a quarter, saying, "I guess you're a pretty good fellow, so you keep 10 cents and give the rest to Jimmy there."

"Can't do it, sir; its his customer. Here Jim."

He threw him the coin and was off like a shot after a customer for himself, a veritable rough diamond. In this big city there are a good many such lads, with warm and generous hearts under their ragged coats.—Commercial Advertiser.

HOW THE TWELVE DIED.

St. Matthew is supposed to have suffered martyrdom, or was slain with the sword at the city of Ethiopia, in Egypt.

St. Luke was hanged upon an olive tree in Greece.

St. John was put into a caldron of boiling oil at Rome and escaped death. He afterward died a natural death at Ephesus, in Asia.

St. James the Great was beheaded at Jerusalem.

St. James the Less was thrown from a pinnacle or wing of the temple, and then beaten to death with a fuller's club.

St. Philip was hanged up against a pillar at Hierapolis, a city in Phrygia.

St. Bartholomew was flayed alive by the command of a barbarous king.

St. Andrew was bound to a cross, whence he preached unto the people until he expired.

St. Thomas was run through the body with a lance, at Coromandel, in the East Indies.

St. John was shot to death with arrows.

St. Simeon Zealot was crucified in Persia.

St. Matthias was first stoned and then beheaded.

St. Barnabas was stoned to death by the Jews of Salania.

St. Paul was beheaded at Rome by the tyrant Nero.—The Evangelist.

Rest.

Toll out, ye bells! sound midnight through the air:
Tick out men's lives, now groaning under care;
Wear out great Time with clashes everywhere—
I wait, yea long, for rest.

Stride on, stop not, ye finger-marks of woe;
Haste ye, ye shades! Oh! let the sunlight go;
Wing past, ye hours, life is too sad and slow—
I wait, yea long, for rest.

Bud forth, ye flowers, let spring and summer die;
Bend down, ye sheaves, let autumn, too, go by;
Cold blow, ye winds, another winter's nigh—
I wait, yea long, for rest.

Rest cometh not, rest is not for the young;
Rest liveth not, it lies the grave among;
Rest comes to age, so yonder death-bells sung—
I wait, yea long, for rest.

Rest cometh not with worldly joy and mirth;
Rest cometh not until the soul's new birth;
Rest cometh not until we die to earth—
Then cometh rest indeed.

Death clasps our lives, stealeth them carefully;
Rest guards our souls now lying peacefully,
Closeth our lips, which murmur thankfully,
"Now have we rest indeed."

BOYCOTTED BY THE GIRLS.

The progress of temperance principles among the young Irish-Americans of the coal regions within the last 10 years is simply without parallel in the history of temperance reform. In fact, the temperance feeling is now so strong that no young man can enter the charming circle of female society unless he is an avowed temperance man and wears the Father Matthew badge. It has now come to such a pass that the young Irish-American ladies will have nothing to do with a man who drinks. By raising this boycott against the boys the girls have played the part of true temperance missionaries, in that they succeeded in driving the young men into the societies. An illustration of this was seen in the town of Beaver Meadow last spring when all the girls in town combined and resolved that they would not accept the attention of any young man until he had first signed the pledge and joined the St. Aloysius society. For a while it was thought the young ladies were not in earnest, and that the boycott would be lifted. But the young ladies were determined, and when the young fellows found this out they surendered, and forthwith there was a rush for admission into the local temperance society. The latter is now in a very flourishing condition. Of those who join these temperance societies about 10 out of 40 "fall from grace;" in other words go back to drink. But the deserter's downfall does not last long. After his debauch he sees the folly of his ways, and thinks how happy he was when he was sober.

But this is not the worst. All his friends are traveling in an opposite direction and shun the outcast altogether. The result is that the man who breaks his pledge becomes disgusted with himself and returns to the society. After taking the pledge for a second time he seldom goes back to drink again. The number who do break the pledge a second time is only one in 70. A member who forfeits his membership in a society forfeits all his dues paid into the treasury by him. All the societies are beneficial, and take good care of the sick, widows and orphans. The St. Aloysius society of Wilkesbarre, has 480 names on its rolls and over $7000 in its treasury. The Father Matthew society and the Father Matthew Cadets have 200 more members Every society has a handsome uniform. —Philadelphia Times.

WHY SHE LET THE BURGLAR GO.

First Omaha Burglar—"I tell you it's awful the way things are in New England, twenty or thirty women to every man."

Second Omaha Burglar.—"I suppose so. All the men have come West."

"Yes, that's how it is."

"Did you get much boodle there?"

"Yes, but I had a narow escape once. I noticed a lot of the finest diamonds you ever saw on a Boston girl just going out of the house to a lecture or something, and I watched my chance and got in and hid under her bed. You see, I was thinkin' she would be so interested in the lecture she went to that she wouldn't think to look around for burglars, you know.

"Yes."

"But when she came in the first thing she did was to look under the bed and there she saw me."

"Did she scream or faint?"

"She just grabbed me with both hands and held on like grim death."

"Eh! how did you get away?"

"I explained to her that I was already married and she let me go."—Omaha World.

FACTS ABOUT THE BIBLE.

A prisoner, condemned to solitary confinement, obtained a copy of the Bible, and by three years' careful study obtained the following facts: The Bible contains 3,586,489 letters, 773,692 words, 31,173 verses, 1188 chapters and sixty-six books. The word and occurs 46,277 times. The word Lord occurs 1855 times. The word reverend occurs but once, which is in the ninth verse of the 111th Psalm. The middle verse is the eighth verse of the 118th Psalm. The 21st verse of the 7th chapter of Ezra contains all the letters of the alphabet except the letter J. The finest chapter to read is the 26th chapter of the Acts of the Apostles. The 19th chapter of II Kings and the 37th chapter of Isaiah are alike. The longest verse is the ninth verse of the eighth chapter of Esther. The shortest verse is the 35th verse of the 11th chapter of St. John. The 8th, 15th, 21st and 31st verses of the 107th Psalm are alike. Each verse of the 136th Psalm ends alike.

At the hotel. Manager—"Well, what's the trouble now?" Leading Lady—"Doesn't my contract destinctly specify that I shall have the choice of accommodations on the road?" Manager—"Certainly; but—" Leading Lady—"The washbowl in the soubrette's room is decorated. Mine isn't. I give two weeks' notice."—New York Mirror.

VOLAPUK, THE NEW UNIVERSAL LANGUAGE.

Leibnity devoted much time to the construction of his Specieuse Generale, which fell flat. Labbe invented a philosophical language, and 1663 Kircher published his Polygraphia. In 1668 the Royal society sanctioned John Wilkins's Philosophical Language by publication in London. Most inventors of this kind attempted the ideographic—to have signs represent ideas. We have this in mathematics in the plus and minus signs, but practically this is reverting to hieroglyphics. Johann Martin Schleyer seems to have solved the problem, for in 1878 he arranged the most simple artificial language, and so rapidly has it been recognized as of practical use that in Europe, Asia and Africa, 1,000,000 persons are said to use it in their intercourse.

The alphabet employed is the Roman with some of the German dotted letters added. Volapuk is formed on the general model of Aryan tongues in its signs representing letters and words, the root words being taken from living languages, mainly Indo-Germanic and Romance. In making the vocabulary English afforded the largest number of words; Latin, German, French and Spanish next, in the order named.

The simple Anglo-Saxon roots abound in English and their brevity caused their adoption. The numerals are 1 bal, 2 tel, 3 kil, 4 ful, 5 lul, 6 mal, 7 vel, 8 jöl, 9 zul, 10 bals, 20 tels, 100 tum, 1000 mil, million balion, 11 would be balsebal; the letter e meaning and; So 21 would be telsebal.

There is but one declension. S added to any word forms the plural, which is never formed in any other way. The first three vowels added to any noun form the genitive, dative and accusative. Thus:—

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Nominative, | Vol, | World. |
| Genitive, | Vola, | Of the World. |
| Dative, | Vole, | To the World. |
| Accusative, | Voli, | The or a World. |

Worlds would be vols. Every noun is declined in the same way. The verbs are all regular and there is but one conjugation. The tenses are denoted by the letters a e i o u placed before the verbs; the letter p preceding these denotes the passive voice. The personal pronouns are ob I, ol thou, om he, of she. os it, on they. The verb Lof, to love, would be conjugated thus:—

|---|---|
| Lofob, I love, | Lofobs, we love. |
| Lofol, thou lovest, | Lofols, ye love. |
| Lofom, he loves, | Lofoms, they (m) love. |
| Lofof, she loves, | Lofofs, they (f) love. |
| Imperfect, alofob, | I loved. |
| Perfect, elofob, | I have loved. |
| Pluperfect, ilofob, | I had loved. |

Future perfect, ulofob, I will have loved. Palofab is I am loved, pelofab I have beer loved, and so on. Negatives are no. Adjectives are formed by adding ik to the noun: gud is the good and gudik good, compared thus gudik gudikum, gudikum. Adverbs are made by adding o to the adjective: gudiko is well. So much is made of one stem or root that there is little to memorize after learning the system. Max Muller is quoted as saying: "The universal language of Prof. Schleyer is well known to me. I thoroughly agree with the principles upon which it is based."

Savants, travelers and merchants will have the greatest use for Volapuk. There are 800 languages to-day, 40 or 50 of which are spoken by civilized people who are fast being united in interest by railroads, telegraphs and steamboats. It takes years to learn three or four Romance or Germanic tongues and much longer to learn a single Hindoo or Semitic dialect. Turkish, Japanese or Chinese are still more difficult. The principles of Volapuk can be learned in a few minutes, and a month's study makes one a fluent writer and speaker. There are already a dozen periodicals published in Volapuk, the commercial journals being the most favored. Soon medical and scientifc works will be worded in the new language with an ever increasing number of cosmoplitan readers. Discoveries that have lain dormant for years because of inaccessible languages will be widely announced. A German poem, "The Eye of the Child," has been translated in Volapuk:

O log cila, mag nifala!
Logob velik stalis olik
No pegumol fa deb sina,
Litos se ol jin lanelik.

As pronounced in English spelling the verse would sound somewhat as follows:

O logue chelah margue neyfalah!
Logobue aelique stalees olique
No payglomwail fah daib senah,
Lectos say ole sheen lanelique.

The accent is on the last syllable in every word.

The language is being taught in Chicago by Prof. Henry Cohn, and the literature, grammars, etc., are imported by E. Steiger & Co. of New York.

Not only will business and travel be facilitated by its use, but political and religious intriguery and hatred, fostered by eastern political chiefs, will be rendered less effective. Diplomatic relations will not, as in the case of treaties, be capable of two or more constructions, as Volapuk is free from ambiguity. In common with everything scientific it advocates "Menede bal, puki bal:" One mankind, one language.

MISUNDERSTOOD.—The importance of distinct enunciation in singing was well illustrated in a Sunday school recently. The scholars frequently sing:

"Pass along the watch word, shout it as you go, Victory! victory, over every foe!"

A little girl of five years, coming for the first time to Sunday school, was greatly pleased with the singing of this hymn. When she reached home, she said:

"Mamma, they sang such a funny song at Sunday school to-day!"

"What was it?" asked the mother.

"Oh, they sang, 'Pass along the wash rag,' and they kept singing it over and over."—Youths' Companion.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, JANUARY 6, 1888.

DR. BURDEN has been rëelected chairman of the Republican state committee.

DR. JAMES R. NICHOLS, founder of the Boston Journal of Chemistry, died at his home in Haverhill Tuesday, at the age of 68.

FIFTEEN HUNDRED pianos went up in smoke Tuesday, in a Paris factory. It was the most brilliant musical movement on record.

OUR Legislature starts off with remarkable unanimity in its election of officers, and if it can work as harmoniously during the next four months there ought to be a material shortening of the session.

SPRINGFIELD'S prospective post office building makes a fine appearance in the pictures of it, but many of the city's unwashed are likely to hesitate some time before entering an edifice so suggestive of sacred uses in its external form.

THE 50th anniversary of the pope's entrance upon his priesthood in the Roman Catholic church was celebrated at Rome last Sunday with great splendor. Magnificent gifts in great numbers have been received by the pope from all quarters of the globe.

THERE are men living who ought to have their necks broken, but it has remained for a Pennsylvania man, P. O. Myers of Nickleville, to surprise everybody and confound the doctors by living after his neck was broken by a fall, with a fair prospect of full recovery.

WORCESTER hopes to have a women's college in addition to the new Clark University, Rev. Dr. Eli Fay of Los Angles, Cal., having made a conditional offer of $600,000 to the Unitarian Conference of this state for such a college, which may be located in that city.

WITHIN a few weeks Pittsfield has had thirty cases of diptheria, half of them fatal, and nearly all apparently traceable to the wretched condition of two school houses, one of which has now been summarily closed by the board of health. The celler is in a vile condition, on account of faulty drainage, and it is surprising that such menace to the health of the scholars and neighborhood should have been tolerated in so intelligent a community.

EDITOR LOOMIS of Holyoke has disposed of his interest in the Transcript establishment to his partner, and proposes to take a needed rest after closing up the affairs of the old firm. Brother Loomis is too good a man to be lost to the profession, and after the taste he has had of an editor's life he will find it hard to give up. Indeed. we suspect that he retires from the cares of a daily paper for the purpose of starting an agricultural weekly, in which he can unfold what he knows about farming.

CASHIER HICKS of Stafford Springs was sentenced at Hartford Tuesday to four years at hard labor in state prison. He pleaded guilty to perjury, in swearing to false returns of the bank's condition, the charges of embezzlement having been nolled by the district attorney. Hicks appears to have speculated not for his own benefit, but for that of the bank, hoping thereby to retrieve some old losses, but his schemes failed, and the bank is as badly off to-day as if he had put the money in his own pocket.

THE GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE.

Gov. Ames's second inaugural is a model of clearness and brevity, and is worthy of a careful perusal by all who are interested in state affairs. Beginning with the customary financial statement, he shows the necessity of a tax of $1,718,619.89 for the year, though further on a reminder is furnished that railroads have ceased to drain the state treasury, and that $6,187,103.16 had been added to the sinking fund for the payment of the state debt.

The school question is considered, and the governor thinks there is occasion for the alarm which he represented as existing because of the withdrawal of children from the public schools. The matter is treated with scrupulous propriety, yet it is plain that there is disapproval of the system of denominational schools. It is recommended that private schools be supported by private means, and it is intimated that new legislation looking to such an end would receive approval. Prison labor receives the attention of his excellency, and he treats it in the light of business principles and of philanthropic ideas. The singularly crude law which was enacted at the last session went into effect on the first of November, but beyond the appointment of a general superintendent under its provisions, little has been done. Little could be done, for that matter, for the law proves to be entirely unworkable.

The governor commends to the consideration of the Legislature the proposed prohibitory and biennial-elections amendments to the constitution. He renews the suggestion that, in communities which vote to license the liquor traffic, the license fees granted be greatly increased and the number of licenses granted restricted by legislative enactment, and advises further that license fees be paid into the state instead of the local treasury—a suggestion the adoption of which would undoubtedly diminish the disposition to license the business for the sake of the revenue. Other of the governor's suggestions are in favor of municipal suffrage for women; increasing the number of justices of the superior court; providing an additional sitting of the supreme court for the decision of qenstions of law; including among savings bank investments bonds of corporations in other states which have paid dividends on their stock without interruption for a term of years, and the extension of the state house by substantial additions.

William Parsons, a brilliant Irishman who has spent his winters in this country lecturing, died at Boston last Sunday, aged 60 years.

The majority of the miners in the Schuylkill collieries in Pennsylvania struck Tuesday, and a coal famine is threatened.

One woman was killed at Holyoke, and three persons were seriously lujured at Pittsfield Wednesday while coasting.

A smashup on the Cincinnati Southern Railroad in Kentucky Saturday killed 20 persons.

A prominent lawyer at Waverly, Iowa, is charged with murdering his professional rival.

A two-years-old son of C. L. Saunders fell while at play Monday morning, dislocating his elbow.

Miss Anna Fisherdick, who is attending school at Chicopee Falls, has been home this week on a vacation.

A large audience witnessed an excellent rendering of "Kerry Gow" at the Park street rink Wednesday evening.

The Patterson Club will meet at the Converse house parlors next Tuesday evening. An entertainment will be presented.

Charles Sanders, clerk in the New London Northern freight office, fell and badly sprained his ankle last Friday night.

LeGro & Lynde have bought out the news route of Fred Lacouline and now have entire control of the local newspaper business.

A few watched the old year out and the new year in last Saturday night, but probably more watched Sunday out and Monday in.

The officers of the Woman's Relief Corps and the Grand Army post will be installed at Grand Army Hall next Wednesday evening.

James McKenney, a freight conductor on the New London Northern road, was badly pinched by the cars near Yantic, Ct., Wednesday.

The Congregational and Baptist churches have held meetings every evening this week in recognition of the week of Prayer.

Rev. C. H. Eaton, D. D., of New York city, delivered a lecture at St. Paul's Universalist church last evening, upon "The New Aristocracy."

The aggregate passenger and freight receipts of the New London Northern road at this station for the past year were $105,500. Last year they were $115,400.

The meeting at A. O. H. Hall Tuesday evening to form a local Democratic club was not very largely attended, and those present adjourned to next Tuesday.

H. L. Gray has sold his Commercial street restaurant and dining rooms to W. H. Perry, formerly baggage-master for the New London Northern Railroad at this station.

The Palmers will play a match game of polo with the Warrens at Ocean Pier Rink, Warren, Saturday evening. The local team will wear their new uniforms on that occasion.

Rev. H. W. Pope will exchange with Rev. A. T. Perry of Ware next Sunday. The Y. P. S. C. E. consecration meeting, postponed from last week, will be held Sunday evening.

Locomotive "Benj. Stark," of the New London Northern Railroad, which draws train No. 33, was derailed on the northern division of the line this week. Little damage was done.

Three cases of measles and one case of diphtheria in one family on Pine street, three cases of measles on Park street, and three on Main street are reported by the board of health.

The Womans' Christian Temperance Union will hold its annual meeting in the parlors of the Congregational church next Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock. A full attendance is requested.

George Knight, employed at the mill of the Palmer Wire Manufacturing Company, fell last Thursday while at work, cutting a bad gash over his left eye. The wound was dressed by Dr. J. J. Flynn.

The Ladies' Social Union of St. Paul's Universalist church will hold a social and entertainment in the parlors two weeks from next Tuesday evening. The farce "Turn Him Out," will be presented.

The Christmas concert at the Second Congregational church last Sunday evening was attended by a small number on account of the unfavorable weather. The choir rendered a special musical programme.

Charles Atkins, traveling salesman for the Knowles Pump Works of Warren, has moved his family into the house of David Shepardson on Converse avenue, and will make Palmer his headquarters hereafter.

C. G. Shaw, formerly in the employ of Fosket & Holbrook, has severed his connection with that firm and opened a grain store in the wooden building on Main street formerly used by the late Joseph Thompson.

J. A. Palmer has built a structure, the dimensions of which are about 25 by 35 feet, near his residence on Knox street, where he intends to put in a circular saw, establish a wood-yard and supply the people of the town with fuel in the future.

F. T. Monroe, who has been running the broker's office in Strong's block for some time, has bought an office in Worcester, and will go there. The office here will be continued under the management of Mr. Colby, heretofore telegraph operator in the office.

Frank Little and Daniel McGrath, who attempted to rob the Brown brothers in the northern part of the town a few weeks ago, pleaded guilty to burglary before the superior court at Springfield Tuesday, and were sentenced to 7 and 6 1-2 years, the former with one day solitary.

All the farmers in this vicinity are requested to attend the farmers' institute at the Weeks House hall next Tuesday at 10 o'clock a. m. The subject for discusion in the morning is "The value and appreciation of commercial fertilizers," and in the afternoon, "The business side of farming in New England."

Palmer Lodge, I. O. O. F., elected the following officers last Friday evening for the coming year: N. G., F. H. Caryl; V. G., E. J. Osborne; R. S., F. H. Conant; P. S., W. O. Richardson; treasurer, J. H. Smith; trustees, G. B. Kenerson, Charles Upham and L. G. Parkhurst. The above officers will be installed next Friday evening by George H. Lapham of Springfield. Eight new members also joined the lodge at the meeting.

Hampden Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, installed the following officers Monday evening: H. P., George Robinson; K., H. E. W. Clark; S., George O. Henry, treasurer, E. G. Hastings; secretary, C. W. Betts; tyler, S. W. Shumway.

ROYAL ARCANUM.—PUBLIC INSTALLATION.

The public installation of the newly-elected officers of Quaboag Council, Royal Arcanum, was held Tuesday evening. The exercises of installation were conducted by District Deputy Dargin of Springfield, who installed these officers: Regent, Charles E. Fish; vice regent, F. N. Carpenter; orator, C. E. Fuller; treasurer, H. N. Sedgwick; collector, G. C. Ellis; guide, F. W. Harrison; chaplain, Rev. F. W. Betts; warden, D. H. Brown; secretary, A. C. Page; sentry, E. L. Davis; past regent, Fred Allen. After the installation a fine musical entertainment was given, the solos of M. E. Howard and Mrs. H. E. Huntley deserving special mention. A comic recitation by C. F. Gegenheimer of Three Rivers was loudly applauded for the excellent rendition of the piece. Speech making followed, being indulged in by members of the council and others. Those present then repaired to the dining hall and sat down to a good supper, which was prepared by W. A. Barnes. A large number not connected with the order were present, and enjoyed the evening's entertainment immensely.

PROBATE COURT.

At the probate court in Springfield Wednesday the following business for this section was transacted: Administration granted on the estates of—Della E. King, late of Monson, Willis A. King administrator; Fidelia C. Beebe, late of Wilbraham, Andrew Beebe of Hampden administrator. Wills proved of—Ellen Wren, late of Palmer, Michael O'Connor executor; Caroline Deichmann of Monson, William A. Deichmann executor. Charles L. Gardner of Palmer was appointed trustee under the will of Warren Collins, late of Wilbraham, for the benefit of George L. Collins of North Brookfield. Inventories were filed in the estates of—Della E. King, late of Monson, personal $191; Abial Bottum, late of Hampden, real $1200, personal $3192. Accounts were rendered in the estates of—Thomas Degan late of Wilbraham; Charles Noble, late of Wilbraham; Harriet C. Snell, late of Palmer; Alvin Hastings, late of Palmer. Alford Converse and Henry S. Lee, guardians of May F. Walling, formerly May F. Wyles of Brimfield, were licensed to sell real estate, and distribution to next of kin was granted in the estate of Sarah Clark, late of Monson.

A PROSPECT OF ELECTRIC LIGHTS AFTER ALL.

Thomas T. Robinson has been looking over the towns of Palmer and Monson this week in the interests of Boston capitalists, who think very favorably of putting in an electric light plant to light both towns by electricity. Mr. Robinson is a competent electrician, and says that there is business enough here to warrant the establishing of a plant. He has canvassed the towns mentioned for the purpose of soliciting the opinions of those who think of lighting their stores by the incandescent lights. He has obtained a map of the fire district and says that in canvassing he met with remarkable success, and that the majority of the merchants here will put in the new system of lighting. He rather thinks that the plant should be located nearly in the center of this village, not at J. H. Smith's new mill as has been proposed since the scheme has been revived. Mr. Robinson returned to Boston yesterday, and if the company which he represents decides to take up the matter and push it through, the poles now set, belonging to the defunct Palmer Electric Company, will be purchased. He says, as do other electricians, that the contract price made with the Palmer Electric Company by the fire district, is remarkably reasonable.

THE GILBERTVILLES VICTORIOUS.

An unusually large number witnessed the polo game at Park street rink last Saturday evening between the Gilbertvilles and the Palmers. There was quite a delay in starting the game, but at 9.45 the teams took their positions, and only a few seconds elapsed when the Palmers took the first goal, winning great applause. The teams played 10 minutes and 5 seconds before the second goal was taken, which was caged by Crawford of the visiting club. Tracey of the Palmers made a neat rush. and with an assist, sent the ball in for a second goal. The Gilbertvilles worked hard at this point of the game and were held down quite nicely by the local team, but they finally succeeded in caging the ball for the second time. The visiting team managed to get the next two goals, owing to misjudgement of the local team, which captured the fifth goal after diligent playing. The next five goals were all taken by the visiting team. The result of the game at the finish was: Gilbertvilles, 8; Palmers, 3. Time, 40 minutes. Referee, John Madden of Palmer. The two-mile skating race for the championship of Hampden county, which was to have been contested by William Smith of Springfield and Daniel Finnerty of Palmer, was given up.

Palmer's Building Record for the Past Year.

The building record of the town for the past year shows that the contractors and builders have not been as busy as in years preceding, and also that comparatively little building was done during that period. The aggregate amount of money expended in this line the past year was $80,000. No very elaborate buildings have been constructed, the greatest outlay being in the rebuilding of the union passenger station, which cost about $22,000. Aside from the above, C. W. Johnson has built a two-tenement house costing about $2500; E. C. Sexton has erected a cottage costing about $1500; John Smith a residence, which cost $2500; W. M. Rhodes erected a house on Dewey's Hill costing $1500, and a green-house has been erected in the same locality by Sumner Blodgett at an expense of about $800. A new two-tenement house has been erected near the Point of Rocks by Dr. William Holbrook, who has also repaired his Main street residence, at a cost of over $3000. J. H. Hawks is erecting a house on Knox street which will cost about $2000 when completed; Cross block has been repaired externally and internally at a cost of $600; J. M. Converse has converted the New London Northern Railroad Company's old passenger station into tenements at a cost of $1000; Dr. John Wilbur has built a fine barn at Blanchardville at a cost of $2500; J. H. Woolrich has put up a new barn and two sheds at his farm, costing $1200; the Wright Wire Cloth Company has erected a storehouse at a cost of $600; the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society has constructed a new covered grand-stand costing $1100; J. H. Shanks has put up a barn costing $200; L. C. Snow, G. H. Griffin and F. M. Eager have built additions to their houses costing $800; Richard Arnold has built a two-tenement house at the wire mill which will cost him $2500; H. M. Kendall has made extensive repairs upon his house in the northern part of the town at an expense of $1000; P. S. Trumble, John Gay, John Dimock and Thomas Holly have each erected houses at Palmer Center costing in the vicinity of $1000 apiece; the French Catholic Society has erected a parsonage at Three Rivers costing $6000; F. F. Marcy has built a tenement house at Three Rivers which cost about $1000; Mary Wood and the Brown heirs have erected houses at Bondsville costing $1000 apiece; Clark & Hastings are building a tenement house and market at the same place, which will cost $2000 when completed. Patrick Slattery has erected a barn at the same village, which cost him $600; the Massachusetts Central Railroad Company has built a new station at the same place at an estimated cost of $1500. At Thorndike, W. B. Lawton has built a new block for business purposes and a hall for the Knights of Labor at a cost of $2000; the Thorndike Manufacturing Company has constructed several new tenement houses, remodeled some of the old ones, erected several new sheds and built an addition to the dye-house, the aggregate cost of which is estimated at $10,000.

BRIMFIELD.

The winter term of Hitchcock Free High School commenced Tuesday with the same number of pupils as at the fall term.

At the annual meeting of the First Congregational church last Saturday, James T. Brown was re-elected clerk and Miner H. Corbin, treasurer. Voted to choose two deacons for the term of 4 years, and Miner H. Corbin and Melvin Booth were chosen.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

The Ladies' Society met Wednesday with Mrs. J. M. Perry.

Six new members were received into Grace church last Sunday.

The boys have been exercising the festive "ripper" to some extent, but no fatal accidents are reported.

About a dozen from this village went to Ludlow last Friday evening to hear the Fisk University Jubilee Singers, and were well paid for the trip, notwithstanding the severe cold. The male quartette was very fine.

Miss Aggie Bruce deserves great credit for her presence of mind, which probably saved a fire in the paper mill. A kerosene lamp fell off a table, spilling the oil and taking fire. Miss Bruce at once took her wrap, threw it on the fire and stamped it out.

Rev. J. R. Cushing of Wilbraham will give an illustrated lecture in Grace church next Wednesday evening, entitled "My trip to California." The lecture will be illustrated with a stereopticon, and will conclude with 140 views of European cities. The lecture is under the management of the Christian Endeavor Society, and others will probably follow.

The New Year's tree on the mountain last Monday night was voted a perfect success by all present. A fine musical entertainment was given with violin solos by J. Bennett, cornet solos by Cassius Seaver, and organ solos by the teacher, Miss Cora Pease. The school children of the district just "spread themselves" on declamations, dialogues, etc., and the only thing lacking was time, it being eleven o'clock when the refreshments came on, and it is whispered that two o'clock only saw the finish.

THORNDIKE.

Fred Samsom is putting up a new house on Gay avenue.

Daniel Lawlor is very ill at his brother's home with pneumonia.

The rental of pews at the Congregational church took place Tuesday evening.

Thomas Goff was surprised a few evenings ago by a large number of friends, who presented him with an easy chair.

The social given at Union hall Monday evening was attended by a goodly number who enjoyed a very pleasant time.

The Bohemian Glass Blowers did not appear here this week, having cancelled their date until some future time.

The work of putting in the steam apparatus at Union block was begun this week, and will be a big improvement to the building.

John Labiele, who has been in the employ of John Molloy as barber, has bought a shop in Worcester, and has gone there to live.

A large number from this village attended the "Kerry Gow" at Palmer Wednesday evening, and were well pleased with the play.

Noble's "Happy Thought" Comedy Co. closed their engagement at Union Hall Saturday evening, and was greeted with a good house.

The Emmet Social Club is rehearsing the drama "More Sinned against than Sinned; or, Ireland as it is to-day," which they will present to the public in about two weeks.

The employers and employes are now working hand in hand, which accounts for the flourishing condition of the mill and the village in general. May it always continue.

Isn't it about time something was done toward bringing to account those parties who break pickets from the fence on the bridge? It seems too bad to see property destroyed in this manner.

The local assembly of the Knights of Labor will hold a social dance at Lawton's Hall next Friday evening. They are to hold their second entertainment for members only next Tuesday evening.

Monroe Boise, who has been in the employ of the Thorndike Co., has resigned his position as overseer in the No. 1 spinning department. Fred Moore of No. 2 mill will have charge of both rooms.

The next number of the lecture course to be given by the Congregational society will probably consist of a musical concert, and some time in the near future they intend having Mrs. Livermore speak here again.

Edmond Coto, who died at Three Rivers Sunday night after on illness of some time, was buried Wednesday morning. The help in the weaving room of No. 1 mill, where he had worked, sent a beautiful pillow of flowers.

Felix Furkey, who has been married only a few days, met with rather a serious accident this week while taking cartridges from a loaded revolver. He was shot in the hand, the ball entering the palm of the hand and coming out between the first and second fingers. He is doing nicely, and the doctors think the accident will not prove serious.

Ellis & Son, woolen manufacturers, was taken into the firm January 1st, having bought a one-fourth interest in the entire manufacturing property. The company will continue to do business under the firm name of D. W. Ellis & Son.

C. W. Holmes, Jr., has generously agreed to pay for the care and lighting of the street lamp in front of the academy. If other residents of Main street who have street lights would have public spirit enough to keep them lighted these dark nights, the street would be quite passable. As it is now we have the worst streets of any place in Massachusetts.

The Young Men's Social Club elected these officers at the regular meeting last Tuesday evening: President, W. J. Randall; vice president, Ralph Clifford; secretary, A. L. Squier; treasurer, G. E. Knowlton; directors, C. W. King and A. T. Robinson. The club is arranging for a sociable, to be given to members of the club in Central Hall some time this month.

A very pleasant wedding took place at St. Patrick's church on Wednesday afternoon, Miss Bridget E. Leahey and Thomas C. O'Connor were united by Thomas Hanrahan, a schoolmate of Mr. O'Connor's. The reception was held at the residence of the bride's brother. The presents were very costly, numerous and useful. Mr. and Mrs. O'Connor will make their home in North Adams.

At the re-organization of the Methodist Sunday-school last Sunday afternoon these officers were elected: Superintendent, F. M. King; assistant superintendent, G. L. Keeney; secretary and treasurer, C. A. Bradway; librarian, Miss Nellie F. Squier; chorister, Daniel Watson; organist, Miss Etta Bodurtha. The secretary's report showed that during the past year there had been a total attendance of 4819, and an average of 93 each Sunday. The treasurer's report stated the amount received from collections each Sunday to be $82. There has been expended for expenses and benevolent purposes $120.31.

The Bohemian-American glass blowers, who have been occupying Central Hall for the past two weeks, will close their engagement here to-morrow night. During their stay prizes have been offered and awarded for the handsomest young lady, which was secured by Miss Josie Doyle, and for the homliest man, which went to H. J. Lariviere. Miss Molly Hanley captured the prize for the best lady dancer, and Nicholas Hughes for the best gentleman dancer. To-morrow night the baby vote will be counted, and the one having the largest number of votes will receive a handsome piece of glass work.

Mrs. W. N. Flynt, as has been her custom for several years, entertained her class of ladies New Year's Eve, a number of former members also being present, some coming from out of town, making a party of twenty-five. Flowers, cards and books were given as souvenirs. The always charming way of serving refreshments on small tables in the parlors was carried out. A cheery wood-fire blazed on the hearth, and the numerous lights shedding their soft rays through colored globes, the beautiful pictures, curious brick-a-brac and above all, Mrs. Flynt, with her social, kindly manner of attending to her guests, combined to make the evening one of rare enjoyment not soon to be forgotten by those present.

THE BUILDING RECORD OF 1887.

The building record of Monson for the past year, while not as large as some years, shows a healthy growth. Most of the houses built are of a cheaper class, built by working men for homes for themselves. At present all the industries of the town are running at their fullest capacity, and everything seems to indicate that the growth of this place the coming year will be even greater than for a number of years. Foundations are already laid for a number of houses to be erected the coming spring. There is a great scarcity of tenements, and no desirable ones can be found unoccupied. Some of our moneyed men have invested in tenement houses and found the rents pay a large interest, and it is to be hoped more will follow their example. Carpenters and painters have been busy and have had more work than they could do. More than the usual amount of repairing has been done. A new movement is on foot to form a water company, which proposes to introduce water throughout the village for fire and domestic purposes. A committee of five has been appointed to bring the matter before the Legislature, and to confer with the committee on water and drainage, and further the interests of the company in securing a charter. This will be a valuable acquisition to this thriving town. There is an excellent opening for manufactories, many good sites being available. The most expensive building that has been constructed the past year was the new academy building at a cost of $32,000, of which a cut and a full discription was given in the columns of this paper; next in size and importance is the three-story brick factory of J. H. Smith, in the northern part of the town, costing $10.000. Houses and additions and estimated cost have been as follows:

Julius Stewart, Prospect street, house and barn, $1800; John Maguire, Margaret street, house, $1600; Frank Maguire, cemetery street, house, $1000; C. and William Sullivan, Mill street, house, $1000; George L. Keeney, Pease avenue, house, $2000; Charles E. Stebbins, Pearl street, house and barn, $1800; Mrs. H. C. Hussey, high street, house and barn, $1200; W. N. Flynt Granite Co., at quarry, boarding house, $1200; Henry Barlow, Pease avenue, house, $1600; Peter Barry, Dillon street, house, $1200; John S. Murphy, Dillon street, house, $1200; Benj. Grout, Pease Hill, house, $1600; E. D. Cushman, Main street, house, $4000; E. M. and T. Reynolds, addition to house, $800; J. H. Smith, Palmer road, boarding house, $1600; Sylvanus Darling, Main street, addition, $500. The following barns have also been built: Town farm barn, $2000; W. N. Flynt, $1000; John Grady, $700; S. F. Cushman, coal house, $1000; D. W. Ellis & Son, addition to mill and coal hed, $500; Elliot Brown, $400; Needham Thompson, $500; Theodore Reynolds, $400; Mark Noble, $500; Patrick Dalton, $400; Marvin Bacon, $400; S. F. Cushman, addition to barn, $500; L. G. Cushman, carriage house and office, $500; A. A. Gage, $600; Arba Squier, $400; W. N. Flynt Granite Co., engine house and sheds. $500.

WARE AND VICINITY.

The Ware Savings Bank has declared a 2¼ per cent semi-annual dividend.

The local branch of the Irish National League has secured the services of Thomas Gratton Esmonde, the nationalist, to give the address at a grand rally to be held at the town hall February 11.

David Oakes, proprietor of the West Warren stage line, was thrown to the ground by his horse becoming frightened, and has been laid up for a few days. Elijah Hathaway has been driving for him.

The oyster supper which was given in the vestry at Ware Centre by the Church Aid Society was well attended and enjoyed by all present. There was quite a party present from Greenwich. The society cleared about $20.

William Bradley, who made the brutal assault on Lucas Gibbs last summer, handling him so severely that it is doubtful if he ever recovers, has been sentenced to two years in the house of correction. Strong drink and an ugly disposition did it.

J. W. Lawton Post, G. A. R., has been fortunate in securing the services of Rev. E. A. Horton of Boston to deliver the address next Memorial Day. Mr. Horton was department chaplain, and is spoken of as being one of the finest speakers that it is possible to obtain.

The Mount Herman Mission Band of the East Congregational Sunday-school is to give a temperance entertainment in the chapel next Tuesday evening, to consist of dialogues, recitations and music. Barr's ice cream will be served before and after the entertainment.

A town meeting has been called to be held January 12, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, to see if the town will accept Clifford avenue, Clinton street, so called, a street leading from North street to Aspen, and an extension of Aspen street, all of which have been laid out by the road commissioners.

The spread of the scarlet fever seems to have been stopped short by the prompt, vigilant action of the board of health. Last year, with a much more mild beginning, there was a long run of this dangerous disease. William Medcalf of the board of health, deserves great credit for enforcing the orders that no one must enter or leave the infected premises.

Austin Pierce, one of the old inhabitants of Ware Center, died at his home very suddenly Sunday morning. He was 79 years old, had been down to the village the day before, seemed to feel as well as usual that morning, and had been up some little time before he had any trouble. He was helped to his bed, where he staid a short time, when he wished to be moved near the fire, which was done, and he died there in a short time. A wife and several children survive him.

Thomas Moriarty, whose case was watched so closely during his trial last week for attempted arson, was acquitted. There seems to have been some queer doings brought to light at the trial, but the question asked by ex-Governor Robinson, who was Moriarty's counsel: Why the man supposed to be Moriarty was not arrested on the spot? seems to lack a reasonable answer. McMamara, the detective, had all the arranging of those who were to watch for the victim, and placed them where it would be almost impossible to identify a man who had taken any pains to disguise himself, and where it would be difficult for them to get their hands on the culprit if they wished to. The authorities are severely criticised by some for furnishing liquor to the detective, to be given to Moriarty. It is a hard case for a man of his means to be obliged to spend his time and money in defence, if innocent. Who pays the state or Moriarty for being found in the bad company of the so-called detective?

THE SOCIAL SCIENCE CLUB.

At the annual meeting of the Social Science Club, Monday afternoon, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Miss Myra Hall; vice president, Miss Affa Miuer; secretary, Miss Sandford; treasurer, Miss Emma Crowell; directors, Miss Ellen Bond, Mrs. E. H. Baker, Mrs. F. D. Gilmore, Mrs. J. H. Grenville Gilbert and Miss Julia M. Stevens. The directors, in reviewing the work of the club for the past year, call attention to some results which are worthy of notice. The sewing school was a success both in attendance and in the great interest and marked progress shown by their children in their work. The charitable society, by judicious gifts of garments, donated and re-made by the ladies of the club, aided many destitute families. The night school, for which the club petitioned, certainly speaks for itself and needs no comment. That the day nursery successfully meets a well defined need and grows in favor is apparent from the record of attendance, of which the average is from five to six children daily, being as large as that of the Springfield day nursery. The number of applicants has steadily increased from the beginning, and they include children of every nationality and are principally the children of widows. The institution is doing a good work and the club should receive liberal responses whenever it calls for substantial aid and encouragement for this and other branches of its work. The ladies are to be congratulated upon the success of their labors, and it is to be hoped that they will continue to bring forward to public notice other of those many problems of economical and wholesome living and of social improvement which, in a manufacturing village like Ware, force themselves in such a marked degree upon the notice of every student of social science, and of every truly charitable person.

JOTTINGS FROM THE HUB.

From our Special Correspondent.

BOSTON, JAN. 4bt, 1888.

The Legislature has begun its round again, and hardly ever did its wheels start off with so little incident. Everything has been transacted according to programme. The old officers of last year have been elected without any opposition, and the new body is nearly ready for the reception of business. Thursday is inauguration day, and it has been expected that the presiding officers would have the committees ready to announce by Friday, but it is now said that the scramble for places on committees is so great that they cannot be given to the public before Monday. Speaker Noyes made a good point in his opening speech this afternoon. In view of the fact that some of the members have asked to be put on as many as three of the most important committees, it is pertinent for the speaker to say that it is not right for a man to hold more than one important committee place. "There is a law, higher than any law of the Legislature," said the speaker, "that no man can be in more than one place at one time. If he is on two committees, he must neglect one or the other of them to the delay of legislation and to the detriment of the work." In accord with this remark it is said that a new departure will be made this year in the way of making up the committees, and that no man will get more than one important place. This is a real step toward a shorter session. The new Senate is a body which gives one more confidence than the upper branch of last year, and it really seems as if the Senate would be this year a more important part of the Legislature than it has been for the past two years. The House probably averages to be older than that of last year, for that was a younger body than we usually see here. But few gray heads were to be seen then, but now there is a fair sprinkling of them, as would be expected in a deliberative body like this. A large proportion of the House consists of new men, wholly green to the halls of legislation. Only 92 of last year's members have been returned, and the total of men who have had no experience whatever is more than half of the whole number. What can we do to have short sessions when our people keep sending up here such a lot of green men? Of course the men are good enough as an average, but any man with experience is worth more than the same man without experience. This is one of the items of cost whish we have to pay for our system of popular government, but we have to give a chance for the indulgence of the ambitions of the local politicians, regardless of the public. But that is a small price to pay for the good that we get in way of government, and I suppose that we ought not to complain too much of the sovereign people, since they have the bills to pay.

The developments regarding the campaign grow more interesting, and it seems more and more as if the tariff would overshadow all other issues. Since I wrote last week has occurred the great meeting under the auspices of the Massachusetts Tariff Reform League in the Hotel Brunswick. It was a notable occasion, whether one sympathizes with its object or not, for there were gathered men who in the recent past were leaders in the Republican party, and who to-day have no more sympathy than they did then with what most excites the abhorrence of a Republican toward a Democrat. Those men are full in earnest in their desire that the tariff be reformed, and it is evident that the issue is one which must be met this time without shirking. On the part of the Republicans I also find a readiness to take up the gauntlet which President Cleveland has thrown down, and the battle seems to be already joined. It was surprising to see the enthusiasm of the company the other evening for the president, and the ringing applause for his name. But on the part of the leading Republicans here I find an equal enthusiasm for Blaine, and there is no doubt that his name will command an equally strong demonstration in a company of protectionists. So that is to be the line of battle, as it now appears, and both sides are apparently ready for the fray.

The meeting of the Tariff Reform League the other evening is only the opening gun on that side, and from what is said about the purposes of the Home Market Club on the other side, it is apparent that both parties are beginning to set the battle in order. The tariff reformers will have a dinner with speaking once a month or oftener, according as the circumstances seem to them to demand. They will try to have present one at least of the prominent men on their side from abroad. For their next meeting they are hoping to get either ex-Gov. Hoadly of Ohio or ex-Gov. Chamberlain of South Carolina. They will also have permanent headquarters, and a secretary who will give his whole time to the work. Tariff reform literature will be sent out, and all done that can be in that line to make converts. It is already said now that on the tariff reform issue Massachusetts would go Democratic. This is based on the sympathy for such ideas which is expressed by Republicans, and the declarations of some Blaine men of 1884 that on that issue they will be Cleveland men in 1888. As Cleveland, however, stands practically where President Arthur did several years ago, it would seem as if the Republicans were allowing the Democrats to steal their thunder, unless they mean to abandon their position of 1884 and go into the campaign on the ground that the tariff should be kept up to its present high point. If they do that they will have hard lines before them to carry the country for president.

The experience of the American Board since the recent meeting at Springfield has been noteworthy. It was predicted by some and feared by others that the contributions would fall in consequence of the trouble over the mangement of the prudential committee. But the four months of the new financial year which closes to-day reveals a state of affairs which is decidedly satisfactory to the officers of the board. The legacies have increased over the legacies of the same time of last year some $20,000, and the donations have increased to about the same sum. A part of the latter increase is due to sums which were intended to go with last year's sum, but did not get here before September 1. But the solid gain, apart from that source, has been over $7000. This is of course highly gratifying, and it is all the more so to the officers of the Board, because it shows them that those with whom they do not agree are not disposed to withhold their usual gifts from the heathen in consequence of a difference about methods. One of the officers said to me that he hoped for an era of peace and solid work, now that the two sides seem to show such a friendly spirit toward one another.

Col. Fred D. Grant and Jas. P. Foster, the president of the new league of Republican clubs, will be entertained by the Middlesex Club here on January 21. The meeting will be the occasion of stirring up the Republican spirit of organization for the campaign. It will try to rouse the young men.

LANDON.

See to it that Laxador, the "golden" remedy for all stomachic disorders is always in the house. Sold by all druggists for 25 cents a package.

There is nothing in the world more beautiful than a fine healthy baby. Keep it so by using Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup. Price 25 cents a bottle.

VICK'S FLORAL GUIDE.

A silver lining to every cloud! With the short dull days of winter come the cheery holidays and Vick's beautiful annual, and lo! spring already appears not far distant. We can almost see the greening grass and the blooming flowers. In the way of catalogues, Vick's Floral Guide is unequaled in artistic appearance, and the edition of each year that appears simply perfect, is surpassed in the next. New and beautiful engravings, and three colored plates of flowers, vegetables and grain, are features for the issue for 1888. Its lavender tinted cover, with original designs of most pleasing effects, will insure it a prominent place in the household and library. It is in itself a treatise on horticulture, and is adapted to the wants of all who are interested in the garden or house plants. It describes the rarest flowers and choicest vegetables. If you want to know anything about the garden, see Vick's Floral Guide, price only 10 cents, including a certificate for 10 cents worth of seeds. Published by James Vick, Seedsman, Rochester, N. Y.

As a home remedy for throat and lung diseases, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is invaluable. Druggists now have Ayer's Almanac.

Pond's Extract, for every pain or soreness. A history without a parallel; with but little advertising its sale has extended all over the country. Try it! For forty years it has stood all the tests.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla stops the nauseous discharge of catarrh, and cures the complaint.

Forbes & Wallace are now offering jackets and wraps for $3 each, which have lately been sold from $4 to $8 each. A rare chance this.

Courtships average three tons of coal each, and scores of bad coughs and colds; but then every prudent gallant is provided with a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, which costs only 25 cents.

All our city fathers say: "use Salvation Oil, the greatest cure on earth for pain." Price 25 cents.

A GENEROUS FIRM.

We are informed that the proprietors, Messrs. A. P. Ordway & Co., recently sent three dozen of their reliable medicine, Sulphur Bitters, to the Catholic Home for the Aged, which is highly appreciated by the directors and inmates. "As ye sow, so shall ye reap."—[Editor Catholic Union. 2w41

I have not used all of one bottle yet. I suffered from catarrh for twelve years, experiencing the nauseating dropping in the throat peculiar to that disease, and nose bleed almost daily. I tried various remedies without benefit until last April, when I saw Ely's Cream Balm advertised in the Boston Budget. I procured a bottle, and since the first days' use have had no more bleeding—the soreness is entirely gone.—D. G. Davidson, with the Boston Budget, formerly with Boston Journal. 2w40

I give honor to whom it is due. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy cured me of Bright's disease and gravel. I have recommended it to scores of people with like success, and know it will cure all who try it.—Mrs. E. P. Mizner, Burg Hill, O. Send 2c. stamp to Dr. Kennedy, Rondout, N. ### Some Things Learned by Experience.

That a tablespoonful of salt thrown on a coal fire that is low, will cause it to burn up quickly. That you can clean oil cloth with milk and water; while soap and brush will ruin it. That the skin of a boiled egg is the best remedy you can apply to a boil. That you can't cure Rheumatism or Neuralgia without taking Menard's Rheumatic Bullets. That you can buy them of LeGro & Lynde for $1.00 per bottle. eow7

THE VERDICT UNANIMOUS.

W. D. Sult, Druggist, Bippus, Ind., testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of Rheumatism of 10 years' standing." Abraham Hare, druggist, Bellville, Ohio, affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years' experience, is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys or Blood. Only a half dollar a bottle at LeGro & Lynde's Drug Store. 2

A WOMAN'S DISCOVERY.

"Another wonderful discovery has been made, and that too by a lady in this county. Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly, and could not sleep. She bought of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night and with one bottle has been miraculously cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus write W. C. Hamrich & Co., of Shelby, N. C.—Get a free trial bottle at LeGro & Lynde's Drug Store.

WHAT AM I TO DO?

The symptoms of Biliousness are unhappily too well known. They differ in different individuals to some extent. A bilious man is seldom a breakfast eater. To frequently, alas, he has an excellent appetite for liquids but none for solids of a morning. His tongue will hardly bear inspection at any time; if it is not white and furred, it is rough, at all events.

The digestive system is wholly out of order and Diarrhoæ or Constipation may be a symptom or they may alternate. There are often Hemorrhoids or even loss of blood. There may be giddiness and often headache and acidity or flatulence and tenderness in the pit of the stomach. To correct all this if not effect a cure try Green's August Flower, it costs but a trifle and thousands attest its efficacy.

AUCTION SALE.

The J. A. Elliot Farm in Brimfield, containing A THOUSAND SLEEPERS, two thousand cords of wood and a lot of lumber is to be sold at auction on Saturday, January 21st, 1888, at 10 or 11 o'clock, on the premises. The sleepers, wood and lumber will probably be sold first separate from the farm, and the farm afterwards, giving you the privilege of buying the timber with the farm or without it. Please come and look it over before the sale. Any information and full description of the farm and a bill of the same can be had by writing to

J. A. ELLIOT,

1w41ks Brimfield, Mass.

8 PER CENT. FIRST MORTGAGES IN KANSAS.

During the next 90 days we shall give our customers 8% on any money they may send us for investments we have for sale. We have on hand First Mortgages and applications for money on first mortgage loans, mostly upon 160 acre farms, amounts ranging from $250 to $500. We have also mortgages in amounts $1000 to $20,000 at 7% which we offer. How much money can you furnish us for these loans? They are A1 security. The stringency in the money market enables us to cut down amounts applied for in each case to an amount that is safe beyond a doubt. Now is the time to get a nice line of small gilt-edge loans. Write for our new Investor's Guide. Remit with advice to JOHN D. KNOX & CO., Investment Bankers and Loan Agents, Topeka, Kas. Boston Office: Room 24, No. 36 Bromfield street. 4w41

TIMBER, TIE & WOOD LOT FOR SALE

Said lot known as the "Ward Lot," is situated in the town of Palmer, within ⅓ of a mile of the Blanchardville and Tenneyville Tie stations on the B. & A. R. R. Contains over 80 acres, ⅓ has been growing over 80 years and the balance over 50 years. The tract is bounded 220 rods on the highway toward which it slopes, and the highway slopes toward the R. R., so that from every half acre full loads can be drawn by horses to the R. R., or to Palmer depot or Thorndike village. All things considered it is the most desirable wood lot in the county. Also another tract of about 7 acres, situated northeasterly from the above. For further particulars inquire of Dr. E. B. LYON, Exr., New Britain, Ct., or GEORGE W. RANDALL, Palmer, Mass. 2w41

Pharisee and Sadducee.

To church the two together went,
Both doubtless on devotion bent,
The parson preached with fluent ease
On Pharisees and Sadducees;
And as they homeward slowly walked,
The lovers on the sermon talked;
And he—he deeply loved the maid—
In soft and tender accents said,
"Darling, do you not think that we Are Pharisee and Sadducee?"
She flashed on him her bright black eyes,
In one swift look of vexed surprise,
And then he hastened to aver
He was her constant worshipper,
"But, Mary, I insist," said he,
"That you are very fair, I see;
I know you don't care much for me,
And that's what makes me sad, you see."
—Boston Post.

We praised the blush on Beauty's cheek,
Last eve with words that tell;
That blush this morn, O wondrous freak,
Is here on our lapel! —Puck.

AMONG THE PARAGRAPHERS.

A terrible example—the first one in the arithmetic that does not have an answer appended.—Lowell Citizen.

It may be that "a woman's work is never done," but many a man's work is always dun.—Boston Post.

She—"John, what is a coastwise steamer!" He—"One that knows how to keep off the rocks, darling."—Puck.

Apropos of the boom in metals it occurs to us to inquire if "hot coppers" can be made from chilly bars.—Lowell Citizen.

Irate Student—"Don't you ever sweep under the bed, I'd like to know?" Calm chambermaid—"I always do; I prefer it to a dustpan."—Harvard Lampoon.

The rich man rides to his business, when he might walk, because he can get there quicker. He will also get to his grave quicker.—New Orleans Picayune.

A small Alleghany boy recently described a cross-eyed individual as a "man with bandy-legged eyes."—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"Holy smoke!" exclaimed a Duluth deacon when his wife told him the Pilgrim church was on fire.—Duluth Paragrapher.

Caller to little Bobby.—"Bobby, what makes your eyes so bright?" Bobby (after a little thought).—"I des it's tause I haint had 'em in very long.—Texas Siftings.

Aunty—Here is an apple, Johnny; share it with your sister in a Christian spirit. Johnnie—How am I to do that, auntie?

Auntie—Offer her the largest piece. Johnny (handing the apple to his sister)—There sissy, you share like a Christian.—Life.

Teacher to naughty boy—Now, sir, hold out your hand.

Naughty boy—Look out, ma'am, there's a mouse behind you!

(Teacher screams violently and makes a dash for the girls' entry. School adjourns at boys' entry.)—Burlington Free Press.

"Here," said the salesman, waving his hand, "is a full line of our celebrated spring beds."

"Yes," replied Mrs. Malaprop; "they were very nice for the warm weather, but I want to see some of your autumn beds."—Judge.

Jones (meeting Smith, with whom he was out the night before)—"Ha, my boy! Got home all right?"

Smith (gloomily)—"Yes, but my wife wouldn't speak to me."

Jones (enviously)—"Lucky fellow, mine did."—Boston Courier.

Miss Waldo (of Boston, discussing literary matters)—Have you read "Homo Sum," Mr. Wabash (of Chicago, who is keeping up his end of the conversation with difficulty)—Well—er—yes, Miss Waldo, I have read Homo some, but not a great deal.—New York Sun.

"Ma," said a little Scranton student of natural history yesterday, "do frogs go to Ireland in the winter time, when everything is froze up?" No my dear; why do you ask such a question?" "Because teachers say they always hibernate in winter," was the reply of the observing young hopeful.—Scranton Truth.

A lady teacher of music in Ontario county inserted her professional card in one of the county newspapers. It was seen by an old lover in Chicago, who at once hunted her up, explained his absence of a quarter of a century, and married her. It pays to advertise.—Elmira Advertiser.

Inhaling Brimstone.—"Blaisely, why don't you do something for your cold? The fumes of sulphur inhaled from a hot shovel will cure it instantly."

"Bascomb, I'm not so silly as all that. I'll die before I'll inhale burning brimstone."

"Blaisely, I believe that you will."—Philadelphia Call.

"Darringer, I hear that some robbers broke into your house last night. What did they steal?"

"Nothing, Bromley. They didn't get farther than the vestibule. My son came home at midnight and they ran. Well, yes, they did steal several things."

"What?"

"The house dog, a spring gun, and the burglar alarm."—Harper's Bazar.

A gentleman once saw a boy peeling the bark from one of his choice trees with a hatchet. The gentleman tried to catch the boy, but the latter was too quick for him, so the former changed his tactics. "Come here, my little son," he said, in a soft, flute-like voice, with counterfeited friendliness; "come here to me a minute. I want to tell you something." "Not yet," replied the recipient, "little boys like me don't need to know everything."—Troy Times.

GOOD ENOUGH FOR THE PARSON.—Mr. Blobbs—"Mariah, hadn't I better take that hen to market?"

Mariah—"She's about 40 years old, Zeke, an' I'm afraid she'll spoil our trade. Better think up some other way of getting rid of her."

"I might give her to the editor in payment of our subscription."

"I paid that yesterday in last year's turnips."

"Well, we'll save her for the next donation party."—Omaha World.

THE BAD EFFECTS OF WORRY.

A person who constantly frets and worries is never in good health. In some cases a disposition to worry is the result of disease, and is a symptom of disordered brain and nerves or the result of some physical disability or reflex irritation. In other cases it may be the result of an hereditary tendency, or of vicious habits formed in early life; in either case it is certain to produce a diseased state of the body. So we may say with truth that a person who always frets and worries is a diseased person. People fall into the habit of worrying about those little mishaps that of necessity come to us in the life of every one, and the habit once formed is a difficult one to overcome. Worry, about all things, consumes vitality, and disarranges the harmonious workings of the functions. It leads to loss of appetite, to sleepless nights, irritable nerves, to impaired nutrition. It robs the disposition of attractive qualities, it lessens the mental vigor, and not infrequently is a factor in the production of nervous disorder. Sensitive people, those who are easily wounded or discouraged, are most apt to worry when affairs go wrong, and yet they are just the ones whom worry will harm. Those however, who are not fretted and depressed by the small mishaps and adversities of life, are the better for encouraging them, for they are a part of the necessary and kindly discipline of experience that helps us to build up character, and strengthens and consolidates its healthy fibre.

EXPLAINED.

Man (to colored washerwoman)—"Look here Aunt Millie, I gave you ten white shirts, but you have only bought back eight."

Aunt Millie—"Dat so, honey? W'y, how come dat?"

Man—"You are the one to give the explanation."

Aunt Millie—"Yas, an' it's plain ernuff, too, sah. I washed the shirts dis week in rain water."

Man—"But why should the rain water cause two shirts to be missing?"

Aunt Millie—"W'y, de shirts shrunk, dat's why. Ain't you got gogerfy an' rifemtic an' edycation ernuff ter know dat de shirts shrink awful w'en yer washes 'em in rain water? Since I come to think erbout it I's thankful dat da didn't shrink wus'n dat. Got yer uder shirts done up?"

Man—"You need'nt take them this week. This shrinking process might soon reduce me to a shirtless condition."

Aunt Millie—"Oh. It rests wid yerse'f, sah, but ez fur me I'se tired o' washin' fur folks dat is ignunt. My 'vice ter you is ter study an' edykate erwhile 'fo' trying ter carry on de fight wid dis yer worl. I couldn't he'p de shirts shrinkin'. Good day, sah."—Arkansaw Traveler.

Some funny stories are told of Uncle Billy Holmes, long since gone to his reward, who was for many years court crier at Anderson, S. C. He was told to call "Arabella Hanks." Being a little deaf he did not catch the name, and putting his hand to his ear, asked, "Who?" He was told in a louder tone, "Arabella Hanks." Going to the door he cried, "Yeller Belly Shanks!—Yeller Belly Shanks!—Yeller Belly Shanks!—don't answer." On another occasion the discordant notes of a jackass's bray annoyed the judge, and he ordered the crier to tell the owner to take that jackass out of town. Stepping to the door, Uncle Billy cried mechanically in his usual manner: "Take that jackass out of town!—Take that jackass out of town!—take that jackass out of town!—don't answer!" The merriment which ensued caused much more disturbance than the jackass did.

DANGEROUS LITERATUE.—Omaha Man—"So you are a Morman wife, eh! Keft a prisoner, I suppose?"

Morman Wife—"Oh, no, you see no one is watching me now."

"Are you not under lock and key at home!"

"No, indeed. I go where I please and when I please."

"Then why on earth don't you run away?"

"I did think of it once, but my husband brought me some Gentile newspapers and after I read them I changed my mind."

"Eh? What did you find in the newspapers?"

"Not much of anything except reports of divorces, cruelty, neglect and wife-beatings."

Backwoods School Teacher (to boy)—"How far have you gone?" Boy—"Ain't never been very far; 'bout ten miles from home I reckon." Teacher—"I mean how far have you advanced in your book?" Boy—"Over ter this here picture." Teacher—"Why, that's where the first lesson begins. Yon can't spell, can you?" Boy—"Can spell dog an' dam, but ain't no great shakes on bird an' hossfly." Teacher—"You little rascal, you must not talk that way, Did your father ever hear you talk that way!" Boy—"Nome." Teacher—"Then I'm glad that there's some one whom you respect." Boy—"No use'n talk'n that way be fo' bad, fur he's deef. Ef er hoss wus ter fling dad he couldn't hear hisse'f hit the ground."—Arkansaw Traveler.

HIS MOUSTACHE.—"No, Mamie," said the fair-haired girl, with an air of tender melancholy, "I shall never love him again. It is all over."

"How can you say so, Gertie? He is young, rich, loves you devotedly and has such a beautiful, long, silken, heavy moustache—"

"His moustache? Oh, don't speak of it, I implore you! I saw him once, Mamie, just after he had taken a drink of buttermilk!"

And the two friends shuddered and sat close together, looking silently into the fire, while their shadows danced fitfully on the wall and the wind moaned dismally through the ghostly trees on the outside.—Chicago Tribune.

As a glittering example for conciseness the following comes from the walls of a deserted shanty in the heart of Dakota: "Fore miles frum a nabur; sexteen miles frum a post office: twenty-five miles frum a ralerode; a hundred and aety frum timber; haf a mile frum water; God bless our home. We're gone east to git a fresh start."

I Was Astonished.

Children often suffer greatly from impure blood until a good medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla, is taken to expel impurities and give vitality.

READ THIS:

"I think it my duty to tell how much good Hood's Sarsaparilla did my little girl. She was from birth puny, pale and sickly, and did not gain strength as she grew older. Even when three years of age she could not stand alone. She ate hardly anything, and seemed to be weak constitutionally; but was doubtless kept back by impure blood, which caused her much discomfort and suffering. She had scald head terribly, her head being covered with one sore. I decided to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and I was astonished at the effect the first bottle had on her. Her appetite began to pick up, and soon we could hardly give her enough to eat. She also gained strength, could stand alone, and the sore on her head began to grow less. We soon healed that up with Hood's Olive ointment, and when she had taken three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla she could run about the house as smart as any child. She has been bright and hearty ever since. I write this out of pure gratitude to Hood's Sarsaparilla." E.T. Alexander, 28 Cleaves street, Portland, Me.

The Only Remedy for Contagious Blood Poison.

Mr. D. B. Adams of Union, South Carolina, writes: "I was afflicted with a terrible case of blood poison for about thirteen months. I was treated by the best physicians, and used various remedies, but received no substantial relief. I finally tried the Swift Specific, and about four bottles cured me sound and well."

Col. R. H. Kieser, editor and proprietor of the Opelika, Ala., Times, under date of August 3, 1887, writes: "When a young man, through indiscretion, I contracted a terrible disease which has stuck to me for years. Some five or six years since I was troubled with pains, so as to make it difficult for me to walk. Having advertised the S. S. S. in my paper for several years, I concluded I would try it to see if there was any efficacy in the medicine. I commenced using it according to directions and used half a dozen bottles. I was once at a way station, and getting left, I walked the seven miles and have never felt any return of the old malady. After experiencing the good effects I must say I am satisfied with the result. I am sixty-eight years of age and I feel now like a young man and can go to the case when necessary and set up from six to eight thousand ems without any inconvenience. I send you this without solicitation."

Mr. F. Woehl, 211 North Avenue, Chicago, under date of June 12, 1887, writes: "I deem it my duty to thank you for the cure I received from your excellent medicine. I contracted a very severe case of blood poisoning about two years ago. Hearing of your medicine I went to a drug store, the proprietor of which persuaded me to buy a preparation of his own, which he said was a sure cure. I used six bottles of his stuff and grew worse all the time. At last I got disgusted and despaired of a cure. I met a friend who told me that your medicine cured him. I went to the same druggist and demanded your medicine. He reluctantly sold me twelve bottles, and I am now perfectly cured. I write this for the benefit of sufferers, to prevent their being deceived by false representations. I thank you again for the benefit derived from your medicine."

Dr. J. N. Cheney, a prominent physician, residing in Ellaville, Schley county, Georgia, in a letter recounting the infallible success he has in curing contagious blood poisoning cases in his extensive practice, writes: "Those who know the almost inevitable, permanently dangerous effects of mercury will welcome your discovery of S. S. S. as a boon to humanity. The medical profession, is coming slowly, and in some cases secretly, to the use of S. S. S. in cases of blood disorder. Of course a medicine that cures poisoning in its worst form must purify the blood of ever disorder."

A Startling Statement!

Prof. Joseph Rodes Buchanan

In his able Journal of Man, calls attention to the "tendency of modern civilization toward insanity," and asserts "that it is increasing throughout Christendom, and far more where the influences of modern civilization are most fully realized." This is a significent and ominous thought. This cause is apparent We are living at railroad speed. Men are crowding ten days' work into one, and turning night into day. The flame of the mind and fire of nerve force are being burned night and day, with no halt for recuperation, and the result is a collapse of the nervous system, known as nervous prostration, or a giving away of the mind known as insanity.

There never was a time when there was such a crying need for a thoroughly scientific combination, consisting of the finest nerve and brain food that earth produces, that will readily restore prostration of the nervous system, give strength to the brain, overcome insomnia, excitability, loss of memory, failing vitality, and general debility.

The great need has brought forth the great specific remedy, which is the fruit of science, experience and skill.

A Gem For Every Month.

JANUARY.

By her who in this month is born
No gems save garnets should be worn;
They will insure her constancy,
True friendship and fidelity.

FEBRUARY.

The February born will find
Sincerity and peace of mind,
Freedom from passion and from care,
If they the amethist will wear.

MARCH.

Who on this world of ours their eyes
In March first open shall be wise;
In days of peril firm and brave,
And wear a bloodstone to their grave.

APRIL.

She who from April dates her years
Diamonds should wear, lest bitter tears
For vain repentance flow; this stone
Emblem of innocence is known.

MAY.

Who first beholds the light of day
In spring's sweet flowery month of May,
And wears an emerald all her life,
Shall be a loved and happy wife.

JUNE.

Who comes with summer to this earth,
And owes to June her day of birth,
With ring of agate on her hand,
Can health, wealth and long life command.

JULY.

The glowing ruby should adorn
Those who in warm July are born;
Then will they be exempt and free
From love's doubts and anxiety.

AUGUST.

Wear a sardonyx, or for thee
No conjugal felicity;
The August born, without this stone,
'Tis said, must live unloved and lone.

SEPTEMBER.

A maiden born when autumn leaves
Are rusting in September's breeze,
A sapphire on her brow should bind—
'Twill cure diseases of the mind.

OCTOBER.

October's child is born for woe,
And life's vicissitudes must know;
But lay an opal on her breast,
And hope will lull those words to rest.

NOVEMBER.

Who first comes to this world below
With drear November's fog and snow,
Should prize the topaz's amber hue—
Emblem of friends and lovers true.

DECEMBER.

If cold December gave you birth—
The month of snow and ice and mirth—
Place on your hand a torquoise blue;
Success will bless you whate'er you do.

ROMANCE OF A ROSEBUSH.

"It is all fol-de-rol," said Miss Henrietta Henshaw, sitting bolt upright in her bamboo rocker. "It is all fol-de-rol, I say, for people to think that they must make up jimcracks that nobody wants and scatter them about among their friends."

"But it is for a birthday present, Aunt."

"Well, what of that? Do you suppose because my birthday happens to be coming that I want any one to give me an ungainly pin-cushion with two H's worked in the centre?"

"What if there should be three H's?" said Lottie, slyly, remembering old Peter Hammond's clumsy attentions, with, as he admitted, "an eye to a snug home."

"What's that you say?" snapped Miss Hetty.

Lottie did not venture a repetition, but sat demurely, considering what, under the stress of circumstances, she should do. Lottie was Miss Henrietta's orphan niece, and had been a member of her household for nearly a year. She had learned dearly to love the prim old lady, though that love was not unmixed with fear. Her wants had all been kindly anticipated and generously supplied; but now she had come to her aunt with a request for a few shillings to spend on trifles, of which Miss Hetta did not approve, and had been denied.

Oh, dear, what should she do! Harry had always brought her some tasteful gift, and she did so want to make him a hat band for his new Derby. She had dreamed that she could not, and had put it off till the last moment.

The great drops welled up suddenly to her eyes. If Miss Hetty saw any symptoms of heartache, she had had heartaches herself, and they had never killed her yet. But Lottie did not mean to droop. Auntie was usually kind and was albeit her only relative—except Harry. Well, Harry was not a relative exactly—and, oh, dear, if she could only have a hat band!

She forced back the rebellious tears, and went singing about the house like the blithe girl she was.

The birthday morning arrived, and the problem of Harry's present was still unsolved. "If I could just give him something" she sighed, looking wistfully down the long street. "Oh," she said, suddenly clasping her hands, "I will, I will! What a happy thought. And she fairly jumped into her cloak and hat and went skipping down the street.

Dr. Beach, an eccentric bachelor, lived in the rather lonely house at the extreme end of the street. Lottie was never sick herself, and Aunt Hetta never employed Dr. Beach for her occasional ailments; yet the bright-hearted girl had contrived to make the acquaintance of the uncouth doctor, who liked her, and called her "Little Miss."

"What if the dear old man was a little gruff? He was good;" and into his office Lottie now went, assured of a warm welcome. Absorbed in her own interest and intent on her errand she approached the bay-window where stood the grand monthly rosebush, which had been the envy and wonder of the admiring public since almost before Lottie was born.

"Oh, Doctor," she said, "I came to ask if you would be so kind as to give me three or four of those lovely buds?"

"What for?" growled the doctor savagely.

"You see," she began, "I wanted to make something pretty for a birthday gift for—for a friend, but I could not"—choking a little—"and I had almost given up hope of anything, when this morning, as I glanced down the road, your beautiful roses seemed to say, 'come after us,' so here I am. Flowers are always nice to give, you know, and I had none."

"Humph! Why couldn't you make what you wanted to?"

"Aunt Hetta would not let me."

"Humph! Is not Henrietta Henshaw good to you!" he demanded, bristling up.

"Oh, yes, as kind as can be. But she does not believe in birthday gifts, she says."

"Hadn't you any money yourself?"

"No."

"She might give you a cent or two from time to time; then you would have a fund to draw from."

"Oh, she does; I had five dollars Monday that I had not needed to use. But I saw Jennie and Tommie Elroy, with their little bare toes peeping out of their old shoes, and—"

"So you squandered your money to clothe the feet of those little vagabonds?" growled the doctor, wondering why he hadn't seen the bare toes.

"Yes, I got shoes and the nicest red stockings. Jennie cried and cried when she hugged me because she was so glad," related Lottie, her quick tears starting.

Well, little miss, if you had known you could not get any more money for your flummery, would you have spent all you had on the little beggars?"

I don't know; I hope so; I'm sorry you asked me. I really think I should. But I did want the other so dreadfully that I might have saved out a little."

"You could have got brown stockings."

"So I could. But I guess I'm glad I did not; the red ones are so much prettier, and the poor like pretty ones as well as the rich."

The doctor looked ponderingly on the little miss. She was a pretty creature, and as innocent as she was pretty. Though she was seventeen, her looks and appearance would hardly have claimed for her fifteen well rounded years.

"It is a bridal rose," said Lottie, keeping her errand in mind, as she looked admiringly into the great bush, whose beautiful blossoms rivalled the whiteness of the snow.

"Humph! I suppose so. You would not think now that it had spoiled a wedding. But it did; just fifteen years ago this day."

Lottie looked in alarm at the white, treacherous thing.

"You would not think, either, that a gruff old fellow like me could ever have got a woman to say she would have him!"

"Oh! Yes, I would," said Lottie; "I think you are the nicest man in the world—except—"

"Except whom?"

"I was going to say—Harry."

"Exceedingly fine compliments you are paying me. You expect some of my choicest flowers for that tid-bit of flattery."

Lottie did not reply, but looked in such consternation from the rosebush to himself that the doctor could not but smile.

"You would like to hear the story? Well, it never came from my lips before, little miss, but I will give it to you. You see I had been a medical student under old Dr. West, and when he died I got my diploma and stuck my shingle out here. Soon after that I got acquainted with as trim a girl as you often see, and after a while, somehow or other, we became engaged. I was young and had my way to make, and we resolved to wait two years before settling down. Over back of the hill yonder there lived a girl named Nancy Brown, a pretty, pale creature, who seemed just ready to go to the angels. I was called to attend her, and I wanted to do my best. I knew they could never pay me a cent, and perhaps for that very reason I went a little oftener than I needed. Nancy had one precious thing—her rosebush; small then, but giving promise of great things. It did seem as if everybody begrudged it of her, for half the town, in one way or another, sought to make it worth her while to give it up.

"Perhaps the motives were good. But, though Nancy was in comparative poverty, no gold was precious enough to buy her one treasure. Well, her fragility after all proved not to be incipient consumption after all, and time went on until within 24 hours of my wedding day, and that morning I was in my office here on the watch for my sweetheart, who soon, all smiles and blushes with the consciousness that it was the last time as a maiden, came tripping down the street. I went out to meet her. This bush, not half as large as it is now, stood here in my window.

"'Oh,' said my bride that was to be, in a pretty raptnre, 'Nancy has sold you her rose! Did you cross it root and branch with silver coin?'"

"'Not I. Nancy gave it to me of her own sweet will.'"

"A jealous flush came over my girl's proud face."

"'I thought,' she said, 'that your visits there were more frequent than her illness called for. You love her, and if you are true to her you are false to me.'"

"I made a sharp reply. She had charged me with double dealing. We were both terribly angry. The next morning we were to have been married. That was fifteen years ago. and we have never spoken together since. Nancy was going away to fulfill a promise made in childhood, and she gave me her rosebush because I had 'saved her life for her lover.' Perhaps I had; but she unknowingly ruined mine. I kept the bush, and it blossomed and has blossomed with all its might. Many a bride has pleaded with sweet lips for just a few blossoms to gem her hair. I have denied them all, and have never cut one of the flowers until it withered from the stem. It was not for Nancy's sake either, but somehow for the life that was to have blessed mine."

"But you cannot love your sweetheart much," ventured Lottie, winking off the salt drops that had collected on her long lashes.

"Not love her?" roared the doctor. "Zounds? can a chit like you undertake to guage the depths of a man's soul?"

"If you had you would have acted differently," bravely asserted this small council of one, sitting in judgment, with her chin resting on her hand.

"Acted differently!" thundered the irate doctor. "Pray, Miss Wisdom, how should I have acted?"

"You would have said to your sweetheart, I do not love Nancy, but I do love her rose. She is going away and gave it to me in gratitude. But I give the rose and myself and all that I have to you, because I love you better than all the world. Then, don't you see that everything would have been smooth, and you would have been all these years full of joy!"

'Zounds! so I should!" exclaimed the excited doctor, rising to his feet. "John, come in here," he called. "Help me wrap up this rose tree. There, put it on your handsled and draw it home for this young lady and set it in the house. And you, little miss, present it with my compliments and best wishes to Henrietta Henshaw. Good Heavens, what a fool!" said the doctor, striking his bald head a vigorous thump, when left alone.

Lotta did as she was bidden, giving Aunt Hetta such a galvanic shock as to paralyze her; but the good lady came to enough to glance furtively down the street to see really that the "impertinent white thing was no longer staring at her from the doctor's bay-window. She had a bay-window, too, looking southward, and into it she contrived to roll the great box, with its wealth of white blossoms.

The doctor, looking stealthily out from his dismantled corner, drew his own conclusions.

"Ahem!" said Miss Hetta. "How long would it take to work that nonsense you were talking about?"

"I could get it done by night," gasped Lottie all of a delicious tremble.

"Well, child, I did not mean to be cross. Take this and do what you please with it."

Lottie's hand closed quickly over the gold coin—she did not need a tenth of it—and she worked the whole afternoon, to the detriment of her blue eyes and the loss of her supper, till on a garnet ribbon a broad satin stitch of gold, ornamented with tiny forget-me-nots, lettered out the H. B. M., which stood not for Her Britannic Majesty, but some one every bit as regal—Harry B. Manyers, otherwise Harry. She had run down into the hall which was flooded with light, had greeted Harry, and had just secured the hat band in his hat, when the parlor doors were thrown open, and there stood Aunt Hetta blushing through the frosts of forty winters, with great heaps of white roses massed in her hair and clustered on her bosom. Dr. Beach, pompous and portly, was at her side. "Here, little miss," he shouted, you and that young rascal run for the parson."

The wily physician had armed himself with a ring and a strip of paper signed by the town clerk, and before you could say "Jack Robinson" the knot was tied that transformed Miss Henrietta Henshaw into Mrs. Dr. Beach.

Lottie was so bewildered that she could never tell whether she said yea or nay when Henry asked her to be his wife. But the young rascal seems to know, for he is building wondrous castles in the air.

In the sunny parlor, close beside the great rose tree, stands an elegant piano—a birthday offering to "little miss" from her "Uncle Doctor."

LOVELY WOMAN AT THE BANK.

A gentle, lovely woman entered a Main street bank yesterday. She wanted a check cashed, so she went to the receiving teller's window and thrust the check in. The teller shoved it back.

"Next winder," said he.

"Next winter? I can't wait till next winter," exclaimed the lady.

"I said next winder," shouted the teller "w-i-n-dow, winder, tother winder."

"Oh, yes, but this is the receiving window, isn't it?"

"Yes, but you can't get any money here."

"But I'm going to receive it, ain't I?"

"Not here, you ain't; go to the other window, lady; he'll fix you."

The lady was still uncertain, but she went and shoved in her check. The polite official thrust it back. "It's not indorsed, madam," said he.

"Not indorsed? What does that mean!"

"Is your name Tucker?"

"P'raps it is and p'raps it isn't. What business is that of yours?

"Is this your name on the face of this check?"

"Yes, it is."

"Well, you've got to endorse it."

"That's what you said before. What do you mean?"

"You must write your name across the back of it."

"But my name's on it already."

"On the front. That ain't enough; it must be across the back."

"Oh, well, gi' me it." She took it and carefully wrote her name upside down across the bottom of the check, and handed it in.

"You indorsed it wrong, madam."

"How'd I know how you wanted it? Why didn't you tell me?"

"I thought I did; here, write it across the top, so;" and the teller painfully showed her, and with much grudging she complied. The teller thereupon cashed her check with two silver dollars.

"I ain't going to take those," she said. "Gi' me bills."

The teller sighed and gave her two one dollar bills, whereupon she picked up her parasol and departed.—Buffalo Courier.

A Parting Word.

My darling, when this head lies low
In yonder quiet woodland dell,
And gentle wild-wood flowers shall blow
Above the eyes that love them well—
How soon thy sorrow would depart
If words of mine could soothe thy heart.

Sometime, somewhere we'll meet again—
Think this, and be the thought relief;
In life I have not brought the pain,
In death I must not bring thee grief,
Strew well with flowers of hope my pall,
And gently mourn, or not at all.

—William Winter.

A SAD LOVE STORY.

"Yes" said the kind-faced millionaire, "perhaps I'm rich now, but once I was poor. Years ago I was a letter-carrier. Strange things happened to me then—strange things, my son. Once for a whole year," continued the old man, "I used to deliver a daily letter (I knew it was a school-girl letter) to a sweet young widow in University place. The widow was always very happy and proud to get these letters. They were written in a neat school-girl hand, and were post-marked Poughkeepsie (Vassar College, you know).

"Well, about holiday time one bore on the outside, in large letters: "Just seventeen! One week more, and hurrah!' The lady took it from me at the door, and smiled when she saw the girlish postscript, and said:—

"'My daughter is glad to leave school, you see. We'll be very happy together now.'

"Not very long afterwards a rosy-cheeked, bright-eyed girl, instead of the mother, used to watch at the window for letters; and then the letters watched for were directed in a bolder hand, and postmarked New Haven (college there, you know). I used to find letters—heavy ones, too—in the school-girl hand, in the mail-box at the corner about this time. I knew what it meant, and I used to like to tease her a little, and pretend there was none for her sometimes, just to see her eyes light up, and the rose-blush come in her cheeks when I handed it to her at last.

"One day there was no letter. I felt sorry myself when I remembered it was the first time he had missed, and I knew there would be no smile or blush for me that morning. But I did not know what I was to see instead. As I passed the window she saw my grave face, and looking out and laughing, she gave a triumphant toss of her head, while beside her sat as handsome a young fellow as ever I saw—who but the writer of her letters, to be sure.

"The next spring I carried away from that house a great bundle of white, wedding-looking invitations to post. 'Ha, ha!' thought I, 'there's going to be a wedding, and I know who the groom will be.'

"But I didn't, for one morning, not many days after, as I came up the street, I saw a boy with a book and yellow telegraph envelope walk into the widow's house, and as I passed the door I heard a shrill scream. A moment after I saw my sweet, pretty, little girl lying on her mother's bosom, with a telegram in her hand.

"The papers next day were full of a terrible accident by rail on the New Haven road, and among the list of killed I read the name I had so often read on the letters I posted from the mail-box on the corner."

"What became of the sweet girl?" I asked.

"Well, I went off the route—went to the Black Hills. But everywhere the face of that beautiful, sad girl haunted me. I went into mining, got rich, but morning, noon, and night my thoughts turned toward the widow's house in University place. I was in love. The beautiful character of the girl had won my admiration. One day I came back to New York. Some invisable thread led me to University place. Sitting there in the window was the same beautiful girl. We recognized each other. In a moment we were acquainted again. My heart became absorbed in her, and now—well, we are married. We are rich now, but our riches do not consist in money alone. We have a beautiful home, and a beautiful daughter, and I am out here now waiting for the letter-carrier to give him a letter which she has written to a young student at New Haven. Alas! we are all children of a large growth."

A WOMAN'S DISPATCH.

"I went to send a message in a great hurry."

The Western Union operator braced himself for a "rush" message.

"It's to Chicago."

"Well, we have an open wire to Chicago."

"Can you send it right away?"

"Yes madam."

"Well, you see, Emma's baby's sick and Charlie is away on a trip."

"Well, what shall I say, madam?"

"You see, I can't think just where he is. Do you know?"

The operator had to admit that he did not.

"Well, suppose you send it to Chicago."

"Well suppose you do. Where is he?"

"Have you got a Chicago directory here?"

"Yes, ma'am," handing it to her.

"I am afraid I have forgotten the address."

"What business is he in?"

"I don't know; he makes a good living though. Don't you think a telegram addressed to Chicago will reach him?"

"I'm afraid not."

"Well, then, I'll go home and find out his address. Can you tell me the nearest car that will take me home?"

"No, ma'am, I cannot."

"Well, it seems queer to me that you telegraph operators don't know anything."—St. Paul Globe.

"What did you get last year for your Christmas, Dennis?" "Faith, if me memory serves me aright, I got a touch of the small-pox, an' bad luck to it.—New York Journal.

THE CONSERVATIVE INFLUENCE OF BLACKED BOOTS.

Coming down town yesterday morning found myself walking behind a youth whose boots and trousers still bore unmistakable traces of the mud of the previous day. This is an appearance which I have often observed before, but never without pain, and I can imagine no better proof of a slovenly and inert disposition. I once heard a successful business man, the head of a large concern, declare that he never engaged a man or boy who presented himself with uncleaned boots. "Shabby clothes may be a misfortune," he added, "but muddy boots are a fault." The same notion is held, I have been told, by the principle of the celebrated private school, who is accustomed to remind his scholars that he who fails to black his boots in the morning can scarcely preserve his self-respect unimpaired. Unclean boots, moreover, lead on to other excesses, such as an unshaven face, and prehaps even soiled linen. An eccentric friend of mine used to maintain that every bootblack on the street is, so far forth, a guaranty of order and stability in government. "History will bear me out," he would go on to say, "in assertion that no man who polished his boots in the morning ever excited a mob to insurrection, or endeavored to throw down the powers that be." I can hardly go as far as this; and yet I haven't the slightest doubt that the little savage of the blacking-brush is an unconscious—and, if the question were put to him, an unwilling—element of conservatism.—"Taverner" in Boston Post.

THE OLD MAN WAS TOO HASTY.

A staid old Hubbardston farmer came to the Hub yesterday to do "a leetle tradin," and as he meandered down Washington street "headed for the Fitchburg depot," as he said, he suddenly halted, gazed excitedly at a sign in front of a clothing-house, and then darted into the store exclaiming, "Well, I vum, that is good!" After due deliberation he selected a $10 suit of clothes, tendering in payment just $7. "That's the right change, sir," said he to the astonished clerk. "But I don't understand it; I told you that suit would be $10," argued the clerk. "Yes, I know, but don't your old sign out at the door say, 'All we want is 70 cents on the dollar?'" and picking up his new purchase the honest old Hubbardston farmer hastily left. He trotted along congratulating himself on his wonderful smartness, and was heard to mutter, "I guess I'm lively enough for these 'ere city folks." But a sudden change came "o'er the spirit of his dreams" after he had walked a short distance. A look of utter disgust overspread his face, the bundle fell from his arms, and in a mournful tone he said, "Why didn't I look around a little before I bought them clothes?" The cause of his consternation was another clothing sign that read: "Goods sold here at half price." After studying the situation several minutes he resumed his journey depotward, saying, "I might have saved $5 just as well as not if I hadn't been in such a pesky hurry."—Boston Post.

NOT FOR HER.

"Madame," he began as the door opened, "I am selling a new book on Etiquette and Deportment."

"Oh, you are?" she responded, "Go down on the grass and clean the mud off your feet."

"Yes, 'em. As I was saying, ma'am, I am sel—"

"Take off your hat! Never address a strange lady at her door without removing your hat."

"Yes'm. Now, then, as I was say—"

"Take your hands out of your pockets! No gentleman ever carries his hand there."

"Yes'm. Now, ma'am, this work on etiq—"

"Throw out your cud. If a gentleman uses tobacco he is careful not to disgust others by the habit."

"Yes'm. Now, ma'am, in calling your attention to this valuable—"

"Wait! Put that dirty handkerchief out of sight and use less grease on your hair. Now you look half way decent. You have a book on 'Etiquette and Deportment.' Very well. I don't want it. I'm only the hired girl. You can come in, however, and talk with the lady of the house. She called me a liar this morning, and I think she needs something of the kind."

A NEW RECIPE.

'Well, I never!' ejaculated Mrs. Smith, as she struck her husband's bald head with a newspaper.

'Why, the newspaper says that the easiest way to take quinine is to mix it with butter and place the mixture in the arm-pit to be absorbed. What do you think of that?

'Its just the thing, my dear,' replied Smith. 'Its just the thing, and you can't try it any too quick. That butter looks sick, and it would be a good idea to give it a dose of quinine. Somebody has evidently worn it under his arm pit.'

'Why, John,' how you do talk! Uncle Dick always brings me a roll of butter under his arm every time he comes to town.'

'He does, eh? Well, run and put some quinine in it—anything to take the taste of his butter out of my mouth.'—Arcola Record.

LOOKING FOR A MATCH.

The following discoveries were made by a meek Hatboro man who got up the other night to look for a match:—

The doors are nine feet in width.

The sofa stands out from the wall five feet.

Chair rockers are eight feet three inches long.

The chandelier reaches to within two feet of the floor.

The wall advances to meet you in the centre of the room.

The table has 27 legs, which are placed at an angle of 45 degrees.

And the bureau, where you left the matches on going to bed, has disappeared entirely.

APPRECIATIVE WORDS FOR THE COUNTRY PRESS.

No section of the United States surpasses Western Massachusetts in the excellency of its local press, and it is interesting to note the steady progress made by our rural weeklies. The latest step forward has been taken by the Pittsfield Eagle under Mr. Rogers, which has adopted the eight-page form and appeas in new type. The North Adams Transcript and News, the Pittsfield Sun, the Northampton Gazette, the journal of the Hampshire county seat and the Gazette and Reformer of Greenfield have all taken on the form which The Republican introduced, and which is everywhere banishing the old blanket sheets. The Westfield Times still clings, to four pages, and ministers faithfully to a loyal audience. THE PALMER JOURNAL, one of the best papers in all the region, keeps its old compact shape and adheres to the sensible methods which the elder Fisk introduced. Size tempts some papers to spread out too thin, and this fault will not be charged against Palmer's bright monitor. But among the papers that are here mentioned are some that come near the ideal of what a rural weekly should be, and no better service need be desired in this imperfect world than is each week rendered to the people of Western Massachusetts. The old-established papers are the best, too. A newspaper office with sound traditions in it is about as substantial an institution as our civilization produces. In this connection it may be added that the retirement of Mr. Loomis from the Holoyoke Transcript takes out of the ranks one of the veteran newspaper workers of this region, a man of ability and positive character, who has left his impress on the newspaper which he for so long conducted.—Springfield Sunday Republican.

The Farmers' Institute.

AN INTERESTING MEETING.—MUCH PRACTICAL TALK INDULGED IN.

The Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society held its first institute of the season at the Weeks House hall Tuesday with an unusually large attendance. In the absence of President Holbrook the meeting was called to order at 10.30 a. m. by Dr. O. P. Allen. J. K. Knox was then chosen chairman and introduced E. B. Lynde of West Brookfield as the first speaker. He took for his subject "The value of commercial fertilizers and their application," and said: "Scientific men tell us that there are only three elements necessary for the fertility of the soil, nitrogen, potash and phosphate. The soil of New England is very unlike, and the value of commercial fertilizers depend upon the quality of soil to a certain extent. Many farmers who live in the different parts of the state prefer to use commercial fertilizer to manure, while others of just as large experience would use the latter. The application of commercial fertilizers and the result is different in different places. As I said before, it depends upon the condition of the soil and the degree of heat during a season. I have used a great many tons of commercial fertilizers in my life, and sometimes it has produced large crops and sometimes it has not. I had extremely heavy crops from using it the first time. The next year the crops were very deficient in quality and quantity, while the third year I put on 1000 pounds of ground bone and 800 pounds of phosphate to the acre. The consequence was that I raised heavy crops, especially in the grass line, but nevertheless it had the appearance of being somewhat burned. With what experience I have had I think I can safely state that I cannot get the results from commercial fertilizers that I can with manure which contains all the elements of fertility. The commercial fertilizer will work better when the ground is a little moist than at any other time you can apply it. The experimental stations which we have are an excellent thing, they have helped the farmers amazingly, for these scientific men have convinced him of many things which seemed almost impracticable to accomplish." Wilson M. Tucker of Monson spoke briefly, advocating the use of commercial fertilizers in some instances.

H. L. Phelps of Northampton, who is well informed in chemistry, said: "My experience with the use of standard fertilizers has been long and of the best. I started out with the scientific theory that commercial fertilizers could not take the place of manure which is composed of three elements. The greatest trouble with farmers in using this kind of fertilizer is that they do not follow instructions implicitly in scientific farming. The fact is, many farmers use two ingredients of the fertilizer and leave the other out. Now the best way to find out just what your land requires in order to raise good crops is to make an experiment. If it contains enough of one ingredient don't put that one upon your land. If you leave off the nitrogen and phosphoric acid your results will be small when you come to harvest your crops. Find out exactly what your land wants to begin with, and this can only be done by experimenting with various kinds of commercial fertilizers. Never condemn the opinions of science until you know positively what science is. I have used chemicals for many years and have more than doubled the production of my crops within a certain period." The speaker advocated the establishment of a bone mill in the Connecticut Valley, so that the farmers could have a place to grind bones at an extremely low rate compared with the prices that are being paid at present. "I have yet to hear of a farmer who puts on equal ingredients of potash, nitrogen and phosphoric acid, of what his crops will take, that does not get good results. Always apply your chemicals just as early as the frost is out of the ground in the spring, and be sure to put back in manure what you take off in crops. That is policy every time. These fertilizers are designed more to start a crop than to grow a crop, and are very soluable when applied properly. Use your waste products largely and they will be a benefit to you."

James Tufts of Monson also added his views upon the matter, saying that he had used commercial fertilizers with good results. George Robinson followed, saying that he had always had better results from the use of Bradley's superphosphate than from the use of any other similar chemical.

At 1.30 p. m. the farmers re-assembled and resumed the morning discussion, until the opinions of many had been pretty thoroughly ventilated. At this session President Holbrook presided and introduced A. A. Barton of Dalton as the principal speaker. Mr. Barton took for his subject "The Business Side of Farming in New England," and said: "Mr. Chairman and Brother Farmers of this Community: What I have to say will not be as a public speaker, but as a plain farmer from the hills of Berkshire, interested like most of you in the calling of agriculture and its advancement. One of the first measures that I should like to see adopted by every farmer in the state of Massachusetts would be a simple system of book-keeping as regards the expenditures and receipts from the several different sources upon the farm. I think as farmers we little realize how important it is that we should study our business and look carefully after the details of all our work. We must remember as farmers that success comes to us only in the same way as in all other callings in this world. The price is the same to all in every place. It is hard work and careful thought practically applied that makes the successful farmer of to-day. Now let us look at book-keeping as I previously alluded to, and see if there is any advantage in it. I wish that every farmer would take the first opportunity that presents itself to get an inventory of all he owns. Keep a daily journal of all your business and take an annual inventory and know at the end of each year exactly how you stand. That is what makes successful farming in a measure. It may seem to many of you a severe task, but it is not the case. A little time each day devoted to the keeping of your accounts will aid you greatly and will never be missed.

Now something for the advantage of coöperation and organization is what we want to understand. The organization of a grange in Eastern Hampden would be a great benefit to the farmers living therein. Such an institution tends to instruct the farmer in more ways than one. Believing as I do that but comparatively few members outside of the grange know what blessings coöperation is capable of bestowing, and pained to know that a far less number really practice anything worthy the name, I shall ask you to bear with me while I speak of why we need coöperation, what coöperation is, and how we can apply it. Only when man ceases to think of himself does he approach moral perfection. This statement may have an unwelcome sound in the strife and competition that fill our daily lives, but we cannot too soon be brought to realize its truth. Too many of us find satisfaction in getting the better of our neighbors, and foolishly fancy that we have won a victory, because, by so doing, men call us smart. Brotherly love goes a good ways in sickness and death, but it seldom reaches down to a horse trade. Never try to cheat your neighbor, but coöperate with him. One of the main objects of the grange, or the Order of Patrons of Husbandry, is to teach this principle and to try and show our children that it is better to be honest than to attain great riches, and therefore it is better to be a kind, good neighbor, than a sharp, shrewd one. By taking an interest in others and helping them, you in the meantime help yourself. The prosperity of a nation is in proportion to the value of its productions. The soil is the source from whence we derive all that constitutes wealth; without it we would have no agriculture, no manufactures, no commerce."

Brief speeches were also made by other prominent farmers, and altogether the remarks were very interesting and instructive. In the evening a meeting was held for the purpose of forming a grange for Eastern Hampden. Some preliminary matters relating to the organization of such an order were transacted, but the grange will not be organized until later.

Fiction and juvenile works will be catalogued separately, but will be included in the general catalogue under F. and J. During December the library was open 13 days for the delivery of books. The total number of books drawn was 1026. The register contains the names of 500 readers. Since the opening of the library, September 1st, 3124 books have been delivered. A noticeable feature of the work is the widening of the range of books over the ten classes included in the library, indicating that the carefulness of the institution is beginning to be appreciated.

THORNDIKE.

Patrick Burns, an old resident of the town, is very ill at his home.

The young people of the village are talking of getting up a dancing school.

The Springfields and Westfields will play polo at the rink to-morrow evening.

R. K. Houston, who has covered rolls for the Thorndike Co. for several years, is about to resign.

Mrs. Joseph Sway of Fitchburg, who has been visiting her brother, Francis Mayett, returned home Tuesday.

The attendance at the rink last Saturday evening was good, and those present enjoyed a good time. The Bondsville band furnished music.

T. Clifford, of Worcester, is in town canvassing for a Catholic book which contains the doings and proceedings of the late council at Baltimore.

Henry Sharon, the livery man, has purchased a fine pair of horses this week from Fuller of Indian Orchard, which he will use in his livery business.

The Emmet Social Club has fixed Friday evening, January 20, as the date for their drama and dance. The tickets are out and are meeting with a good sale.

All arrangements have been made for a first-class time at the dance to be given this evening at Lawton's Hall, under the auspices of the local Knights of Labor.

Mr. Philbrick, of the grammar school, is thinking of organizing a night school, providing enough join to make it an object. Parties wishing to join the school will leave their names at the post office.

The local Democratic Club held another meeting Thursday evening, the subjects for discussion being the local politics of the town and the coming spring election. After much debate the club adjourned to meet again on Thursday evening of next week.

George Green's pair of gray horses, hitched to a sled loaded with wood, broke through the ice Tuesday, and had it not been for the thoughtfulness of the driver, who at once cut the tugs and pulled the horses out by means of a chain, they would probably have drowned.

Miss Clara Samson, employed in the weaving department at No. 1 mill, met with an accident a few days ago while at work, being hit in the eye with a shuttle which flew from one of the looms. At first it was thought she would lose the sight of the eye, but the present indications are that she will not.

WILBRAHAM.

Mrs. Dr. Steele gave a lecture on Africa in the Congregational church last Sunday evening.

Prof. Louisa Hodgkins of Wellesley College, who has been the guest of Dr. Steele, the past few weeks, returned Wednesday.

The Ladies' Benevolent Society of the Congregational church met at Ira G. Potter's Wednesday afternoon and evening.

William A. Farnham, head clerk for Hubbarb & Co. the past three years, has resigned on account of ill health, and will start for California the 19th. Mr. Farnham will be much missed by the many friends he has made here, also by the choir of the Congregational church, of which he was a member.

The "Willing Workers" will give their annual ice cream festival and entertainment in the chapel and ladies' parlor of the Congregational church next Wednesday evening.

H. C. Bowles and bride have returned from their trip and taken up their residence at Wyman Hill farm.

The cards are out for the marriage of Arthur W. Lyman, the express agent, and Miss Julia M. Green at the residence of the bride's parents next Wednesday evening.

Triumph Division, Sons of Temperance, will give an entertainment in the chapel of the South church next Monday evening.

The family of Dr. William Warren, of Boston University, who have been visiting Mrs. Warren's father, J. M. Merrick, the past few weeks, returned to their home at Cambridge Monday.

There is to be a grange meeting in the chapel of the South church next Thursday evening. Several prominent officers of the order will address the meeting.

Rev. M. S. Howard has distributed among his people a pastoral letter, in printed form, suitable to the new year, with the weekly calendar of church services for Sunday and week days.

The Farmers' club will meet at Mr. Markham's next Monday evening. Topic for discussion: "Winter Evenings."

At the annual meeting of the Willing Workers last week the following officers were elected: President, Carrie A. Moody; vice president, Etta Sessions; secretary and treasurer, Ida L. Bowles; directors, Emily E. Phelps, Mary F. Beebe. A Home Missionary Society was also organized at the same time, with the following officers: President, Etta Sessions; vice president, Emily E. Phelps; secretary and treasurer, May F. Merrick; directors, Mary F. Beebe, Mrs. Frank Learned and Carrie A. Moody.

MONSON.

Mrs. Ira A. Priest has formed a class in painting.

Miss Minnie Hunt of Hampden is visiting Mrs. Eugene Squier.

Charles R. Buffington is quite ill at his home with pneumonia.

Miss Nellie Hussey returned from her Boston visit Wednesday.

Miss Mary Tiffany of Indiana, Pa., visited friends here this week.

Prof. E. Gleason, the veterinary surgeon, has been in town this week.

The Linophilian Society will meet at the academy next Friday evening.

Mrs. Rufus Leach of Springfield is visiting her mother, Mrs. B. A. Day.

William B. Grout is soon to build a barn near his house on Pease Hill.

Mrs. D. B. Needham has returned from a visit to her parents in Washington.

George L. Keeney and family spent Sunday with J. P. Hawley at Stafford Springs.

There have been revival services held at the Methodist church each evening this week.

The Literary Club read Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice at the Academy Tuesday evening.

George W. Lyman of Palmer has the contract to build John Dower's new house on High street.

Preaching services were held at the Congregational church Wednesday and Thursday evenings of this week.

Miss Belle Ballantine of Palmer has been visiting her sister, Mrs. W. F. Buffington, a few days this week.

Tramps are getting decidedly numerous here. No less than 9 registered at Hotel De-Newton Monday night.

There will be a sociable at the Congregational church parlors to-night. Supper will be served from 6 to 8 o'clock.

Stewart & Hardy have the contract to build Samuel Closson's house on the Quarry road, and will commence work as soon as the lumber arrives.

Thomas O'Neil and Miss Mary Brannick, both of North Monson, were married Monday morning at St. Patrick's church by Rev. William McCaughen.

The Ladies' Society of the Universalist church met with Mrs. Harlow Chapin this afternoon, and the Sunday-school teachers meet there this evening.

James Stott, superintendent at Cushman's mill, will move from Mrs. Hearn's house to the tenement recently occupied by James Feather on Lyons street.

Frank Walker, who has been visiting his parents here for the past few weeks, will return to North Brookfield Monday, where he is employed in Batchelder's shoe shop.

Gaouette has recently taken some fine photographs of Monson's oldest inhabitant, Mrs. Fannie Bradford, who is in her 94th year, from which a life size protrait has been made by a Boston artist, and presented her by William Gates of Cambridge.

George H. Newton, who sold out here and went to Pomona, Cal., last September, intending to make it his home, will soon return East, having come to the conclusion that Massachusetts is good enough for him, and that fortunes are not so easily made in California as some seem to think.

Quite a number of Monson people were taken in by Alex. Wilson, who claimed to be an agent for the "Galaxy of Music," of Boston. It appears he has traveled through the state taking subscriptions which were not turned over to the paper. He was arrested at Hudson last Saturday, and sentenced to two months in the house of correction.

The third annual ball of the Washington Club was held in the Central Hall last evening. The gallery was filled with spectators, and the concert programme was excellent. It was 9.30 before the grand march was formed, about 175 couples taking part. Supper was served at the Monson House, and all who attended enjoyed a right good time.

Charles E. Smith, the harness maker, has in his possession a book of inventory which was taken in 1838 by his father, Benjamin D. Smith, who established the first harness business in Monson. The book is a curiosity and contains the names of some of the first settlers of the town, none of whom are even represnted to-day by descendants, excepting the Norcrosses, Flynts and Packardes.

The Bohemian-American glass blowers did not leave a very good impression on Monson people. The result of the baby vote has caused a great deal of dissatisfaction. Considerable interest had been manifested, but at the last moment votes were sold for little or nothing, and those who had worked hard for their favorite were coolly cheated out of the prize.

William R. Potter met with a severe accident at Cushman's mill last Saturday afternoon. He was at work cleaning out the well under the elevator when a mill hand ran the car down, which he did not see or hear on account of the noise made by the machinery, and before he could escape he was caught and probably would have been crushed to death, had not the elevator been reversed just before it reached the floor. Dr. G. E. Fuller was called to attend the injured man, and found two ribs were broken and his back severely injured. Mr. Potter is doing as well as could be expected. He has some consolation in holding a $1000 accident policy in the Traveler's of Hartford.

WARE AND VICINITY.

There is a case of scarlet fever reported on West Main street.

The evening schools are well attended, over 400 pupils being enrolled.

Fred. A. Volk has been appointed superintendent of the water works, to commence his duties February 1st.

There are 18 teachers employed in teaching the evening schools, two evenings in a week, two hour sessions.

It is expected that Rev. Mr. Tomblin of Brookfield will preach at Ware Center next Sunday. He formerly preached at Agawam.

The report from the post office for the past year shows the total reciepts to have been $6197, nearly $800 more than the year previous.

West street is used for a race course by some owning fast trotters, to the inconvenience and danger of the residents, who think the officials of the town should put a stop to it, and no doubt they would if their attention was called to it.

Prof. Turner gave an excellent stereopticon entertainment at the town hall last week, showing some of the beautiful and interesting scenery of Ireland. The proceeds from the lecture go to increase the building fund of St. William's church.

A committee has been appointed by the Ware branch of the Irish National League to make arrangements for the observance of St. Patrick's Day, when it is expected there will be an entertainment in the town hall.

The French Protestant church will hold their Sunday services in the Congregational chapel until further notice, Grand Army Hall being too small for their increased numbers. The morning service will be at 11 o'clock, the evening service at 7.45.

The Farmers' Club at Ware Center will meet next Monday evening. Subject, "Do the farmers derive any benefit from meeting and discussing farming? If so, what?" Ladies are especially invited to be present, as well as any who are interested in farming.

The officers of the Ware National Bank for the ensuing year, elected Tuesday, are: William Hyde, president; William Hyde, Calvin Hitchcock, Lewis N. Gilbert, William S. Hyde, Frederick D. Gilmore, Nathan Richardson and George W. Johnson, directors.

The town hall has been engaged by Geo. L. Gregory's pantomime and specialty company for this evening, when they will present the "brilliant funnyosity" in three acts, Humpty Dumpty's frolics, Geo. L. Gregory taking the principal part. It is a large company, and they have a military band with them.

The Mount Herman Mission Band gave an interesting entertainment at the chapel Tuesday evening, consisting of recitations, dialogues, singing, etc. The cornet playing by Mr. Noble was especially fine, and the parts taken by the boys were all well done. The band cleared over $40, to be used to carry on the mission work.

The Irish National League has elected the following officers: John W. Clark, president; Owen F. McMahon, vice president; Patrick McMahon, treasurer; John Fitzgerald, recording secretary; Patrick Gargan, financial secretary; James E. Clark, John Healey, Hugh Kevney and E. A. Mooney, auditing committee.

Notices have been issued by the selectmen forbiding coasting on the public streets. The following is an extract from the by-laws of the town of Ware: "No person shall course or slide on any sleigh, sled or other vehicle, in any of the public streets, or upon any sidewalk, in this town. Whoever violates any of the provisions of this section, on conviction shall forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding twenty dollars."

Richard J. Morgan of Providence, R. I., was instantly killed Monday afternoon on the Central Massachusetts Railroad's bridge near Gibbs's crossing. He was employed on the construction of the new iron bridge at that place, and had climbed up a rope, and in some way lost his hold and fell about 20 feet, striking his head on a rock. He was 22 years of age and unmarried. Dr. D. W. Miner, medical examiner, visited the body, which was taken to Providence on Tuesday for burial.

"Maude Banks has found a part in which she will win a name among the tragediennes of the age," says the Boston Advertiser of Miss Banks in her grand impersonation of the heroic Maid of Orleans, who appears at Ware's town hall next Tuesday evening. Of this noble role the Detroit Free Press states that: "Next to the Booth and Barret performances, Miss Banks' Joan of Arc is the most interesting and valuable dramatic contribution of the season." Miss Banks is the youngest daughter of General N. P. Banks. She made many friends and admirers upon her former visit, who will doubtless be anxious to see her in this new role.

A railroad accident which killed twelve persons and wounded three times that number occurred on the Boston & Maine Railroad near Bradford Tuesday noon. The Portland express was rounding a curve just before coming to the Merrimac river, when two of the passenger cars left the track, plunging into a tank house, in the lower part of which some track hands were eating their dinner. The foundation of the tank house was knocked out and the heavy tank crushed the car like an egg shell, killing six of the passengers at once, two of the railroad hands and a by-stander. The smoking car was derailed and ran upon the bridge, 100 feet above the river, then tipped over against the side timbers, which were fortunately strong enough to hold it. The accident was due to a broken flange on the forward truck of the smoking car.

JOTTINGS FROM THE HUB.

From our Special Correspondent.

BOSTON, JAN. 11, 1888.

The first week of the session of the Legislature, nothing was done but routine work, and it passed off without incident aside from the programme. A solemnity always attaches to the inauguration of a governor, for at that time we touch upon a bed rock of things which we rarely see in our daily living. The visible powers that be, of our Commonwealth, are gathered in the little space about the chair of the speaker of the House of Representatives. The staff of the governor, in their glittering uniforms, remind the spectator that the governor is commander-in-chief of the military and naval forces of the state, as well as a civil officer. The formality of the oath-taking is always impressive, ending, as it always does, with a vow to support the constitution of the United States. Then comes the proclamation by Secretary of State Peirce, that "whereas, Oliver Ames has taken and subscribed the oaths of office of governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, that all our people, and especially all of our officers, take due notice and govern themselves accordingly." That is the substance of it. Some years a signal is arranged to be communicated at once to a battery on the Common, so that the booming of cannon follows almost instantly upon the proclamation of the secretary. This formality was not observed this year.

Of all the parts of the governor's inaugural none was received with more demonstration than that in regard to private schools, for everyone knew that he meant parochial schools, about which there has been so much interest of late. Now, I happen to know that what the governor wrote was the result of careful deliberation, and it will probably be the policy of the state from this time on to meet the issue of the parochial schools versus the public schools, by making the public schools of a better quality than ever. All antagonism will thus be avoided, for the state, so far as parochial schools are concerned, will merely insist upon her historic policy of refusing to make them any grants of public money. Possibly the law for the supervision of private schools may be enforced more than it has been recently, for there are several parochial schools right here in Boston which refuse to admit an agent of the state board of education in his official capacity, though they will admit him as a private individual. If the public schools are constantly made better, it will make those Catholics who favor them (and they are a material portion of the Catholic church) more than ever disposed to send their children to them, and it will make the contrast between them and the poorer parochial schools more marked than ever. I happen to know that there is a high authority among the Boston Catholics in favor of our public schools as against the parochial schools, and when the dignitaries take that position, what can be expected of the laymen who are ever ready to risk priestly displeasure, provided their children are well educated.

Gov. Ames's reference to the prohibitory constitutional amendment does not please the officers of the Massachusetts Women's Christian Temperance Union, and they denounce him sharply. They could hardly be severe enough on him after they heard his inaugral.

On Monday the committees of the two branches were announced. Important changes have been made with the hope of shortening the session. Several of the committees have been reduced in number from three senators and eight representatives to two senators and seven representatives. This will make it easier for the committees to obtain quorums, and thus it will facilitate the dispatch of business. A new committee, that on constitutional amendments, has been appointed, and to it will be referred the petitions for the abolition of the poll tax and for a prohibitory constitutional amendment. The matter of prohibition is beginning to trouble the Republicans again, and there are plenty of men who will vote to submit it to the people because the Republican party is pledged to do so, but who do not believe in the amendment and will vote against it, if it gets to the people. The Massachusetts Woman's Christian Temperance Union has already put in a petition for a prohibitory amendment.

The labor committee has Senator Howard of Bristol for Senate chairman, and Mr. Mellen of Worcester for House chairman. Mr. Quincy of Quincy, the most efficient House member last year, is again a member. The liquor committee does not appear to be made up strong in the interest of prohibition.

On Tuesday and Wednesday business was introduced rapidly, so that the committees can go to work as soon as their hearings can be advertised. The perennial matters of woman suffrage and prohibition have been presented. Mr. Quincy of Quincy put in an order in regard to the abolition of the poll tax as a suffrage qualification, and an order for a secret ballot and for the prevention of fraud and intimidation at the polls has also been introduced. Other matters of importance already pending are a general revision of the lumber laws, more assistance to the attorney general, aid to veteran soldiers and their families, making a minimum penalty for burglary, repeal of the Boston aldermanic districts law, and a general law for the formation of water companies. All the petitions filed with Secretary Peirce have also been transmitted to the Legislature.

Gov. Ames sent a message to the House Wednesday for the immediate repair of the damage by the recent fire at the Framingham normal school.

At Wednesday's council meeting George A. Marden and Elijah W. Wood of Newton were nominated and confirmed as trustees of the agricultural college.

Senator Spellman of the first Hampden district has been given the fourth place on the senate judiciary committee, and at their meeting this forenoon he was elected clerk. Representative Grosvenor of the tenth Hampden district has been assigned to the seventh place on the public service committee, and Representative Lyman of Belchertown (fourth Hampshire) is third on the committee on parishes and religious societies, and fifth on the committee on education. Mr. Hitchcock of Ware (fifth Hampshire) is fourth on the committee on federal relations.

A petition was presented yesterday from R. H. Reynolds and others for incorporation as the Monson Water Supply Company.

LANDON.

It is too bad to spend half of a short life distressed with neuralgia, when 25 cents spent for one bottle of Salvation Oil will cure it quickly.

He talked as if he had a "frog in his throat," but was only horse; a single bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup relieved the trouble at once. 25 cents.

We announce in our columns to-day a second Concert of the class of the recent Thomas Concert at Springfield. This time it is the famous Boston Symphony Orchestra, whose Concert in Boston on Saturday last, won enthusiastic praise from the entire audience and press. It is expected that the talismanic names of Adele Aus Der Ohe at the piano, and Miss Hattie J. Clapper, the vocal assistant, fills the bill exactly to the taste of all music loving people. Tickets are now on sale.

If faithfully used, Ayer's Sarsaparilla will remove scrofula in whatever form it exists.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills stimulate the appetite and regulate the bowels. Try them. Have you seen Ayer's Almanac?

P[illegible]d's Extract, for pains, sores, etc. The marvellous cures effected compelled scientific medical investigation, and forced its acknowledgment. No Druggist can make Pond's Extract.

For 30 years I have been troubled with catarrh—have tried a number of remedies without relief. A druggist here recommended Ely's Cream Balm. I have used only one bottle and I can say I feel like a new man. My catarrh was chronic and very bad. I make this voluntary statement that others may know of the Balm.—J. W. Mathewson, (Lawyer), Pawtucket, R. I.

Two bottles of Ely's Cream Balm cured the wife of a well-known U. S. A. General and also two army officers in Arizona of catarrh. Price 50 cents. Pleasant to use. 2w42

A GENEROUS FIRM.

We are informed that the proprietors, Messrs. A. P. Ordway & Co., recently sent three dozen of their reliable medicine, Sulphur Bitters, to the Catholic Home for the Aged, which is highly appreciated by the directors and inmates. "As ye sow, so shall ye reap."—[Editor Catholic Union. 2w41

Advice to Mothers.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle. 1y28

A Certainty.

Steele's Little Bile Pills are without an equal for stimulating the liver to healthy action, and creating a proper secretion of bile, thus removing from the system the germs of malaria, curing constipation, indigestion, and inducing a healthy circulation of the blood, without which no one can enjoy sound health. They are small, but effective; free from nauseating propensities and griping pains, and do not interfere in their action with the ordinary routine of daily life. Heavily sugar coated. To be had of LeGro & Lynde, for 25 cents per bottle. 1y8eow

It is wrong to experiment with uncertain remedies. Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup at once cures the troublesome colic or diarrhœa afflicting the baby.

The wonderful sale and popularity of Laxador is not so surprising, when the very wide range of its adaption to disease is considered.

WONDERFUL CURES.

W. D. Hoyt & Co., wholesale and retail druggists of Rome, Ga., say: We have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery, Electric Bitters and Bucklen's Arnica Salve for four years. Have never handled remedies that sell as well, or give such universal satisfaction. There have been some wonderful cures effected by these medicines in this city. Several cases of pronounced Consumption have been entirely cured by use of a few bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery, taken in connection with Electric Bitters. We guarantee them always. Sold by LeGro & Lynde. 1y29

BRACE UP.

You are feeling depressed, your appetite is poor, you are bothered with Headache, you are fidgetty, nervous, and generally out of sorts, and want to brace up. Brace up, but not with stimulants, spring medicines, or bitters, which have for their basis very cheap, bad whisky, and which stimulate you for an hour, and then leave you in worse condition than before. What you want is an alterative that will purify your blood, start healthy action of Liver and Kidneys, restore your vitality, and give renewed health and strength. Such a medicine you will find in Electric Bitters, at only 50 cents a bottle at LeGro and Lynde's Drug Store.

Facts You Can Bet On.

That the oldest and largest tobacco factory in the world is in Jersey City, N. J.

That this factory makes the popular and world-famed Climax Plug, the acknowledged standard for first-class chewing tobacco.

That this factory was established as long ago as 1760.

The last year (1886) it made and sold the enormous quantity of 27,982,280 pounds, or fourteen thousand tons of tobacco.

That this was more than one-seventh of all the tobacco made in the United States, notwithstanding that there were 966 factories at work.

That in the last 21 years this factory has helped support the United States Government to the extent of over forty-four million seven hundred thousand dollars ($44,700,000) paid into the U. S. Treasury in Internal Revenue taxes.

That the pay-roll of this factory is about $1,000,000 per year, or $20,000 per week.

That this factory employs about 3500 operatives.

That this factory makes such a wonderfully good chew in Climax Plug that many other factories have tried to imitate it in vain, and in despair now try to attract custom by offering larger pieces of inferior goods for the same price.

That this factory nevertheless continues to increase it business every year.

That this factory belongs to and is operated by
Yours, very truly,

8 PER CENT. FIRST MORTGAGES IN KANSAS.

During the next 90 days we shall give our customers 8% on any money they may send us for investments we have for sale. We have on hand First Mortgages and applications for money on first mortgage loans, mostly upon 160 acre farms, amounts ranging from $250 to $500. We have also mortgages in amounts $1000 to $20,000 at 7% which we offer. How much money can you furnish us for these loans? They are A1 security. The stringency in the money market enables us to cut down amounts applied for in each case to an amount that is safe beyond a doubt. Now is the time to get a nice line of small gilt-edge loans. TIMBER, TIE & WOOD LOT FOR SALE

Said lot known as the "Ward Lot," is situated in the town of Palmer, within ¼ of a mile of the Blanchardville and Tenneyville Tie stations on the B. & A. R. R. Contains over 80 acres, ⅓ has been growing over 80 years and the balance over 50 years. The tract is bounded 220 rods on the highway toward which it slopes, and the highway slopes toward the R. R., so that from every half acre full loads can be drawn by horses to the R. R., or to Palmer depot or Thorndike village. All things considered it is the most desirable wood lot in the county. Also another tract of about 7 acres, situated northeasterly from the above. For further particulars inquire of Dr. E. B. LYON, Exr., New Britain, Ct., or GEORGE W. RANDALL, Palmer, Mass. 2w41

VERY WONDERFUL

Are the effects produced by the use of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. Sores, Scabs, Glandular Swellings, Boils, Carbuncles, and all kinds of Humors disappear, as if by magic, by the use of this

Standard Blood Purifier

F. C. James of Albany, Greene County, Tenn., writes: "Ayer's Sarsaparilla saved the life of my only child. When three years old, her head was covered with scrofulous sores. She became almost helpless. Skillful physicians did all they could to relieve her, but failed. At last I purchased a bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, gave it to her according to directions, and she immediately began to improve. Encouraged by the result, I continued to give her this medicine until the cure was complete."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles $5.

Stranger (to boy in drug store)—"Boy, can you tell me where Mrs. Hendricks' boarding place is? I'm looking for a room." Boy—"Yesser, I'm going to deliver a package of Persian powder there in 'bout five minutes, an' I'll show you where it is."—Epoch.

"My son, did not I see you reading an account of a prize fight in the paper this morning?" "Yes, father, but I will never, never, so long as I live—" "Never mind about that, my son. I merely want to ask what you did with the paper." Burlington Free Press.

"How is this, my son; you write and tell me that you're up and dressed every morning in time to see the sun rise, while the president of your college informs me that you lie in bed till 9 o'clock and after?"

"Well, you see, father, the sun rises till noon in Cambridge."—Harper's Bazar.

Esmerelda Longcoffin to Hostetter McGinnis—"Are you still mad at me, Mr. McGinnis?—"What about?" Esmerelda—"You know last Christmas that you proposed and I cruelly rejected your offer. I have,—I have thought better of it since." McGinnis—"Humph! So have I."—Texas Siftings.

Contributor—Here is a little article which I wish to submit to the editorial—

Editor (with a graceful wave of the hand)—Very sorry; we are all full just now.

Contributor—Very well; I will call again when some of you are sober.—London Punch.

Why they no longer speak.—"I'm going to take riding lessons," she said, as she leaned her head against his shoulder. "Indeed?" "Yes, and my father is going to buy me a horse." "Ah!" he murmured, as he fondled one of her auburn tresses, "a white one of course?" Two minutes later he was wending his way home a sad and solitary man.—Washington News.

Visitor—Don't you miss your little nephew very much, Freddie?

Freddie (whose nephew died the week before)—Yes, I miss him very much, but I like to be the uncle of an angel.—Life.

Agent, at the door—Is the lady of the house in?

Gentleman, calling to his wife—Mary, is the cook in?—Burlington Free Press.

QUITE TOO AWFULLY RUDE.—Little Nell. "The gentleman was real polite to me in the street car. One real nice one gave me a seat."

Mamma—"Indeed?"

"Yes, on his knee."

"Oh!"

"Yes, mamma, an' some big girls standing up looked real mad 'cause no one was polite to them."—Omaha World.

A clergyman in a rural parish was remembered at Thanksgiving with a monster turkey, one of the kind that hang at the door of the markets Thanksgiving time. The family was small, and meal after meal that turkey "bobbed up serenely." At last one day the minister's young boy manifested a prodigious appetite. Again and again he passed his plate, until his father mother became alarmed and asked his what he was eating so much for. With his mouths full of turkey, he answered: "Father, I mean you shan't have to say grace over that old turkey again."—Concord (N. H.) Monitor.

Make No Mistake.

If you have made up you mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion and preparation curative power superior to any other article of the kind before the people. Be sure to get Hood's.

"In one store the clerk tried to induce me to buy their own instead of Hood's Sarsaparilla. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was, I had taken it, was perfectly satisfied with it, and did not want any other."—Mrs. Ella A. Goff, 61 Terrace street, Boston, Mass.

"My wife suffered from sick headache and neuralgia. After taking Hood's Sarsaparilla she was much relieved."—W. R. Babb, Wilmington, Ohio.

How a Dying Child was Saved.

CICERO, HAMILTON CO., IND., Sept., 19, 1887.

The following is a true account of what your S. S. S. has done for our little daughter, Hazel, now four years old. When twelve months old a lump appeared on her heel, which slowly grew larger. The family physician thought it was caused by a piece of broken glass or a needle, but failed to bring anything to light. The child became feebler all the time, seeming to lose the use of her leg, and finally quit walking altogether. The middle finger and thumb became enlarged, the flesh becoming hard. The hip joints became involved, so that when seventeen months old she could not stand, having lost the use of her hand and arm. Partial curvature of the spine also followed. The nervous system was wrecked, muscles contracted, and there was a general wasting of flesh and muscle. At eighteen months she was placed under the treatment of a prominent physician of Boston, Mass., but at the end of ten months she had declined to such a degree that she was in a dying condition. This was in April, 1884. We took the child away not knowing what to do. In this dilemma we were over-persuaded by friends to try "one bottle" of SWIFT'S SPECIFIC, which we did, and before it had all been taken we saw a change for the better in her symptoms. We kept it up, and have done so to this day, and will keep it up, if the Lord wills, for many days to come, for it has brought our dying Hazel to life, to vigor, to strength and health again. The ashen hue of her cheeks turned to a rosy tint. She is able to walk anywhere, her languor and melancholy have passed away, and she is now a blithe, cheerful, happy, romping child. Should you wish to increase your testimonials of proof of the virtue of S. S. S., our names and what we have said is but a portion of what we owe to you, should you wish to use them.

Kindly Yours,
BEN. F. SWIFT,
GERTRUDE E. SWIFT.

"How's Your Liver?"

Those who have seen that popular comedy, "The Private Secretary," will never forget the wealthy uncle from India, who has suffered a thousand deaths from a torpid liver; indeed, his misery has been so terrible and so prolonged, that it has become the nightmare of his life. Every one he meets whether it be maid or man, is abruptly asked, "How your liver?" Although in many instances and circumstances the question may seem out of place, in view of the startling amount of misery, disease and death that springs directly from sluggish liver and an enfeebled digestion, this question should be brought face to face before every one. With a healthy, active vigorous liver, almost ever disease can be thrown off. With a diseased liver, and the baleful results that follow in its wake, viz.: indigestion, malnutrition, headache, heartburn, constipation, etc., disease readily gains a foothold, and rapidly brings about fatal results.

DR. R. C. FLOWER'S GREAT SCIENTIFIC

LIVER AND STOMACH SANATIVE

Quickly regulates the liver, invigorates the stomach, and vitalizes the general system. It is the one great specific for liver and stomach disorders that the nineteenth century has produced.

A Home with Four Sides.

A city home has its walls of stone,
  And its windows clear and fair,
Its solemn parlor, richly clad,
  Its halls and dizzy stair.

But it has no sides where the loving sun
  May peep here and there all day;
Its windows back look on gardens small,
  In front look—across the way.

But the little home where the roses run
  At will over angles four,
And a double share of the sunshine comes
  To lie on the cottage floor.

A home with its fragrant orchard side,
  And a home toward the forest, too,
An outlook over the winding road,
  And one for the mountains blue.

Its trodden paths, quite round the house,
  Where the patter of childish feet
In a mimic hunt, or a quick surprise,
  Shall be sure on the round to meet.

Its side-lights dim through the trailing vines
  That brighten the walls within,
Its nooks where moonlight peers a while,
  And the crickets softly din.

Ah! twice a home, as it seems to me,
  Is the country-builded nest,
Where its windows open north and south,
  And open, too, to the east and west.

A LEAP FOR LIFE.

"And where does this fair lilly of the Black Hills reside, Dick?"

"About an hour's gallop from our camp here, Leftinint. She is with her father—a queer old stick by the name of Clavering. He keeps by himself, and I am afeered he will yet come to harm. The cursed Sioux are about, and Rose would be a fine prize for some daring brave. It is said that the old man has dug piles of gold. He may have made his pile, or may not, but his darter—thunder! She's purtier than a prairie flower bending afore the mornin' breeze when sparklin' with dew."

"Bravo, my old scout! You have poetry and the love of the beautiful in your soul if you have never seen the inside of a school-house."

"It's leetle book-larnin' I have picked up, leftinint. But the works of nature and the handiwork of God I love," and the old man removed his slouch hat for a moment, exposing his gray locks, as he allowed the light breeze to fan his broad brow.

"Dick, what do you say if we gallop down to the camping spot of your friend. You have excited my curiosity regarding the mysterious beauty. I will tell the sergeant to look out during my absence, and he is fully competent to manage fifty men. We have been stationed here in the hills for over six weeks. I am tired, and must have a little recreation."

"You may get more than you bargain for. There's Injun signs about, and there's no tellin' what moment you may run into a Sioux camp among these infernal hills."

"Well, we'll take our chances. We are both well armed."

A sharp gallop of an hour brought the army officer and his companion to the banks of a small stream, and, riding to a group of stately trees, the scout reined up with a sharp cry of astonishment and alarm.

The tent of the solitary miner had disappeared. Naught remained but smoking ruins, and the unmistakable evidence of a desperate struggle having taken place.

Dismounting, the scout carefully went over the ground, while the officer watched him with a face expressive of sterness and a desire for vengence.

"There's only nine of 'em. But hark, there was a groan. If it should be Rose!" And rushing toward a clump of grass, the scout beheld the tall, gaunt form of a miner, from whose wounds the life-blood was oozing. "Clavering, poor fellow! has it come to this? I was afeered of it, and my words have come true."

"My time is short. I would speak of my daughter. The Sioux have captured her. The young chief of a war party tore her from my arms and dealt me my death-blow. But who is that with you?—my eyes are growing dim."

"It is Lieutenant Paul Welch, of the cavalry."

"Your hand, sir. Men of your profession are gentlemen. I once occupied the position of one myself. I have a package in my breast pocket that will explain all. I you recover my daughter give it to her, otherwise burn it as it is. It can interest no third party."

He was rapidly growing weaker, the eye was fixed, and the hoarse voice faltered:

"Chase the Sioux, recover poor Rose. She is a lady," he muttered, then with an effort he roused himself. "I have gold for her—look—great rock, cross, full moon, shadow—dig—" and with a rattle, a terrible gasp, the stout heart ceased to beat.

Possessing himself of the package, the officer penciled the vague words of the dying man on the back.

"Now for work, Dick. We'll bury poor Clavering, then follow on the trail of these red devils, and Rose shall either be rescued or avenged.

Mounting their horses the two sadly turned away, sallying forth upon the dark and silent prairie.

Suddenly the scout halted, and his hand pressed the arm of his superior with a nervous clutch.

"Look there, Leftinint. Do you know what that means?"

Just under the horizon a faint glow of light was perceptible, above which hung a black, threatening cloud, which rapidly spread over the heavens. Gradually the stars disappeared, while herds of wild mustangs, buffaloes and deer dashed by.

Then it was that the lieutenant recognized the danger he was in. The Sioux had fired the dry grass from three different points, and with gigantic leaps the billowy flames came rolling, hissing and roaring toward them.

But old Dick had not been idle. He was too old and experienced an Indian fighter to be outdone in the peculiar warfare of the frontier.

Leaping from his horse he struck a match and set fire to the prairie in his turn. Rapidly the flames spread, darting onward, sweeing everything in its path. Leading their horses forward, the two men followed close upon the track of the counter-fire, while every moment the number of half-frantic animals increased.

Stretching far away in front and and behind them the terrible crescent rapidly closed in upon the men. The glowing billows of writhing flame roared and thundered in their ears, smothering the cries of the poor animals, who perished by hundreds.

The air became firey hot, and the eddying volumes of smoke made it almost impossible for the two to breathe.

Their horses became almost unmanageable; they were obliged to cover their own heads as well as their beasts' with blankets. It was an awful moment of agonizing darkness, with a terrible heat blistering the exposed portions of their skins.

The earth shook beneath the mighty tread of an immense herd of buffalo, as they burst suddenly forth from the surrounding smoke. A muffled, indistinct cry of warning from Dick echoed for a moment in the ears of Paul Welch, and then he felt himself borne furiously along, his horse hemmed in on all sides by the furious animals.

Hours elapsed before he succeeded in extricating his gallant animal from the ranks of the buffaloes, and as he stood half-suffocated, his eyes all but powerless, the officer realized that he was alone in the midst of the smoking waste, hopelessly lost, surrounded by gloom and stifling odors, which rose incessantly from the blackened earth.

It was agony to remain stationary, and in hopes to gain a position where the smoke would be less blinding, he slowly urged his horse over the prairie, waiting and hoping for daylight to appear.

Gradually the atmosphere became clear, the stars peeped timidly forth above his head, while a long gray streak along the horizon gave token that daylight would soon dawn.

As objects became more and more distinct, the young officer was finally enabled to make out the rugged outlines, thick underbrush and peculiar formation of the Black Hills, into the lower portion of which his horse had wandered. Carefully he looked about him on all sides, but failed to recognize a single object. Everything was strange; but the fact occasioned no disquietude to the officer. He had every faith in the judgement of his scout, and it would not be many hours before the old veteran would be on his trail, followed by his faithful companions-in-arms.

He allowed his horse to browse on the fresh green verdure which had escaped the track of the fire, while he plunged into a profound reverie over the events of the last few hours.

The rumble of horses' feet, a ferocious yell, aroused the army officer to a full sense of the peril into which his absence of mind had partially betrayed him.

Pressing his regimental hat well down upon his forehead, loosening the sword in its scabbard, and feeling for his trusty revolvers, he dashed the spurs into his horse's sides, while in his rear followed half a dozen half-naked warriors, yelling like so many fiends.

The animal which Paul Welch bestrode had the reputation of both speed and endurance, qualities which were now likely to stand him in good need. The turf was soft and springy, the ascent gentle, and, having every faith in the well-tried animal, Paul allowed the howling rascals to gain upon him. He had emerged to the level plateau that had enabled him to take a survey of the surrounding country, interspersed here and there with scattering shrubs and trees.

Cantering leisurely toward him from opposite directions were two bodies of Sioux, and, with the band clattering in his rear, but one pathway remained open to the officer, who began to feel decidedly uncomfortable as he found his chances were rapidly narrowing down.

Dashing his spurs into his steed, he for the first time urged him to his speed. Bounding over a broad space of ground which led to a small valley lined on either side by rough, jagged rocks, the gallant animal struck sparks of fire as his hoofs spurned the light, gravelly bottom of the gulch.

A shout of triumph, a ferocious cry of joy burst from the throats of the warriors as they somewhat leisurely followed the broad trail.

Paul Welch did not understand the meaning of that hoarse indication of satisfaction which was wafted to his ears by the cool breath of the morning.

He thought it strange that no attempt was made to pick him off with their rifles, with which the Indians were well armed, and turning the matter over in his mind as he plunged deeper and deeper into a country where he was an utter stranger, he asked himself the question how it was all to end?

The path grew steeper with every bound of his panting steed, and in place of verdure and shrubbery, rocks, gravel and over-hanging boulders had taken their places.

The rush and sullen muttering of a deep mountain stream fell suddenly upon his ear, mingled with the yells of triumph which now burst from the warriors as they urged their ponies forward, rapidly narrowing the circle.

Halting for a moment on a smooth ledge of limestone, Paul took a rapid survey of the dangers which surrounded him on all sides. His stout heart all but failed him as he realized the trap into which he had run.

On three sides of him the painted Sioux were rapidly advancing, while before him yawned a precipice full sixty feet in height, at the bottom of which flowed the dark waters whose mutterings he heard.

Now he understood the meaning of these yells of triumph, realized why they had forborne from using their rifles. They anticipated an easy capture, and a victim was wanted to torture, whose ashes might be offered up as a sacrifice to the spirits supposed to reside amid the hills.

On came the warriors eager to pluck the fruits of their triumph, while the officer with a hasty prayer, plunged his spurs into the smoking flanks of his charger, guiding him to the edge of the precipice.

The warriors paused in wonder and amazement as they saw the act. They had calculated upon the precipice proving an unsurmountable obstacle to the escape of their intended victim, and they could not believe it to be the intention of the white man to attempt the awful leap, which to all appearance was certain death.

With his long hair streaming over his shoulders, feet firmly pressed in the stirrups, his left hand waving defiance to his foe, Paul urged the noble animal forward, encouraged by his voice, until they reached the edge of the bank, when again applying the spur they made the fearful leap.

Down, down they went with terrible velocity, without resistance or impediment. A plunge, a shiver, and, meeting the full force of the torrent, the steed was swept away, while Paul, despite his efforts, was carried down the stream as if he had been a feather.

His horse had disappeared amid the foaming rapids; the steep, precipitous sides of the rocky cliff debarred him from all hope of effecting a landing, and floating on his back, Paul held his strength in reserve.

The Indians had disappeared; the rough sides of the rocky gorge and a strip of the blue heavens above was all that he could discern as the current bore him he knew not whither. He thought of his distant home, his parents, his brother officers, the soldiers under his command, the scout, and the murdered miner's daughter in the power of the savages. Long-forgotten facts and reminiscences of the past crowded through his brain, and he could not believe that he was to perish in the unknown depths of the Black Hills, his fate enveloped in mystery.

A sudden sharp shock recalled him to himself. A whirling eddy had thrown him roughly against the sharp projecting side of the cliff, and catching at a crevice, he succeeded in gaining a foothold. Slowly and cautiously he drew himself up from point to point, until his head was on a level with the edge of the bank.

Cautiously he reconnoitered before drawing himself over the brink, but he saw nothing that gave evidence of an enemy, and once more he found himself in an unknown region of the Black Hills, minus his horse, with only his sabre and one revolver on which to rely.

The high ground where Paul found himself gradually sloped toward the broad and rolling prairie, forming a succession of ridges, skirting the steep sides of a hill. A confused hum, a low, hoarse cry reached his ears, and, with faculties sharpened by the danger through which he had passed, the army officer reconnoitered the depths below, of which he had an unobstucted view.

An Indian encampment with a number of warriors departing upon some expedition was revealed to his gaze, and as they disappeared, brandishing their long lances in the air, Paul determined to have a nearer look at the lodges.

Bringing into requisition his somewhat limited knowledge of woodcraft, Paul cautiously wormed his way through the tall grass until he reached a spring on the outskirts of the camp. It was surrounded by a thick growth of bushes, from the midst of which he could observe everything that transpired before him.

A number of warriors left to guard the camp lounged carelessly about, and Paul was on the point of withdrawing to the heights above, when he perceived a figure, evidently that of a woman, approaching in his direction.

She carried a calabash on her head, walking slowly and deliberately, the heart of the army officer beating with increased rapidity and excitement as he perceived that her costume was not that of a Sioux squaw.

Looking over her shoulder, the woman quickened her movements as she perceived that a number of warriors were watching her. A shout, a yell of rage, and the braves started in pursuit.

The fugitive, for such she undoubtedly was, immediately dropped the calabash, and sprang away with the swiftness of an antelope.

Paul noted the pale, golden hair, beautiful features and rounded form of the fugitive, whom he made up his mind could be no less than Rose, the far-famed daughter of the slaughtered miner.

There was little time to think, as the fair fugitive sped rapidly along, the warriors in close pursuit.

Swift though she was, the foremost warrior had all but overtaken her as she reached the opposite side of the spring, and he was in the act of hurling his lance as Paul levelled his revolver and fired.

The brave passed to the happy hunting-grounds of his people without a cry; but the shot had alarmed the camp, and for a few moments all was confusion.

Rose had uttered a faint cry as she caught a glimpse of Paul, but never relaxed her speed, while the army officer, as he beheld the the Indians mounting and preparing for a fight, rapidly retreated in hopes to find a more advantageous position where a stand could be made.

He had but little hopes of saving his life, the odds were far too great; but if he could cover the retreat of the girl, who evidently knew the country better than he did, and enable her to reach a place of safety, he would die satisfied.

His sabre flashed in his right hand. securely fastened to his wrist by a leather strap, upon which he could depend after exhausting the contents of his revolver.

He had reached one of the ridges along which ran a fringe of bushes, when a low, familiar call reached his ear.

"Keep on, Liftinint; don't turn your head. We are here, sargeant and all. The gal is safe. So—here they come."

On swooped the Sioux in all the glory of war paint and feathers. With lances in rest, uttering shrill cries, they rapidly closed in on Paul, when a sharp word of command, the flash of rifles, followed by riderless horses galloping to and fro, and all was over.

Charging upon the lodges, the soldiers met the body of braves who had turned back, alarmed by the noise that they had heard. A short but sharp engagement followed; the band was completely broken up, and the lodges burned, after which the troops prepared to bivouac themselves and rest awhile on their laurels.

Dick assumed full charge of Rose, who mourned the loss of her father, and to whose care Paul delivered the sealed package containing the secret of the old miner.

By the fitful blaze of the campfire, amid the solitude of the frowning Black Hills, Roger Clavering's true history was revealed.

He had once been a wealthy and respected merchant of Chicago, but a younger brother forged large amounts in his name and fled, leaving him to face the storm alone. The younger brother had been his mother's pet, and on her death-bed Roger had promised to protect and shield him. Nobly he redeemed the word he had given. The brother came out of the trial broken in fortune and reputation, his wife dead, with nothing left him but the little waif of a daughter.

With her he removed to the far west, beyond the pale of civilization, pursuing the occupation of hunter and Indian trader, peacefully gliding down the stream of life, watching his daughter blooming into a handsome and by no means uncultivated woman. Then the excitement of the Black Hills spread far and wide; he followed in the track of others, and the sad final has already been told.

Dick then related how he had been separated from the lieutenant, and knowing the danger he incurred by scouting over the prairie along, he rejoined the soldiers starting on the trail of his superior.

Everything was plain up to the very verge of the precipice, when it was evident Paul had made the desperate leap. Then Dick was in doubt wheather his superior was alive or not. But following the course of the river as a forlorn hope, they had fortunetely reached the ambush. in time to save both Rose and Paul's life.

Nothing now remained but to find the treasure which Clavering had obtained at such a sacrifice, and many an hour of anxious thought had Paul expended on the subject. There was but little to guide him—a vague hint that might mean nothing—still, for the sake of the orphan, he persevered. "Great rock — cross — full moon — shadow dig.

Rose was consulted, but she knew nothing of the haunts of her father, and absolutely nothing of a great rock or cross.

Accompanied by the entire force of cavalrymen under the direction of Dick, a thorough search was instituted in the vicinity of the old miser's last resting-place.

In a small gully running into the side of a precipitous hill a huge rock was finally found, surmounted by a rude representation of a cross.

At the full of the moon Paul and Dick secretly repaired to the spot prepared to unearth the buried gold, and, noting the extremity of the shadow cast by the rough cross, the two men commenced their labors.

They were crowned with success, and four large canvas bags of gold dust and nuggets were dragged forth.

It was the fortune of Rose Clavering, and Paul, with his escort, conveyed her to the nearest military post, where she was to remain until he could obtain leave of absence, and travel with her to the East in hopes of finding some of her relatives.

Months elapsed before he was enabled to carry out his plans; but when he reached Chicago no trace of the name of Clavering remained. The machinery of the police and was law put in motion, but with no satisfactory result.

Every moment of his leave was expended in the search, and when he sought Rose at her hotel, his heart heavy and sad at the prospect of parting with her, she listened in silence to Paul's regrets at his failure to find her friends, but started impetuously to her feet when he added that, with the dawn of another day, he must return to his post and duty.

Her face flushed and paled as she strove in vain to speak, her bosom rose and fell convulsively, and but for the strong arm of the officer, Rose would have fallen to the floor.

His visit was prolonged. What passed between them is known only to themselves, but soon after the war department received First Lieutenant Paul Welch's resignation, and in place of returning to the post amid the savage Sioux he engaged double passage for the more congenial climate of Europe, with Rose as his young, blushing bride.

A lady who has been abroad was describing some of the sights of her trip, to her friends. "But what pleased me the most of anything," she continued, "was the Strasburg clock." "Oh, how I should love to see it," gushed a sweet companion. "I am so interested in such foreign sights. And did you see the watch on the Rhine, too?"—Troy Press.

Mistress—Lina, who was the man I saw in your company last evening?" Lina—"He was a distant brother of mine."—Frankfurter Zeitung.

An Untimely Thought.

Though on the snow the moonlight lies,
A lovelier light in Fanny's eyes
  Her Edward sees,
And as she nestles close beside
Him, fondly gives his future bride.
  Another squeeze.

The music of the jingling bells,
Unheard by them, their rapture tells,
  And when their steed—
Maybe to hear the lovers talk—
Drops down into a lazy walk,
  They take no heed.

They jingle on in perfect bliss,
Exchanging now and then a kiss,
  As lovers will,
Till Edward starts in sad dismay,
And wonders how he'll ever pay
  The stable-bill.

A TRIP TO SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

Correspondence of the JOURNAL.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., JAN. 2, 1888.

Your Palmer residents met with no particular adventures on the trip. In New York state good sleighing was the rule and the Chicago air was crisp, cold and smoky, as usual. Through Iowa and at Omaha the thermometer was 15° to 20° below zero; and it was the most biting kind of cold; worse than anything we ever encountered in Massachusetts. We left Omaha on the "Overland Flyer," one hour late, and made good time through Nebraska, which is too monotonous and a bleak place to live in, dreadfully cold in winter, and terribly hot in summer. The sleeping-car porter, black as ink and a native of Virginia, said "there was no fun in this country, all work and no amusement, back East it was different." Miles and miles, in fact all night, all day, another night and another day through the wastes of Wyoming and Nebraska at thirty miles an hour, simply a wholesale lot of nothing. No towns of any consequence, now and then a lonesome looking ranch. It would be sufficient punishment for evil doers to send them to this country.

The third night from Omaha, at 3.30 in the morning, we got up to see Truckee, Cal., which is just on the edge of the California side of the Sierra Nevada mountains. Truckee is the trading point for a considerable mining region, and is a typical town of early California times. The liquor saloons are many and are never closed. Truckee has a specialty and that is snow. The day before we reached there it snowed over four feet deep, and it lay five feet on the level. Looking out, it was half way up to the car windows where it had been plowed out. There are thirty-five miles of snow sheds hereabouts. At present putting up ice for all California is a great business at Truckee; one firm is now loading 100 car loads a day, besides storing a large quantity. Five hours after we left Truckee we came to the celebrated fruit country, Placer, and saw the first oranges on its own tree. Many years ago a party of 50 from Missouri started overland with their cattle and worldly possessions for California and at Truckee were buried in thirty feet of snow, and but one person survived. It is a good place to avoid in winter.

The ride from Sacramento to Los Angeles, the greater part through a series of valleys seventy-five miles wide, is grand. A railroad through such a country, where it never freezes, level and straight as an arrow, is a sight to behold and makes a New Englander open his eyes with astonishment.

Los Angeles (pronounced by the natives as in anger, "Los Angerles") is crowded with a mixture of all that is good and bad.

Some portions of it are beautiful and picturesquely laid out. A good portion of it is cheap and miserable. The people say that they cannot keep up with the increase of business; it is probably true. Sunday in Los Angeles is not a New England Sabbath by any means. Circuses and stores are in full blast and the streets are alive with toughs and "cheap tourists." Good living at reasonable prices is not to be found. We have not seen decent potatoes or milk in this section of the state.

The climate may be healthy, but we very much doubt it. So long as one remains in the sun it is warm and nice; out of the sun it is like New England spring time, raw and chilly. Overcoats, heavy flannels and seal skin cloaks are quite as essential here as in New England. The natives say the winters grow colder here. Nine people out of ten have colds at this time.

We went out to Pasadena to-day; it is a lovely place. Land a mile from the business center is held at $40 a front foot. People of moderate means can figure out what a hundred-acre farm is worth in that section. Real estate dealers are everywhere, both in Los Angeles and Pasadena, and everywhere else in this section, we are told, the people seem to think all christendom is coming here and expect a crowd of millionaires on every train.

From a brief glance hereabouts we can only say that if people are wealthy enough to pay the prices asked, those now holding property can easily make fortunes. There doesn't seem to be any particular business in this section excepting the real estate business, and if people will persist in buying what they have never seen, as happens a good deal, and come here, as many do, without ever looking before they pack up, why so long as the eastern surplus lasts one will have to commence at the tail end of a line of men and women extending from a small hole in the wall to the sidewalk, and along the same a number of rods, and have the pleasure of waiting from two to thirty minutes for a letter, as I did at the post-office this morning. There is much in this country to see and learn about, and every New Englander ought to come and see for himself, bu when figuring up probable expenses reckon 25 cents for a decent shave.

More about lovely Panadena later on.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, JANUARY 20, 1888.

SPEAKER CARLISLE is suffering from a congestive chill and overwork, and is not likely to resume his duties in Congress for some little time. Representative Cox of New York has been chosen speaker pro tem.

INDIANA is to erect a notable monument to her soldiers and sailors. It will cost $250,000, much more than anything else of the kind in the country, except the Washington monument, and will be a noble memorial.

JUDGE DEWEY is receiving a good deal of commendation for sentencing a burglar to 15 years in state prison, at Pittsfield the other day. If other judges would follow suit, the burglar's profession would become amazingly unpopular.

IF anything were needed to make a New Englander thankful even for the rigors of winter in this latitude, the story of the late terrible blizzards in the Northwest ought to be sufficient. With all its climatic eccentricities New England is a winter Paradise in comparison with that country where blizzards in winter and cyclones in summer walk hand in hand with Death.

THE prohibitory amendment to the constitution bids fair to go through the Legislature this winter with a rush. The committee on constitutional amendments reported it to the Senate this week and it has been passed promptly by that branch, while the Republicans of the House held a conference yesterday and decided almost unanimously to support it.

BOTH houses of the Mississippi Legislature adopted a resolution the other day expressing their gratification at the nomination of Mr. Lamar to the bench of the U. S. supreme court, and praising his exalted patriotism, etc. In the next breath they extended a joint invitation to Jefferson Davis to visit the capitol with his family, and address both bodies,—a suggestive commentary on their ideas of what constitutes "exalted patriotism."

AFTER a month's delay, the United States Senate on Monday confirmed the nomination of Mr. Lamar to the supreme court by a vote of 32 to 28, all but three Republicans voting against him. The nominations of Messrs. Vilas and Dickinson, to the interior and post office departments respectively, were confirmed at the same time. Mr. Lamar took the oath of office and entered upon his duties Wednesday, the court then having a full bench for the first time in nearly three years.

WITH all the talk of a coal famine in consequence of the strike of the Reading and Lehigh Valley miners, it is stated on good authority that the supply of coal now on hand and that can be mined is much more than ample to meet any demand, regardless of these companies, and any advance in prices by dealers is altogether arbitrary. The entire output of anthracite coal last month was 3,068,078 tons, against 2,811,350 tons in December, 1886, while the total production for 1887 was 34,641,017 tons, against 32,136,362 in 1886, an increase of over 2,500,000 tons.

THE DEADLY BLIZZARD.

The West furnishes this week a story of suffering and death which has never been equalled from a similar cause, the nearest approach to it being in 1873, when 70 persons were frozen to death and a large quantity of property was destroyed. This year fully 250 persons have perished, and there is much suffering among the survivors. For the past week the cold has been intense in the West, the mercury dropping to 50° and even 62° below zero, Dakota, Minnesota and Nebraska suffering the worst. In Dakota the weather was as fine as could be wished for up to last week Wednesday, when about noon the storm appeared, and at five o'clock the mercury was 15° below, with a heavy snow storm and a high wind. A man's voice could not be heard six feet away, and objects 40 feet away could not be seen. Farmers who had gone to town were caught in the storm on their way home and frozen to death, school children who attempted to leave the building for their homes never reached them, while horses and cattle were frozen by hundreds. Two men who only went 40 rods from a house for some hay were frozen before they could return, and several were lost while going from their houses to the barn, only a few rods away. All the railroads in Dakota and Minnesota, and many in Iowa, Nebraska and Wisconsin were blocked by the snow, telegraph wires were down, and it was late last week before any idea could be had of the extent of the storm, which extended from Canada to the Gulf, with the same sad story all along the line. At Austin, Texas, the mercury dropped 46° in an hour, and in four hours was lower than at any time since 1864. There is a great scarcety of fuel and provisions at many places, and more deaths will probably occur from cold and starvation.

At Sherbrooke, Canada, on the evening of December 30, as the moon arose, a large ring appeared around it. To the north and south of the moon were two bright spots like sections of a rainbow, the colors being quite distinct. Directly on the moon there was a cross, the upright part extending to the ring, the arms about half the way.

The Boston chief of police made a big haul last Friday night when he arrested eight of a gang who have committed a large number of robberies in that vicinity during the past three months.

A bill has been introduced into the New York Legislature giving saloons the right to sell beer and light wines on certain hours Sunday afternoon, while being outwardly closed.

James Lockwood, an old resident of Hartford and a member of the well-known printing firm of Case, Lockwood & Brainard, died last Friday. He was 74 years old.

"Little Rhody" deals with illegal liquor sellers severely. One who had persistently defied the prohibitory law has been fined $1200 and sent to jail for 10 months.

New York is to make a determined effort to clean out the bucket shops in that city.

PALMER AND VICINITY.

To-morrow is civil term at the district court.

More snow Tuesday and excellent sleighing.

Progressive eucher parties are numerous just at present.

Miss Ada G. Wing has been spending the week at Newport, R. I.

About thirty-four couples, composed of the members of Palmer Lodge, I. O. O. F., and Good Cheer Lodge, Daughters of Rebekah, enjoyed the first local sleigh-ride of the season Monday evening, going to Belchertown, where the party were treated with the usual hospitality of Landlord Fuller at the Belcher House. A fine supper was served to the merry guests, and a social dance followed. The party arrived home at an early hour Tuesday morning.

Rev. F. W. Betts, pastor of St. Paul's Universalist church, has been granted a leave of absence for three months, and his pulpit will be supplied during that time. For about a year Mr. Betts has had considerable trouble with his eyes, until now the sight of the right one is nearly gone, and experts say there is very little hope of saving it. Rest, quiet and a change of air are necessary if the eye can be benefitted at all, and his church at once gave him a vacation. His many friends sympathize deeply with him in this affliction.

The reading by Prof. Hibbard Wednesday evening, the second entertainment in the high school course, was well attended and proved of the highest order. His selections were nearly all new to Palmer people, and the rendition of them showed that the speaker fully understood the character of his pieces. His rendition of "The Bells" was excellent, and the first fable from "Webster's Spellin' Book" was greatly appreciated by the elder portion of the audience. The next entertainment will be given a week from next Tuesday evening, by the Fry Concert Company of Boston.

WHAT THE FIRE ALARM IS GOOD FOR.

The electric fire alarm was tested about 11.45 Wednesday forenoon. For some time there has been a desire among property owners to see it tried at a time when no one was expecting it, to see how many men would respond. Box 57 was struck at the time above stated, the regulation four rounds being rung. In seven minutes only four men had put in appearance, and in fifteen minutes only seven out the 35 firemen reported at the engine house for duty. A careful inquiry finds about one man in 15 in the village who heard the alarm at all, and some of them thought it was the town clock striking for noon. Others thought they were regulating the clock, which had been somewhat "off" for several days, and only about one in twenty of those who did hear it thought it was an alarm of fire. The alarm was pulled in by Assistant Engineer Hitchcock after repeated requests to do so at some time, and clearly shows that as a means of arousing the firemen and citizens the present fire alarm is "no good." It strikes too nearly like the town clock. What is wanted is some bell that is different toned from the one heard so many times a day. A good deal of dissatisfaction is expressed about the matter, which will probably be heard from at the annual meeting of the fire district.

ILLEGAL LIQUOR SELLERS.

A bombshell of considerable size was thrown into the ranks of the liquor dealers last Saturday night by the serving of 38 warrants by Sheriff Healey, charging illegal sales, the list being as follows: Patrick Kennedy, 2 cases; James F. Fenton, 2; James Lynch, 2; William Thompson, 2; John Feeney, 4; C. P. Stone, 2; Frank Nelson, 2; Walter L. Ripley, 2; C. A. Severance, 5; S. L. Ferry, 1; Michael Foley, 3; Kate O'Connor of Thorndike, 2; Michael Sullivan, alias Michael Slatterly of Duckville, 3; John Madden, 6. The warrants were sworn out by G. A. Wright of the prosecuting committee, the complaint being sales made to different parties last September. It seems there were three spotters at work about that time, H. G. Brewer, Charles T. Clark and William P. Drury of Boston, and their heaviest work was done September 13 and 14, cattle show days, the cases being held until now because of Judge Robinson's inability to attend to them. The cases came up before the district court Tuesday afternoon, C. L. Gardner appearing for the prosecution, and S. S. Taft for the defendants. Those of William Thompson were taken up, and it took all the afternoon to hear the evidence and pleas, decision being reserved until to-morrow.

THE NORTH END CLUB OF SPRINGFIELD AT THE WEEKS HOUSE.

The North End Club of Springfield was entertained at the Weeks House Wednesday evening by Landlord Weeks, who did the honors of the occasion in his usual happy manner. The visitors arrived in Palmer by special train at 9.15, and proceeded at once to the hall of the hotel, where the Palmer Orchestra furnished music for dancing until 10.30, when an intermission was announced and the party adjourned to the dining room, where an excellent supper was served. After supper dancing was continued until past midnight, when the party boarded the train and arrived home early Thursday morning. Among the number who were present were the following gentlemen, the majority of whom were accompanied by their wives: G. F. Blelock, A. F. Ball, L. W. Brown, S. S. Bumstead, A. Blodgett, F. Bariel, W. Blelock, B. M. Crane, W. A. Castel, L. Z. Cutler, John Crane, C. E. Caldwell, J. E. Damon, J. E. Frink, G. E. Frink, F. H. Foster, W. A. Fuller, E. E. Fiske, H. A. Hamilton, A. C. Harvey, J. E. Matthewson, H. E. Marsh, M. N. Marsh, H. M. McGregory, C. C. Morrill, H. L. Niles, A. S. Norris, John McDonald, Charles Hall, R. H. Smith, C. J. Sauderson, J. E. Shipman, George Warwick, D. G. Webster, D. C. Warner, Henry Wright, H. Tucker and others.

There was a large gathering in Rev. Mr. Howard's church last Friday night to see about forming a grange. Henry A. Barton, Jr., of Dalton, and Herbert Myrick of Springfield were the speakers, and considerable interest was manifested. A committee of 14 was appointed to see what could be done about organizing a grange.

BRIMFIELD.

The Ladies' Benevolent Society held a sociable at the vestry of the First church Thursday, with readings, recitations, music, etc.

Early in the week bills were posted announcing that "The Bric-a-Bracs of Brimfield will hold their third social dance in the town hall, Thursday evening, January 19; your company with ladies, solicited. Music by Messinger's orchestra, A. A. Bricknell of Worcester, prompter. Dancing from 8 to 2." The novelty of the announcement attracted attention. A graduate of one of our colleges when asked what Bric-a-Brac meant, answered, "Parlor Ornaments;" another versed in educational matters, said it meant "a useless collection; a third said if so, there must be more than one, as it is announced in the plural form. Webster defines bric-a-brac as "a miscellaneous collection, particularly of antiquarian or artistic curiosities," whether they appear in antiquarian or artistic costume is not known. Curiosity has been on the tip toe of expectation which was not gratified until the evening announced.

WARREN.

The ice men are getting in their ice.

Mr. Clapp has taken a position in the new Boston store.

Notwithstanding the severe cold, a large number of houses are being built.

At the annual meeting of the Warren Thief Detective Society, it was voted to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary by having a supper at the new hotel.

At the annual meeting of the Congregational church Mr. A. L. Converse was chosen deacon, but declined serving. The matter was postponed for one week, as was also the election of other officers.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

A party of ten took a sleigh-ride to Springfield Wednesday night, to hear the Ruggles street quartette at City hall.

The Catholic society here is to form a church fund society, each member pledging himself to pay twenty-five cents weekly, and it is expected that a church building will be erected the coming summer.

A. W. Lyman, the genial driver on Collin's stage line, was married Wednesday evening to Miss Julia, daughter of W. M. Green, at her home in East Wilbraham. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. R. Cushing.

The ladies of the Glendale M. E. church will give an oyster supper next Tuesday evening, if pleasant. If not, then the next fair evening. Vocal and instrumental music will be furnished, and a good time is guaranteed to all.

Chauncey P. Brewer of Ludlow, who went to California last fall for his health, died there Saturday. He was for some years employed in the grist and paper mills here, and for two years ran a milk wagon in this village. He was a member of Newton Lodge of Masons at Wilbraham, and had a large circle of friends. The body will be brought home.

The severe storm Tuesday made the Grace church ladies look blue, but a good crowd turned out to the bean supper and pound party, and the "pounds" and the table articles brought good prices. Brother Wall made a name for himself as an auctioneer, the receipts were nearly $35, and everyone went home with the rosy hue of happiness on their faces, though it is said that the man who bid off a pound of saleratus for twenty-five cents was sick next day.

THORNDIKE.

John Barker is ill at his home.

A movement is on foot to try and start a local minstrel troupe.

The revival services at the Methodist church have been continued this week with good results. There will be services held at the church Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Henry Miller was given a leap year surprise by a number of his young lady friends last Friday. After passing an enjoyable evening the ladies escorted the gents home in true leap year style.

The ladies of the Universalist church will give a sociable in Central Hall next Tuesday evening. Supper will be served from 6 to 8 o'clock, followed by a farce, entitled "My Awful Aunt."

The music-loving public of this place are to be congratulated on the opportunity offered them of hearing the Ladies' Schubert Quartette of Boston, with a reader, under the auspices of the Y. M. S. Club. The enterprise and spirit shown by the club deserves full recognition by the public, and they should be a good record for the opening sale of tickets Monday.

The slippery walking has made pedestrians very cautious, but notwithstanding several quite serious falls are reported. On Tuesday Miss Mary Ward had her wrist broken. John Flynt was quite severely injured, and Patrick Olden of No. Monson was severely cut about the face by a lantern which he was carrying at the time. A. H. Danforth is also a sufferer from a fall.

Dr. P. R. Watts and two young ladies were thrown from a sleigh last Saturday. Dr. Watts was dragged some distance by the horse, and was quite severely injured by colliding with a stone culvert near the library. The ladies fortunately escaped without serious injury. The horse tore himself loose from the sleigh, which was considerably demoralized, and continued his run until he reached State Line, where he was stopped.

Mrs. D. A. Field died at her home Tuesday afternoon, after an illness of only a few days. She was 71 years of age, and leaves a husband, one son, Edward A. Field of Los Angeles, Cal., one daughter, Mrs. Carrie F. Fuller, wife of Dr. G. E. Fuller, one sister, Miss Fanny Crocker of this place, two brothers, Stoughton and Daniel Crocker of Amherst. The funeral services were held Thursday afternoon, Rev. F. S. Hatch officiating. Mrs. Field was a tender wife, a most devoted mother, a loving sister, a true friend and neighbor. Not only was her home life exceptionally pure and true, but all her intercourse with friends and neighbors was of the same character, and it can truly be said of her, "None knew her but to love her, or named her but to praise."

William N. Flynt is erecting a fountain on his newly made lawn north of his residence, composed of high boulders and large moss-covered, jagged, and irregular shaped stone, piled up to the height of seventeen feet in a basin of water twenty feet in diameter and some three feet deep, surrounded by a border two feet wide, and will be stocked with tulips, hyacinths and ivy in summer. The rock work is fourteen feet in diameter at the base, and is made of large ragged rocks, weighing tons each, and other large stones so arranged that no pinning is visible in the construction, which gives the whole a very rustic appearance. The fountain is capped with a large white stone 5 feet high, 3 feet by 3 at the base, composed of feldspar, quartz, and mica. Through this passes an inch pipe, supplied with water from a reservoir. It is expected that in a few weeks the whole structure will be covered with a massive coating of ice some thirty feet high.

WARE AND VICINITY.

| Miss Benton................ | Minne Winslow |
| Miss Allen................ | Lizzie Fisherdick |
| Richard Carnes............ | George Sanford |
| Charlie Benton............ | W. G. Cummings |
| Abel Benton............ | J. H. Fletcher |
| Joe Leighton, "Scraps"....... | N. J. Trench |

The entertainment will close with the farce "A Close Shave."

The Owls are getting ready for their second annual concert and ball, which is to be held at the town hall, Friday evening, February 3d. They have secured Brigham's orchestra of Marlboro to furnish the music, and the concert which they give will be enjoyed by all who attend. Those who were present at their concert and ball last year will know that this ball will be one of the finest of the season. They are to have a turkey supper at the Hampshire House.

Sunday evening the Congregational chapel was well filled. Miss Carrie Hunt of the New West Educational Bureau gave a very interesting address on the situation of affairs in Utah, with incidents in her life as a teacher there, and also of her visits among the Mormon people. All who were present seemed deeply interested, and proved the sincerity of their feelings in the contribution, which amounted to a little over $46. Miss Hunt's former home was in Barre.

The county commissioneers gave a hearing Tuesday in the case of Mrs. S. J. Wetherell, who makes a claim for $1500 for land damage for $\frac{3}{8}$ of an acre taken in the construction of the Central Massachusetts Railroad. Several owners of real estate were brought in to estimate the value of land in that part of the town, and estimates varied from $400 to $1000. The company had offered to settle for $450. The judgment of the commissioners was reserved for a few days.

The incendiary-blackmail case gets no less mysterious. W. N. McNamara has given to the public over a column of statements and queries in support of his actions, claiming the article sworn to as true was "the most glaring and silly combination of lies he had ever seen published," and denies he has ever retracted a word of the statements he has made. Each party claims to tell the truth and each claims the other lies. And still the public are no nearer, as far as can be judged, in finding out who set the fires in days past. McNamara still remains in town, and seems in no haste to leave, referring the public to the selectmen of six towns, for whom he has worked, as to his reputation as a detective and a man. We are promised that the end is not yet, and so we have only to wait for further developments,

LEGISLATIVE DOINGS.

From our Special Correspondent.

BOSTON, JAN. 18, 1888.

Thursday's developments were noticeable. The committee on constitutional amendments determined that it was not necessary to have any hearing on the question of a prohibitory amendment, that the members were familiar with all the facts in the case, and arguments, too, and that they would report the resolve favorably on the following Tuesday, which was done. Thus the Legislature hopes to drive business along promptly.

But other efforts are being made to the same end. Mr. Gile of Worcester proposes to have a constitutional amendment to limit the length of the session, and Mr. Walworth of Newton put in an order for the immediate reporting to the Legislature of all subjects which were the subject of consideration last year and have come up again. Then, too, it is proposed to publish a daily journal of each branch.

Thus early in the session the matter of parochial schools has been brought up by an order of Mr. Barrett of Melrose, that the board of education report what the facts are in regard to the inspection and efficiency of private schools.

A change in the Sunday law is proposed, so that barbers' shops may be open a reasonable time on the Lord's day.

It all depends on the good sense of the House how far they will follow the precedent set on Friday of meeting at eleven o'clock, so as to allow the western members to get the afternoon trains home. If they set their forces against it later in the session, when business is driving, it will do no harm to take their indulgence now, but if they have a common understanding that Friday afternoon will not amount to much, then it will be so much the worse for the business. The legislators cannot be too virtuous as to their faithfulness to their public duties. I know of a member this year, whose special request of the speaker was that he should not be put on a committee where there was much work to do. Members often forget that they are sent here to do hard work. Too often they seem to think that they are elected for the honor of it, and that they may strut around among their constituents.

Friday's transactions were not of much importance, except in measures introduced. It is proposed to put the screws on the owners of disorderly houses, as well as on their occupants; also to prevent lottery companies from other states operating here.

A resolution favorable to international arbitration was presented in the Senate.

Monday's session in each branch consisted in the introduction of new business, for it was yet too early for any committee reports. Among the matters introduced in the two branches were these: As to giving the district police power to enter and examine pawn shops; closing liquor saloons on public holidays; as to appropriating $200,000 for a new state building at Waltham for a school for the feeble-minded; making the sanitary laws for workshops and factories apply to all places where persons are employed; prohibiting the payment of poll taxes by political parties; for biennial state elections and biennial sessions of the Legislature; printing a daily journal of the two branches.

Tuesday afternoon the committee on constitutional amendments reported the much-agitated prohibitory constitutional amendment. Three of the committee, Senator Crosby of Berkshire, and Representatives Blume and Flynn of Boston, dissent. The resolve and amendment are as follows;

RESOLVED, by both houses, that it is expedient to alter the constitution of this Commonwealth by the adoption of the subjoined article of amendment; and that the said article, being agreed by a majority of the Senators and two-thirds of the members of the House of Representatives, present and voting thereon, be entered on the journals of both houses, with the yeas and the nays taken thereon, and referred to the general court next to be chosen; and that the said article be published, to the end that if agreed to in the manner provided by the constitution, by the general court next to be chosen, it may be submitted to the people for their approval and ratification, in order that it may become a part of the constitution of the Commonwealth.

Article of Amendment.

The manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage are prohibited. The general court shall exact suitable legislation to enforce this prohibition.

Important measures were introduced into the Legislature Tuesday afternoon. They propose to repeal the weekly payments law; to allow no woman or minor to be employed over ten hours a day in any mercantile establishment; to extend to children up to 16 years the law now applying to those up to 14 who cannot read or write the English language, in regard to their education and employment; to have all realestate deeds recorded within 60 days of their date; to allow no woman or minor to be employed where liquor is sold, and to repeal the civil service law applying to common laborers in the employ of cities.

On Wednesday the special investigating committee of the Legislature of 1887 made its report to the Legislature of 1888 upon the subject of the labor and education of children who work in factories and other like establishments. It is an exhaustive report, and finds that children are employed below the legal age by the deception practiced by themselves and by their parents for them. Great need exists for further restriction, and the committee reports two bills of much length, one of which relates to the labor of children and the other to their education, the object of both of which is to prevent the overworking of young children, and to insure them an education.

The committee also takes up the question of private (parochial) schools, and insists strongly that the good of the people demands that they be brought up to the standard of the present public schools. It suggests methods of examination by public authorities, that these schools may be kept up to a reasonable standard. Mr. McEttrick of Boston dissents from this part of the report, and it looks as if the contest over the parochial school issue might be precipitated by this matter. He has been given till February 1 in which to make his dissenting report. LANDON.

For 30 years I have been troubled with catarrh—have tried a number of remedies without relief. A druggist here recommended Ely's Cream Balm. I have used only one bottle and I can say I feel like a new man. My catarrh was chronic and very bad. I make this voluntary statement that others may know of the Balm.—J. W. Mathewson, (Lawyer), Pawtucket, R. I.

Two bottles of Ely's Cream Balm cured the wife of a well-known U. S. A. General and also two army officers in Arizona of catarrh. Price 50 cents. Pleasant to use. 2w42

Advice to Mothers.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Some Things Learned by Experience.

That a tablespoonful of salt thrown on a coal fire that is low, will cause it to burn up quickly. That you can clean oil cloth with milk and water; while soap and brush will ruin it. That the skin of a boiled egg is the best remedy you can apply to a boil. That you can't cure Rheumatism or Neuralgia without taking Menard's Rheumatic Bullets. That you can buy them of LeGro & Lynde for $1.00 per bottle. eow7

THE VERDICT UNANIMOUS.

W. D. Sult, Druggist, Bippus, Ind., testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of Rheumatism of 10 years' standing." Abraham Hare, druggist, Bellville, Ohio, affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years' experience, is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys or Blood. Only a half dollar a bottle at LeGro & Lynde's Drug Store. 2

A WOMAN'S DISCOVERY.

"Another wonderful discovery has been made, and that too by a lady in this county. Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly, and could not sleep. She bought of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night and with one bottle has been miraculously cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus write W. C. Hamrich & Co., of Shelby, N. C.—Get a free trial bottle at LeGro & Lynde's Drug Store.

WHAT AM I TO DO?

The symptoms of Biliousness are unhappily too well known. They differ in different individuals to some extent. A bilious man is seldom a breakfast eater. To frequently, alas, he has an excellent appetite for liquids but none for solids of a morning. His tongue will hardly bear inspection at any time; if it is not white and furred, it is rough, at all events.

The digestive system is wholly out of order and Diarrhoæ or Constipation may be a symptom or they may alternate. There are often Hemorrhoids or even loss of blood. There may be giddiness and often headache and acidity or flatulence and tenderness in the pit of the stomach. To correct all this if not effect a cure try Green's August Flower, it costs but a trifle and thousands attest its efficacy.

THE NEW YORK

Mail and Express

THE ADVOCATE OF THE BEST INTERESTS OF THE HOME—THE ENEMY OF THE SALOON. THE FRIEND OF AMERICAN LABOR. THE FAVORITE NEWSPAPER OF THE PEOPLE OF REFINED TASTES EVERYWHERE.

The New York Mail and Express, the favorite American newspaper of many people of intelligent and cultivated tastes, has recently made some noteworthy improvements, materially increasing its general excellence. It is in the broadest sense most carefully edited, and adapted to the wants and tastes of intelligent readers throughout the entire country—North, South, East and West. It is a thoroughly clean paper, free from corrupting, sensational and demoralizing trash, miscalled news, which defiles the pages of too many city papers.

A NATIONAL NEWSPAPER,

Our Politics.

We believe the Republican party to be the true instrument of the Political Progress of the American people; and holding that the honest enforcement of its principles is the best guarantee of the national welfare, we shall support them with all our might; but we shall always treat opposing parties with consideration and fair play.

Against the Saloon.

The Mail and Express is the recognized National organ of the great Anti-Saloon Republican movement. It believes that the liquor traffic as it exists to-day in the United States is the enemy of society, a fruitful source of corruption in politics, the ally of anarchy, a school of crime, and, with its avowed purpose of seeking to corruptly control elections and legislation, is a menace to the public welfare and deserves the condemnation of all good men.

HAVE YOU HEARD

What AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has done and is doing for thousands in the cure of Colds, Coughs, Pneumonia, Bronchitis and even Consumption? For this class of complaint, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral stands far ahead of all other specifics.

George W. Dick, of Newton, Mass., says: "Two years ago I took a severe cold, which, being neglected, was followed by a ### Terrible Cough.

I lost flesh rapidly, had night sweats, and was soon confined to my bed. A friend advised the use Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I began to take this medicine and, before finishing the first bottle, was able to sit up. Four bottles effected a perfect cure."

SULPHUR BITTERS

THE BEST AND PUREST MEDICINE EVER MADE.

TRUTHS FOR THE SICK.

It will drive the Humor from your system, and make your skin clean and smooth. Those Pimples and Blotches which mar your beauty are caused by impure blood, and can be removed in a short time, if you are wise and use the great blood purifier, SULPHUR BITTERS.

DON'T GIVE UP!

What makes you tremble so? Your nerves are all unstrung, and need a gentle, soothing tonic to assist nature to repair the damage which your excesses have caused. Sulphur Bitters is NOT a cheap rum or poor whisky drink, to be taken by the glass, like other preparations, which stimulate only to destroy. Why suffer with Boils? Why rave with that terrible headache? Why lay and toss on that bed of pain with rheumatism?

If you have failed to receive any benefit from other medicines or doctors, do not despair. Use Sulphur Bitters. They will cure you when all others fail. No person can remain long sick who uses SULPHUR BITTERS.

SULPHUR BITTERS.

The dose is small—only a teaspoonful. It is the best and cheapest medicine. Try it, and you will be satisfied. Get it of your druggist. Don't wait, get it at once. If you are suffering from Kidney Disease, and wish to live to old age, use Sulphur Bitters. They never fail to cure.

Send three 2-cent stamps to A. P. Ordway & Co., Boston, Mass., for best medical work published, finely illustrated with colored plates from life.

Storm and Sunshine.

Low hang the heavy clouds; the wind
  Grows cold and makes the flowers shiver;
Driv'n by the storm, the frightened brook
  Hastes madly onward to the river.

The birds in terror seek their nests,
  Each to his loved ones loudly calling;
The grass bends, trembling, to the earth,
  And fast the dreary rain is falling.

This is a weary life at best—
  What is the use, my heart of living?
'Tis vain to seek for peace and rest—
  The world is cold and unforgiving!

The sun is shining once again,
  With its glorious rainbow bringing;
Sweet buds are opening into flowers,
  From every tree the birds are singing.

The brook is dancing in the light,
  The bees from rose to rose are straying;
The grass uplifts its many blades,
  With merry leaves the breeze is playing.

This world is cheery after all;
  There is some use, my heart, in living;
Though friends forsake, and shadows fall,
  The sun still shines, and God's forgiving!

I Was Astonished.

Children often suffer greatly from impure blood until a good medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla, is taken to expel impurities and give vitality.

READ THIS:

"I think it my duty to tell how much good Hood's Sarsaparilla did my little girl. She was from birth puny, pale and sickly, and did not gain strength as she grew older. Even when three years of age she could not stand alone. She ate hardly anything, and seemed to be weak constitutionally; but was doubtless kept back by impure blood, which caused her much discomfort and suffering. She had scald head terribly, her head being covered with one sore. I decided to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and I was astonished at the effect the first bottle had on her. Her appetite began to pick up, and soon we could hardly give her enough to eat. She also gained strength, could stand alone, and the sore on her head began to grow less. We soon healed that up with Hood's Olive ointment, and when she had taken three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla she could run about the house as smart as any child. She has been bright and hearty ever since. I write this out of pure gratitude to Hood's Sarsaparilla." E.T. Alexander, 28 Cleaves street, Portland, Me.

How a Dying Child was Saved.

CICERO, HAMILTON CO., IND., Sept., 19, 1887.

The following is a true account of what your S. S. S. has done for our little daughter, Hazel, now four years old. When twelve months old a lump appeared on her heel, which slowly grew larger. The family physician thought it was caused by a piece of broken glass or a needle, but failed to bring anything to light. The child became feebler all the time, seeming to lose the use of her leg, and finally quit walking altogether. The middle finger and thumb became enlarged, the flesh becoming hard. The hip joints became involved, so that when seventeen months old she could not stand, having lost the use of her hand and arm. Partial curvature of the spine also followed. The nervous system was wrecked, muscles contracted, and there was a general wasting of flesh and muscle. At eighteen months she was placed under the treatment of a prominent physician of Boston, Mass., but at the end of ten months she had declined to such a degree that she was in a dying condition. This was in April, 1884. We took the child away not knowing what to do. In this dilemma we were over-persuaded by friends to try "one bottle" of SWIFT'S SPECIFIC, which we did, and before it had all been taken we saw a change for the better in her symptoms. We kept it up, and have done so to this day, and will keep it up, if the Lord wills, for many days to come, for it has brought our dying Hazel to life, to vigor, to strength and health again. The ashen hue of her cheeks turned to a rosy tint. She is able to walk anywhere, her languor and melancholy have passed away, and she is now a blithe, cheerful, happy, romping child. Should you wish to increase your testimonials of proof of the virtue of S. S. S., our names and what we have said is but a portion of what we owe to you, should you wish to use them.

Kindly Yours,

Auf Wiedersehen.

["I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me."]
—II SAM. 12:23.

When will the meeting be?
After life's toils are over,
After its day is done,
After its pains and pleasures
Have vanished one by one;
After the clouds are rifted
Above the silent sea,
And the mystic veil is lifted—
Then will the meeting be.

Where will the meeting be?
Beyond the voice of sorrow,
Beyond the din of care,
Beyond the ways where weary feet
Their heavy burdens bear,
Beyond the bound where troubles cease,
Whence disappointments flee,
Where all is permanence and peace—
There will the meeting be.

What will the meeting be?
The mother's heart will leap for joy
To see her child again,
The father fold his long-lost boy
Upon his bosom then;
And hands will clasp, and eyes will brim,
Till gladness wild and free
Shall thrill the hosts of seraphim—
That will the meeting be.

O, glorious, rapturous meeting!
O, ecstacy supreme!
The wonderful fulfilment
Of love's long-cherished dream!
O, land of joy increasing,
Land of release from tears,
Midst whose delights unceasing
Roll the eternal years!

NOT FOR THE MONEY.

In the drawing room of a small house—one of a very long terrace in a northern suburb of London—sat a girl by the firelight. The room, a long, narrow one, with folding doors, was shabbily and poorly furnished. The furniture and cheap ornaments, however, had been carefully dusted and brushed. Evidently their owners had endeavored to make the best of their threadbare appearance. The girl lay at almost full length on a low American chair placed straight across the hearth-rug, seemingly for the purpose of getting the greater amount of benefit from the poor fire burning in the grate. She was tall, slight and fair, and certainly good looking. And a wealth of chestnut hair crowned the top of an exceedingly well shaped head. The eyes, large and well opened, looked dreamily into the fire.

The door opened and a lady entered. Shutting the door softly, she stepped with a gliding motion to the girl in the American chair, and stood looking down at her. The relationship was evident. The mother was the image of her daughter, grown older, petrified, as it were, into a distinctly unpleasant looking middle age. The chestnut hair had faded, without becoming gray; her eyes, large and well opened like her daughter's, had a stony stare in them; and her mouth the same discontented and sarcastic droop, ten times intensified. Not a pleasant old lady to look upon by any means.

The girl had not removed her eyes from the fire on her mother's entrance. She remained in precisely the same position, apparently oblivious of the fact that Mrs. Grenoble's stony gaze was fixed upon her face.

At last the mother broke the silence.

"I hope, Paula, you have read the letter carefully, and have come at last to a sensible conclusion on the matter."

"Which letter, and what conclusion?" asked the girl, with a sarcastic inflection of her low, clear voice.

"Don't be foolish, Paula," said her mother, testily. "You know perfectly well what I mean. You have a chance that not one in ten thousand has—the chance of a rich, fortunate life, without worries, without cares, without—"

"Love," murmured the girl softly.

"Love!" said her mother, scornfully. "What is love, money? or what is love worth in comparison to money? Love is a mere word without substance, without reality, without meaning. And you have the lifelong enjoyment of a princely fortune—£50,000 that will be yours as long as you remain single. And you hesitate?"

"Naturally," said Paula, a gleam of mischief lighting up the weariness of her pale face. "Most girls object to the prospect of being on old maid."

"Listen to reason, Paula. You are very young, only just turned twenty. Your whole life up to the present moment has been spent in weary, hopeless poverty. Not the poverty of the very poor, who often want daily bread, but who, the bread once gained, have no appearances to keep up. Ours is the poverty of the well-born, the well-bred, the daily striving to keep our shabby clothes respectable, our shabby house and furniture from getting even more worn and threadbare. Think what you might do with that £50,000. The dresses you could have to wear, the jewels you might buy; think how you could travel in foreign countries, of seeing places you can only sigh and long for in vain. And then think of your life, married to Charles Etheridge on his paltry £300 a year, with no present prospect of its ever increasing."

When her mother spoke of the £50,000 Paula's eyes gleamed with a strange light, and her mouth lost its sarcastic droop and quivered with excitement. At the mention of Charles Etheridge's name she slightly brushed her lips with the letter she held in her left hand.

"Well," said her mother, interrogatively.

"Ah," said Paula, lazily changing her position in the American chair so as to face her mother, "you were saying something to me just now. It seemed quite long. I can't quite remember it all. Ah, yes, about the £50,000, and Uncle Dick's insane will. By the way, he wasn't mad when he made it, was he? It couldn't be disputed or anything of that kind, could it! What a pity! £50,000 is worth having."

"Yes," said Mrs. Grenoble, "and if you have a grain of sense you'll keep it and send Charles Etheridge about his business. You will be able to ride in your carriage and—"

"Dress like the Princess of Wales," said Paula, languidly. "Yes, there is something tangible in ready money, after all. Oh! to have something else to wear but this rag of a gown! Let me think. I would have a tailor-made costume. One tailor-made costume! No, I'd have a dozen—one for every day in the week, and a tight-fitting jacket trimmed with sable, and a plush mantle for the theater, and—oh, if it could only be," and the girl's eyes sparkled, and a covetus, longing look came over the fair face.

Her mother, with a few words of caustic persuasion left the room. She thought she knew her daughter's character better than the girl did herself. She knew that the life of pinching poverty had brought out all the worst traits in Paula's disposition, and she hoped to be able to make capital of them for her own especial benefit. If Paula accepted the conditions of her uncle's will and lived single she would naturally live at home, and Mrs. Grenoble would naturally become partaker of all the good things that Paula with her money would be able to procure.

In the mean time Paula was lying back in the American chair musing. Presently she lifted the letter with the closely-written four pages, and went once more over the well-known lines. As she read, her eyes darkened and softened with a tender light, and the droop at the corner of the mouth became less marked.

At the end she laid it in her lap, and without changing her position, read the other letter. The reading took the lovelight out of her eyes and brought back a covetous gleam which shown like bright steel through her thick lashes.

Then she spoke to herself in a low tone.

"Which is it to be? Love or money? And I must decide to-morrow. Charlie and his £300 a year—and—the £50,000."

The next morning, when Paula came down rather late to breakfast, she found her mother busily engaged, reading a very long and closely written letter whilst uttering grunts of strong disapproval.

"What is the matter?" asked Paula, sitting down at the table, and lazily buttering her toast.

"Why, I have had a letter from Miss Price asking me to take her and her companion in for a few days. She wants to do some shopping, or make some calls, or something of the kind, and our house is convenient, so she says. I should have thought, too far from town. But then she has her own carriage, or hires one, and we shall not see much of her, that is one comfort. I wonder she does not go to her own relations. She has plenty of them."

"Possibly she is afraid," said Paula languidly. "She is alarmingly rich, she might think it too much of a temptation to her dear relations to stay with them."

"Paula, you are ridiculous, and you have strange notions for so young a girl. It is really very impolite to talk in the way you do. However, I'm too busy to scold now—"

"For small mercies let us be grateful," murmured Paula.

"Miss Price may be here at any moment, and I must see about her room," and Mrs. Grenoble bustled out of the room.

"Half an hour afterward there was a meek little rap at the street door. In a few minutes Miss Price and her companion were ushered into the room.

Miss Price was a little thin old lady of over sixty years old. She wore her light hair, which was streaked with gray, in tiny little curls on each side of her cheeks. Her face was little and shrunken, her figure pinched and small, her hands and feet small. But the worst thing about her was the utterly careworn and miserable expression of her face. A listless wretchedness had, as it were, eaten itself into her withered countenance, and was shown in every gesture of her knotted, veined hands, and bony neck.

"And yet she has four thousand a year," said Paula to herself.

Miss Price appeared in mortal dread of her companion, and yet totally unable to do without her. Mrs. Mount tyranized over her in a most shamefaced manner, and poor Miss Price submitted meekly in the listless, hopeless way her face betrayed.

"Will there ever be a time when a companion will be necessary to my well-being?" thought Paula.

The next morning was fine, and Miss Price elected to do her shopping. A carriage was ordered, for Miss Price was not strong, and the rattle and noise of omnibusses did not agree with her. But she grumbled at the expense, and feared she was ruining herself. Paula and Mrs. Mount accompanied her. And what a time they had of it! Miss Price wanted dresses, but nothing suited her. The cheap ones were too common, and the better ones too expensive. Her unhappy face was bent over the goods, comparing them, finding fault, now with the color, now with the texture, but generally with the price. Finally she chose an expensive silk and some brown cashmere, and her face looked more miserable still, after she had paid the bill. And then to the milliner's, and the same scene enacted over again. Paula watched, as in a dream, the pretty tasteful bonnets changed, as if by magic, into dowdy commonplace constructions as soon as they surrounded Miss Price's discontented old face. It seemed to occur to Miss Price also that it did not much matter which she chose, for she kept her face turned resolutely from the mirrors, and deferred, at last, to Mrs. Mount's judgment. Paula shuddered as she thought she might come to just such an unpleasant old age. To be dependent on the taste of a companion for the selection of one's clothes. To look so wretched and woebegone as to come to shun the sight of one's own countenance.

Paula was thoughtful that evening and very silent. Mrs. Grenoble told her it was time, full time, to send an answer to the letters. Paula said she would write them to-morrow before breakfast. Her mother said of course there was no doubt as to her choice. No child, blessed with such a mother as she had to advise her, would hesitate a moment. Paula answered gravely that the advent of Miss Price had left no doubt in her mind as to which course she would pursue. Her mother looked at her doubtfully as she made this last remark, lighting her bed room candle meanwhile, but Paula gave a prodigious yawn, which entirely destroyed any expression her face might have possessed at the time, and vanished from the room.

When Paula reached her bed room she placed her candle on the toilet table, and, sitting with her elbow on the table and her cheeks resting on her two hands, calmly surveyed her reflection in the glass. It certainly was pleasant to look upon, with its piles of chestnut hair crowning the pale oval face, and steady, clear eyes shining in the dim light. But as she looked Paula, as through a mist, seemed to see the chestnut hair grown scanty and streaked with gray, the face thin and lined, the mouth with its alas! too discontented droop, intensified and hardened by years of loneliness and unhappiness. Of what use would fine clothes be then with a face like that? To live alone, uncared for, unloved, would soon sour the young face, and then—she would grow like Miss Price!

"No," said Paula resolutely, "no—I cannot do it. Not for £50,000 can I consent to run the risk of growing like Miss Price. I dare say when I am as old as she is I shall be fat and have a red face, but then Charlie will be old, too, and probably fat also, so we shan't be able to reproach each other. And we shall be together, and we shall have got over all our little quarrels and misunderstandigs, and we shall by that time understand each other's peculiarities. We shall be horribly poor, 'beastly poor,' as Bella Wilfer used to say; but for all that I would rather be with Charlie than with mamma all my life. And then the fine clothes—what good are they after one has grown old and ugly! And as to traveling about and seeing things—why, I would rather stay at home than have to go about alone or with—a Miss Price. I wish—I wish I could choose Charlie and the £50,000 too. I don't suppose that anybody with more money than Charlie would ask me to marry him. It wouldn't do to run the risk of waiting. No. It is my fate to be Mrs. Etheridge; and—well, it's a better fate than to be Miss Price."

The next morning Paula went down to breakfast with a demure countenance. She and her mother were alone. Miss Price was breakfasting in bed, and Mrs. Mount was hearing her company. Mrs. Grenoble looked at her daughter inquisitively, but Paula subsided languidly into a chair and asked for a cup of coffee. Then she took up the paper and became apparently immersed in the political crisis.

At last Mrs. Grenoble's patience gave way.

"Have you written those letters, Paula?"

"What letters?"

"You know as well as I do. The letters to Mr. Etheridge and the lawyer."

"Yes. I have written them."

"And your decision is what, to be expected?"

"Precisely."

"You have written to Mr. Etheridge, breaking off your engagement?"

"I have written to Mr. Etheridge, telling him I would marry him when he pleases," returned Paula, calmly.

"What? What?" burst forth Mrs. Grenoble in a fury.

"Well, that was what was to be expected, wasn't it? We have been engaged two years, and a wedding is generally expected after that length of time, and Charley wants me to fix the day, and so I have fixed it, and there's an end of the matter."

A CLOAK THAT COST SOME MONEY.

The New York Sun furnishes the following information regarding the royal feather mantle of the Sandwich Islands: Probably no royal regalia has contained such a priceless treasure as the Mamo, or time of Kamehamea the great, or the Conqueror to his successors. The grotesque robe was the labor of chosen artists during the reign of seven monarchs previous to Kamehameah. Its length was four feet, and it had a spread of eleven and a half feet at the bottom. The feathers were worked in a groundwork of coarse net, and to this the delicate feathers were attached with a skill and grace worthy of the most skilled artists of the present day. The feathers forming the border were reversed, the whole presenting a bright yellow color resembling a mantle of gold. The birds from which these splendid feathers were plucked, were known as the Ooo, or "royal bird," and they have but two species (Melithrepetes Pacifica) were captured only by great stratagem and with much risk of life, in the mountainous districts of Hawaii. These feathers were valued at fifty cents each. No less than a million dollars were expended in this gorgeous and unique mantle. Looking at it in the light of the scarcity of the materials of which it is composed, and the immense time and trouble employed in its production, it should rank with the treasures of modern times, and be remembered as the shroud of the last of his race, Lunalilo, the "people's king," the erratic, beloved and liberal "Prince Bill," the predecessor of the now resigning monarch, Kalakaua.

There is only one other cloak of this kind in Hawaii—the one used to cover the throne; and as the birds from which the feathers were obtained are extinct, it is beyond price.

Speaking of experience. Miss Blanche—"Have you made any conquests this season!"

Miss Lillian—"Oh, yes; Mr. Jones proposed the day before we came away."

Miss Blanche—"Doesn't he pop the question in the most awkward manner imaginable!"

They meet as strangers.—Life.

Make Me A Song.

Out of the silence make me a song,
Beautiful, sad and soft and low;
Let the loveliest music sound along
And wing each note with wail of woe
Dim and drear;
As hope's last tear;
Out of the silence make me a hymn
Whose sounds are shadows soft and dim.

Out of the stillness of your heart—
A thousand songs are sleeping there—
Make me but one, thou child of art,
The song of a hope in a last despair,
Dark and low,
A chant of woe;
Out of the stillness, tone by tone,
Soft as a snowflake, wild as a moan.

Out on the dark recesses flash me a song,
Brightly dark and darkly bright;
Let it sweep as a love-star sweeps along
The mystical shadows of the night,
Sing it sweet,
Where nothing is drear, or dark, or dim,
And earth songs melt into heaven's hymn.

LOS ANGELES AND PASADENA.

Correspondence of the JOURNAL.

PASADENA, CAL., JAN. 6, 1888.

We were very glad to bid farewell to the muddy streets of Los Angeles. It has been rainy most of the time since we reached California. More rain has fallen in the past few days than in all last year. If it wasn't for the abundance of sunshine in this country, Los Angeles would long ago have been wiped out with cholera, yellow fever or something worse. The rapid strides she has made in the past few years have not been followed by any system of sewerage, consequently in the rainy season her streets are a series of duck ponds. As soon as sunshine comes this dries away very rapidly, but when her streets are bad they are simply awful. Hotel accommodations are a long way behind the demands and are exorbitantly high in their charges. Easterners are coming here by the thousand, but if they judge the country from their first view of Los Angeles in a rainy day they won't stay long. There is a big opening for a large hotel patterned after the Grand Union of New York. It would be a small gold mine. The residence portion of Los Angeles, present and prospective, is beautiful. Green grass, orange trees loaded with fruit, and all sorts of tropical plants abound.

Beautiful Pasadena! a sight of which is worth all the expense and fatigue of a journey across the continent. Pen can give no just representation of the scenery hereabouts. The climate, when the sun shines, which it does most of the time, is simply indescribable. An overcoat is no burden, and on the streets I have seen ladies in seal skins, closely followed by working men in shirt sleeves. A rainy day is similar to our April weather. The real life of Pasadena dates back but two years; to-day it is a city of 12,000 people. Such rapid growth, with the great number of people coming here to see what can be the matter, what magic wand has caused this growth, makes accommodations scarce and in many cases unreasonably expensive. But new hotels are being built, and if eastern people will wait a bit, one can live here as reasonably as anywhere in California. The boom in real estate has been "simply immense," and fortunes have been realized. Land is so high that only millionaires can buy building lots in the residence portion, and most people are of the opinion that values cannot materially advance. Real estate dealings and the construction of nice dwellings—and there are some "nobby" ones—is about all there is in the way of business.

There is a good line of elegant stores and business blocks, and prices are generally reasonable. Most of the easterners would rather live where they came from—if they could take some of this delightful climate with them.

I met E. B. Gates of North Wilbraham, his son George (who formerly was P. O. clerk at Palmer) on the street. George H. Newton of Monson, who came to Pomona some time ago, will soon return to Monson. I went up on one of the highest mountain peaks to-day, and could distinctly see the surf breaking on the Pacific coast twenty miles away at Santa Monico. A. L. H.

HE DID NOT BORROW.

The Hon. F. C. Bunnell, member of Congress from the 15th District of Pennsylvania (who, by the way, gives more honor to the office than it can confer on him,) tells with great humor of a farmer who drove up to his bank on business intent.

"I want to borrow a hundred dollas," he said. "Can I have it?"

"Certainly," was the courteous reply, "Come in and sign a note and get an endorser."

"Gin a note?" asked the farmer, in astonishment.

"That is the rule of the bank."

"Hain't I good for a hundred?"

"Yes, and a good hundred times that amount."

"Then what do you want of a note? You know I'll pay it, don't yer?"

"I have no doubt of it; but to loan money without security is not the way to do business."

"Pshaw! I only wanted the money for a month and it'll be all right."

"If you live. But should you chance to die?"

"Die!" exclaimed the man, as he turned away with the most disgusted look possible, "who the h— ever heard of a man dying in thirty days."—St. Louis Magazine.

HARDLY GOT AT IT YET.—"Tell me," he whispered with the hoarseness of emotion; whispered as if he feared the murmuring surf might catch the question and bear it to some other lars—"tell me, have you ever loved?"

She trembled. She hestitated a moment, and he thought he felt her blushes glow into his eyes. She trembled, and in a still, soft whisper, gentle as the summer breeze, answered:

"Not this winter."

THE PERFECT HOST.

The perfect host is as rare a being as a great poet; and for much the same reason, namely, that to be a perfect host requires as rare a combination of qualites as those which are needed to produce a great poet. He should be like the lord-in-waiting of whom Charles II. said he was "never in the way and never out of the way." He should never degenerate into a showman, for there is nothing of which most people are so soon weary as of being shown things, especially if they are called upon to admire them. He, the perfect host, should always recollect that he is in his own home, and that his guests are not in theirs; consequently those local arrangements which are familiar to him should be made familiar to them. His aim should be to make his home a home for his guests, with all the advantages of novelty. If he entertains many guests, he should know enough about them to be sure that he has invited those who will live amicably together and enjoy each other's society. He should show no favoritism, if possible; and if he is a man who must indulge in favoritism, it should be to those of his guests who are more obscure than the others. He should be judiciously despotic as regards all proposals for pleasure, for there will be many that are diverse, and much time will be wasted if he does not take upon himself the responsibility of decision. He should have much regard for the comings and goings of his guests, so as to provide every convenience for their adit and their exit. Now I am going to insist on what I think to be a very great point. He should aim at causing that his guests should hereafter become friends, if they are not so at present, so they might, in future days, trace back the beginning of their friendship to their having met together at his house. He, the perfect host, must have the art to lead conversation without absorbing it himself, so that he may develop the best qualities of his guests. His expense in entertainment should not be devoted to what is luxurious, but to what is comforting and ennobling. The first of all things is that he should be affectionate, indeed a loving host, so that every one of his guests should feel that he is welcome. He should press them to stay; but should be careful that this pressing does not interfere with their convenience, so that they stay merely to oblige him, and not to please themselves. In considering who should be his guests, he should always have a thought as to those to whom he would render most service by having them his guests; his poorer brethren, his sickly brethren. Those whom he feels would gain most advantage by being his guests should have the first place in his invitations; and for his considerateness, he would be amply rewarded by the benefits he will have conferred.—Arthur Helps.

BOSTON'S UNIQUE HOSPITALITY.

Mrs. Y. is a brilliant Boston woman of abundant executive ability, shrewd wit, delightful hospitality. The exigencies of her husband's business led to the keeping of an establishment in the West, where Mrs. Y. passes some months of the year, and where she entertains a great many people. One day there was brought to Mrs. Y. the card of an English gentleman, accompanied by a letter of introduction from friends of the Y's abroad. The hostess went down stairs and greeted the guest cordially.

"We are so accustomed to travellers here," she said, "that we know just what to do with them. We expect everybody to arrive travel-stained and want to take a bath the first thing. I spoke to the servant before I came down, and every thing is all ready."

"But," stammered the stranger, "I cannot think of putting you to so much trouble. I—"

"Oh, I know just how you feel," interrupted Mrs. Y. "A bath is the only thing that restores me to my normal condition when I've been travelling, and you must have come right from Boston."

The guest demurred, but Mrs. Y. was too executive and too highly hospitable to allow his scruples to prevent the carrying out of her kindly intent. The Englishman was shown up stairs to the bath room, where it is to be presumed he combined with the progress of his toilet, reflections upon the originality and practicability of American hospitality.

In due time the guest descended again to the parlor, where Mrs. Y. awaited him.

"I hope you found every thing to your mind," she said.

"O, yes," he replied; "I have had a delightful bath; and now I must bid you good afternoon, as I have to catch a train."

"What!" cried his hostess aghast! "You are not going?"

"Unfortunately I must. I only stopped over a train to call on you."

"Mercy!" she exclaimed in dismay. "I thought you had come to remain. You certainly cannot go away when I have not seen you at all."

"I really must," was the reply, "but I assure you that I have had a most refreshing bath and shall always remember with sincere pleasure your unique hospitality."

The story was too good to keep, and Mrs. Y. told it at her own expense, greatly to the entertainment of her friends, who declared that this fashion of entertaining callers was one that deserved to be widely introduced, as it would solve many perplexing questions of the proper method of disposing of guests who were not so easy to amuse.—Arlo Bates in Providence Journal.

Mr. Smarton—"No, Miss Jones, they can't deceive me; I'm not such a big fool as I look."

Miss Jones (endeavoring to flatter)—"No, indeed; I discovered that long ago."—Judge.

If a man wants to change his name he goes to the legislature; if a woman, she has only to go to a minister—and forgive her new name with her.—Lowell Citizen.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, JANUARY 27, 1888.

STRAYED, lost or stolen,--the January thaw. A generous reward paid for its return.

ICE MEN are getting almost too much of a good thing this winter, the ice in many places being thicker than they can handle advantage.

RATHER than allow interest in the woman suffrage question to die out, Belva Lockwood expresses her readiness to run for president again.

A PRIZE FIGHT near New York last Sunday resulted in the death of one of the combatants. It is a pity that the other one did not fare likewise.

BARNUM says his "greatest show" cannot afford to travel around the country under the interstate commerce law. That settles it. The law must be repealed forthwith.

THERE is some probability that Congress will authorize an issue of fractional currency, to accommodate people sending small sums by mail. It would be likely to come into quite general use as well, as the currency was always popular with the public.

GULLIBLE people always have existed, and always will. Recent proof of this was brought to light in Philadelphia, by the disappearance of the manager of another "woman's bank," whose offer of 10 per cent monthly interest had attracted many depositors, and now they are in mourning over the $100,000 they have lost by their folly.

IF Blaine could not carry New York against Cleveland in 1884, why can he in 1888? We fail to see that he is relatively any stronger there now than then, and doubt if he is as strong, while it is evident that the Republicans must carry that state if they hope to elect their candidate. In order to win, the party must put not only its best foot forward, but also and emphatically its best man.

ACCORDING to the Boston Globe, there were 2335 murders last year, and only 79 hangings. This is not a very good record for justice. Lynch law has done better than this, or been more active at least, having terminated 123 lives. With only one chance in 30 of being hung, it is not strange that capital crimes increase. There should be only one chance in 30 of the murderer escaping the just penalty] of his crime.

IT is rather forcing matters to begin talking about the next candidate for governor before the inaugural of the present executive is cold, but it is being done nevertheless, and as this is the year of the presidential election some extra interest in political matters will be excusable. It is expected that Gov. Ames will not seek another term in the executive chair, and the Springfield Republican finds quite a leaning toward William W. Crapo of New Bedford as his successor. This isn't a bad suggestion by any means. The Mugwumps could sail under that banner, and this is what the Republicans desire, or ought to.

IT is seldom that business throughout New England suffers such a tie-up on account of the weather as it did yesterday and to-day. The fine snow which fell Wednesday night was followed by a high wind which drifted it into railroad cuts and across roads, causing an almost complete blockade in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, New York and Pennsylvania. No freights are moving at all, and what passenger trains escape sticking in drifts have hard work to get through at all with a doubling of engines. The snow fall varies from eight to twenty inches, and it will be several days before traffic can be regularly resumed again.

AUBURN, N. Y., is the scene of the latest defalcation, Cashier O'Brien of the First National Bank having left town last Sunday with his bookkeeper, while the bank is believed to be some $200,000 short in its funds. In this case the trouble is ascribed to the cashier's love of poker. He was "very popular," of course,--they all are--and was known to be "sporty," and an habitual poker player, but he "had the reputation of always winning at the game," and his fitness for his responsible position was therefore unquestioned. Sweet innocency! Could anything be more charmingly verdant? The community which encourages that sort of morality need not be surprised when the climax comes, as it surely will, and is not altogether blameless itself.

The choir of St. Thomas' Catholic church took dinner at the Converse House Sunday, after returning from North Wilbraham.

Partial eclipse of the moon to-morrow night. About 6.20 p. m. will be the best time to look for it, if the weather is clear.

Clark & Hastings's refrigerator at their wholesale meat market has been filled with ice this week, about 100 tons being put in.

Mrs. F. Kendrick of North Brookfield, who sang at St. Paul's Universalist church last Sunday, will sing again next Sunday.

Henry Irving and company passed through Palmer about 9.30 Sunday evening, by special train from Chicago to Boston.

A chorus choir rendered a fine musical programme at the Congregational church Sunday under the leadership of W. F. Miller.

Of the 71 persons naturalized by the superior court in 1887 three were from Palmer, five from Monson and two from Ludlow.

Quite a number from this village attended the grand concert given by Gilmore's Military Band at Springfield Saturday afternoon.

The town clock is on the retired list. It ran down the other day, and the man in charge declared he wouldn't fool with it any longer.

Rev. F. W. Betts of St. Paul's Universalist church started Saturday for Syracuse, N. Y. Before he returns he expects to visit the South.

The Patterson Club met at the residence of J. H. Smith on Central street Wednesday evening and read Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night."

Two new telephones are being put in by the Palmer exchange, at the residences of Dr. Davis in Three Rivers, and Luther Flynt in Monson.

The Crescent Club was entertained on Maple street Thursday evening by Miss Alice Hale. Officers were also elected for the ensuing year.

Thomas Parker, a barber employed at C. L. Teague's under the Converse House, had his face severely frozen while riding Sunday afternoon.

The most popular men in town yesterday morning were those who got out their snow plows and ran them over the walks of their neighbors.

The Woman's Relief Corps, assisted by the best local talent, contemplate presenting the war drama "Comrades," at Monson some time next month.

The engineers of the fire district would be thankful if, when clearing their sidewalks of snow, people would be careful and not cover up the hydrants.

T. W. Kenefick had an overcoat, valued at about $50, stolen from his room at the Converse House recently, and as yet has been unable to detect the thief.

Trains on all the railroads were somewhat delayed by the cold snap Monday, pumps and valves freezing up almost as fast as they could be thawed out.

Rev. Albert Hammatt of North Adams, formerly of Monson and well known to Palmer people, will preach at St. Paul's Universalist church next Sunday.

The works of the Palmer Wire Manufacturing Company have been idle for several days past on account of some of the departments being out of stock.

E. C. Sexton has returned from North Adams, where he has had the foremanship of a large gang of painters in the employ of Bartlett Bros., contractors and builders.

A large party of Monson school children passed through the village Tuesday afternoon, and judging from the noise they made, were enjoying their sleigh-ride immensely.

The Auxiliary Workers of the Second Baptist church enjoyed a sleigh-ride to O. D. Wells's Wednesday evening. An entertainment was presented, and an oyster supper served.

The union temperance meeting at the Baptist church last Sunday evening was well attended. Mr. Croy gave an excellent address, which was attentively listened to by his audience.

The Warren high school students have arranged for a sleigh-ride to Palmer this evening, intending to stop at the Weeks House, where a supper will be served by Landlord Weeks.

The choir of the Congregational church will go to Ludlow to-morrow evening, where a concert will be given at the Congregational church under the direction of Wilbur F. Miller.

Palmer Lodge, I. O. O. F., installed these officers last Friday evening: N. G., F. H. Caryl; V. G., W. J. Osborne; R. C., Fred Conant; secretary, W. O. Richardson; treasurer, J. H. Smith.

Miss L. Gould of Providence, R. I., the instructor of dancing at the Weeks House, is adding new pupils to her already large class at nearly every session. Six extra sessions will probably be held.

The chimney of J. W. Shank's residence on Pleasant street was discovered to be on fire Saturday afternoon, but the flames were extinguished before any damage was done. No alarm was rung in.

The young ladies of the village are trying hard to awaken interest among their more backward associates and muster up courage enough to give a leap year party to the young gentlemen some time during the coming month.

The cold snap has caused an ice jam in the Quaboag. which extends from Three Rivers back to the Fay bridge, a distance of some three miles, the ice being piled up in the center of the river so the water overflows the meadows.

C. L. Gardner has been appointed by the superior court on a special commission to supervise a change of grade between the railroad and the street at Westfield, and S. S. Taft has been appointed on a similar commission at Easthampton.

The beautiful snow came again Wednesday night, some seven or eight inches deep and closely packed, there being so much of it as to spoil the good sleighing there was before, and make traveling for man and beast exceedingly tiresome.

A new Hardman cabinet grand piano has been placed in the parlors of St. Paul's Universalist church this week. Another of the Steinway square grand make has been purchased and placed in the parlors of the Second Congregational church.

A passenger on the 1.29 p. m. express train Monday, on the Boston and Albany road, whose name is unknown, had his fingers so badly lacerated by getting them caught in the car door that he was obliged to stop off at Palmer and have the wounds dressed by Dr. W. H. Stowe.

About twenty couples formed a jolly party that enjoyed a sleigh-ride to Ware Tuesday afternoon. The party left Palmer at 3 o'clock and was highly entertained at the Mansion House upon its arrival at that place. A good supper was served, after which the party returned by moonlight.

A. A. Barton of Dalton was here Tuesday evening for the purpose of organizing a grange, to be composed of the farmers residing in Eastern Hampden. The meeting was held at the Weeks House with a very small attendance, and adjourned to a date unknown, without definite action.

The Fry Concert Company will appear at the Congregational church next Tuesday evening, giving the third entertainment in the high school lecture course. This company is made up of first-class talent, and an enjoyable evening may be expected. Admission is 25 cents, reserved seats 35 cents.

A water pipe on the second floor of Strong's block froze and burst Monday night, the water damaging C. K. Gamwell's stock of clothing somewhat in the store beneath. A pipe in Odd Fellow's Hall also burst, letting a considerable amount of moisture into the stores of H. P. Longley and Brooks Bros.

The regular weekly trot was indulged in on Main street Wednesday afternoon between horses driven by Nelson Whiton of Palmer, George W. Burdick and George C. Flynt of Monson. The horse driven by the latter carried away the honors. Quite a crowd witnessed the event, each betting on their favorite horse.

A great deal of interest is being manifested in the coming Symphony concert at City Hall, Springfield. Large parties are being made up from nearly every village within twenty-five miles of the city. Seats as good as there are in the hall can yet be secured through this office. Special train immediately after concert.

Vernon B. Ober of Spencer was thrown from a sleigh Sunday afternoon while turning at the corner of South Main street and Fox avenue, where the horse became frightened. The sleigh was badly smashed near the park, in which direction the animal ran at a rapid gait. The occupants were not seriously injured.

The monthly meeting of the Eastern Hampden Medical Society was held at the Nassowanno House yesterday afternoon with a very small attendance, due to the heavy snow storm which rendered the traveling bad. A supper was served and the meeting made entertaining and instructive to those in attendance.

It is reported that a petition is soon to be presented to the officials of the Western Union Telegraph Company by the business men of the town, asking that the local office be removed from the station to a more central location on Main street. It is said that if this fails, every inducement will be offered the United Lines Telegraph Company to open an office here.

Seldom does Eastern Hampden county experience a cold snap equal to the one of the past week. Monday morning the thermometers registered from 12° to 20° below zero, and it has been zero weather ever since, with a strong wind a portion of the time. The cold has got into the houses pretty well, and furnace fires are run to their fullest capacity, but the pipes will freeze in spite of them.

A monster party is being made up for a sleigh-ride to Belchertown next Thursday, where Landlord Fuller of the Belcher House will furnish a supper. A dance will be on the programme, while beside that there will be various other ways provided by the committee for entertainment. The party will leave Palmer for Belchertown at 4 o'clock p. m., forming in front of the Converse House.

Librarian O. P. Allen is classifying about eighty volumes of new books, which are to be placed upon the shelves of the public library as soon as possible. About one hundred more volumes of the choicest works will be purchased at once, while the fifty volumes from the government and the forty volumes which were donated by the late Henry Scism, will add greatly to the collection that the library already has.

The Wright Wire Cloth Company has been made a corporation with a capital of $20,000. The following are the officers: President and treasurer, George F. Wright; vice president and manager, G. M. Wright; secretary, H. N. Wright. The company has done a prosperous business since it located in Palmer, and the probability is that an addition will be built to the factory soon, in order that the company may increase its capacity.

John Madden, against whom there are six cases pending for illegal liquor selling, being one of the recently arrested crowd, was on the stand last Saturday and became badly muddled in the cross examination, frequently contradicting himself. When the case was adjourned to Monday Madden was released without bail, and at once made up his mind that Connecticut was good enough for him, so he is now stopping at Stafford.

Yesterday and to-day were "off" days for railroad trains in this section. The Boston & Albany Railroad express from the West due at 8.35 last night came in about 9 o'clock this forenoon, having been stalled in a drift at Chester. Conductor Warner's train on the Ware River road, due here at 7.45, was delayed in the drifts at Gilbertville. The wrecker was got off the track going to its assistance, and the train from Winchendon was stalled at Waterville.

The liquor cases have occupied the attention of the district court this week, and quite a number of them have been disposed of. The testimony all was in the same channel, and no startling revelations have been made by the witnesses on the stand. The general opinion existing is that the majority of the cases will be convicted at this court and appealed to the superior court. The saloon keepers have occasion to believe that there are "spotters" in town at the present time, and are consequently "lying low."

The money to be refunded to Hampden county towns this year for library purposes from the dog fund is larger than usual. The apportionment is as follows: Springfield, $2595; Agawam, 198; Blandford, 111; Brimfield, 114; Chester, 144; Chicopee, 635; Granville, 129; Hampden, 110; Holland, 29; Holyoke, 1215; Longmeadow, 199; Ludlow, 179; Monson, 392; Montgomery, 30; Palmer, 433; Russell, 94; Southwick, 94; Tolland, 58; Wales, 55; Westfield, 643; West Springfield, 410; Wilbraham, 133.

There seems to be a lack of something somewhere in the matter of warming the school building in this village. Only one day this week has the mercury risen above 50° in the high school room, and then only for a short time. With this state of affairs and a broken down stove in the recitation room, it is rather discouraging for the teachers, when already nearly half of the scholars are out on account of sickness. In spite of these obstacles the schools have kept until to-day, when the scholars were sent home until more heat could be got into the building.

Hopes of the electric light are somewhat brighter just at present than ever before. The man who has been looking over the ground for Boston capitalists has made a bargain with J. F. Heery for the poles already set and his interest in the matter, also with J. M. Converse for a plot of land on River street, where it is proposed to erect a brick building 60 by 100 feet for the engines, boilers and dynamos. It is promised that the work of stringing the wires will be commenced at once, and that the lights shall be in working order by the first of May. Besides lighting Palmer and Monson, it is proposed also to light Thorndike, Three Rivers and Bondsville.

Register-of-Deeds Russell of Springfield was for many years a popular conductor on the Boston and Albany road in its early days, and has been giving an interesting account of some of his experiences during that period, in the Sunday Republican. The following will be found of local interest:--

Daniel Webster once put his head out of the car window at Wilbraham and lost his huge hat. The statesman was in despair, for he did not know of another hat in the country large enough. William Child was then station agent at Palmer, and Conductor Russell knew that his head was nearly if not quite as large as Webster's. During the stop at that station Child received an offer for his hat which he supposed was a joke, but Conductor Russell was in earnest and Webster was not obliged to ride home hatless. It fitted the presidential aspirant from Marshfield, and he looked at Mr. Russell as a sort of conjurer in resources. A famous character in those days was Frank Morgan of Palmer, who was known by every person on the line. Morgan's hospitality was unbounded, and if a train was blockaded by snow anywhere near Palmer passengers would urge Conductor Russell to push on to that station if possible, for they would be glad to wait if only in the society of Morgan. One of Morgan's habits consisted in buying tickets to the circus for all the boys in the vicinity, and on his death-bed is said to have remarked: "Who will buy circus tickets for the boys when Morgan is gone?"

Narrow Escape From A Serious Accident

ON THE BOSTON AND ALBANY RAILROAD.

A narrow escape from what might have resulted in a serious accident, with no small loss of life, occurred Wednesday morning on the Boston & Albany railroad at Cooley's crossing. Benjamin Fenton, a farmer was engaged in drawing wood to market, when with a heavy load the runner of his sled caught between the rails while crossing the tracks at the point above mentioned. The sled could not be removed from the tracks without some assistance, and the 8.09 a. m. passenger train from Boston was nearly due. To prevent an accident Mr. Fenton left his team and ran down the track but a short distance where he met the approaching train, which he managed to flag with his handkerchief. He had a very few moments to do it in, for the 7.48 a. m. train from Springfield, being late, was also due about the same time. This train also had to be flagged. The trainmen rendered the neccessary assistance in removing the sled from the tracks, so that the trains could pass. The matter made the passengers shudder, and Mr. Fenton received the warmest praise from the conductor in charge of the train, for his timely forethought.

Why Isn't It Moved?

At the last meeting of the fire district, some nine months ago, a committee was appointed to confer with the board of engineers and the insurance men and see if insurance rates could not be reduced by locating the jumper on or near Main street. The board of insurance underwriters stated that a reduction of about 15 per cent would be made on Main street property if the jumper were located on that street, or near the junction of Main and Walnut streets. That was the last heard of the matter, and the business men are beginning to feel that they have paid the extra 15 per cent long enough, as it has already cost them over $200 more than it would if the jumper had been moved, as desired. As one only costs about $100, it would have been cheaper for them to chip in and purchase one and rent a place for it on Main street. It is said that two members of the board of engineers are willing to move the jumper, but that Chief Engineer Kenerson will not admit of its being done. The merchants, however, think that their property, as well as that of the whole village, would be safer--that the jumper would reach a fire quicker in nine cases out of ten--if it were located near Main street where men could get at it immediately, instead of having to go an eighth of a mile out of the way to a back street for it.

Born--Married--Died.

TOWN RECORDS FOR THE YEAR 1887.

As usual, the returns come in slowly to the town clerk's office, and the records are not yet complete, but so nearly so that these figures have been obtained: There were 192 births in 1887, an increase of 24 over the previous year, 97 being females and 95 males, including one pair of twins. Of these, 71 were born of foreign-born parents, 71 of American-born, and 28 of mixed parentage. In January there were 16 births; February, 15; March, 16; April, 10; May, 9; June, 21; July, 15; August, 18; September, 22; October, 20; November, 16; December, 14.

There were 64 marriage licenses issued, against 76 the year before. The oldest groom was 56 years old and the oldest bride 47, these two comprising the oldest couple. The youngest couple were 18 each. The youngest bride was 17, and the youngest groom 18. There were six grooms under 21 years and twenty-one brides under that age, while in three cases both parties were under 21. It was the first marriage of both bride and groom in 57 cases, and the second of both in one instance. Second of groom and first of bride, 3; second of bride and first of groom, 2; third of groom and second of bride,. 1. Of the contracting parties 83 were American-born and 45 foreign-born. There were 7 marriages in January, 6 in February, 2 in March, 7 in April, 7 in May, 4 in June, 3 in July, 1 in August, 6 in September, 9 in October, 6 in November, 6 in December. Out of town clergymen married 10 couples; Rev. H. W. Pope, Frs. Lamy and Lynch, 9 each; Revs. Hurd and Ayer, 4 each; Sullivan, Weeks, Fulton, Eyers, 3 each; Joy, McKeany and Judge Robinson, 2 each; Rev. Mr. Betts, 1.

The number of deaths recorded was 102, or 6 less than in 1886. Five died in January, 8 in February, 12 in March, 7 in April, 10 in May, 11 in June, 10 in July, 13 in August, 9 in September, 8 in October, 3 in November, 7 in December. Of the whole number 8 were under one year of age; between 1 and 5, twelve; between 5 and 10, seven; 10 and 20, three; 20 and 30, sixteen; 30 and 40, seven; 40 and 50, three, 50 and 60, fourteen; 70 and 80, nine; 80 and 90, nine. Fifteen died of consumption; pneumonia, 12; old age, 10; paralysis, 8; heart disease, 7; diphtheria, 5; whooping cough, inflammation of the bowels, cancer, apoplexy, meningitis, killed by cars, burned, 2 each; abscess, general debility, scarlatina, brain fever, cholera infantum, buried alive, erysipelas, disease of liver, croup, dysentery, disease of kidneys, dropsy, diabetes, one each.

THORNDIKE.

Several surprise parties are on the list for this evening.

John Molloy, tonsorial artist, is having his shop repainted and remodeled.

On Saturday evening last a sleigh-ride party from Monson entertained themselves at the Clinton House.

Daniel Lawlor, who has been very ill with pneumonia, has recovered so far as to be able to be around again.

There is talk among the young ladies of the village in regard to getting up a leap year dance, to take place next week.

Much sickness prevails in our midst at present, and among the various other diseases the mumps have made their appearance.

The Thorndike ball club has added another new man to the proposed team for 1888, in the person of Pat Scannell, of the Stamford, Conn., team of 1887.

Luman & Lyon's Orchestra, which gave such good satisfaction at the Emmet dance, has been engaged to play for the Young People's Dramatic Club at their entertainment, Feb. 10th.

A large party from Ware gave George Crowell a pleasant surprise one evening this week, and after enjoying themselves until the small hours of morning, returned home pleased with their ride.

Elmer F. Dickson, with John H. Wright, will start this week for a vacation with friends in Connecticut, thence to Gaspe Basin, Canada, where he has accepted a position as councellor for the United States.

The Emmet Social Club, at their drama and dance last Friday evening, was greeted with a crowded house. The drama "Ireland of To-day" was presented to the audience in a good manner, the parts being taken especially well. The club will clear about $70 by the event.

The DeLydston & Dunn's Theatre Co. has been playing at Union Hall this week in "Kathleen Mavourneen," "Queen's Evidence," "Dishonored," and several others. The company is good, but seems to have rather hard luck. They should be given good houses this and to-morrow evening.

The concert given Tuesday evening by the "Ariel Ladies' Quartette" of Boston was all that could be desired, their voices blending perfectly. The rendering of "Jack and Jill" brought forth hearty applause, and their "Good Night" song showed good expression and much good taste. Their solo and duet singing are also worthy of mention.

The friends of Mrs. Thomas McCarty will be glad to learn that she is almost well again after being confined to her home for nearly a year by falling on the ice and breaking her hip. She was attended by several physicians who pronounced her incurable, but Dr. Flynn has brought her where she is to-day, which speaks volumes in his favor, as it was generally thought she would never be able to even stand on her limb again.

MONSON.

W. B. Grout has bought a horse and team of Elmer Thompson.

Geo. H. Newton, who has returned from California, was in town this week.

The Washington Club is arranging for the annual sleigh-ride to Ware next Friday.

The mercury dropped, Sunday night, to the lowest point it has been this winter--14° below zero.

The sociable given by the ladies of the Universalist church Tuesday evening was largely attended.

The Literary Club read Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice" at the academy last Tuesday evening.

Quite a number of the employes of the North Monson mill enjoyed a sleigh-ride to Wales last Saturday.

The Dorcas society held a well-attended meeting at the home of Mrs. George King Wednesday afternoon.

The young people of the Congregational church will hold an entertainment in the church parlors this evening.

The intermediate school in district No. 1 enjoyed a sleigh-ride through Monson, Palmer and Thorndike, Tuesday.

The officers of Marcus Keep Post, G. A. R., were installed by Past Commander A. A. Gage last Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Willard Darling have the sympathy of their friends in the death of their little son by pneumonia last Saturday.

Arba Squier has leased a portion of the Granite Hill quarry to Muir, Mitchell & Russell of Springfield, who will commence operations at once.

The day of prayer for schools and colleges was observed at the academy yesterday afternoon with speaking by students of Amherst college.

Arba Squier, the lumber dealer, has taken into partnership his son, W. A. Squier, and the business will be conducted under the firm name of A. Squier & Son.

Miss Mary P. Gamely, a returned missionary from China, will lecture at the Methodist church at both morning and evening services next Sunday.

There will bea special meeting of Marcus Keep Post, G. A. R., for the transaction of important business, next Monday night. All members are requested to be present.

The straw workers have engaged the orchestrial club of Springfield to furnish music, and A. A. Bicknell of Worcester to do the prompting for their ball, February 7th.

Considerable interest was shown in the trotting on Main street, last Friday, between horses driven by G. W. Burdick and Geo. C. Flynt, in which the latter was victorious.

O'Brien Bros'. horse started on a run Wednesday, overturning the sleigh near Gage & Reynolds's shop. Eggs and other articles were strewn promiscuously around, otherwise the team escaped damage.

Fr. Coyle of Stafford Springs, with his choir and Sunday-school teachers, enjoyed a sleigh-ride to this place Thursday evening, stopping at the Monson House, where an oyster suppre was served, and music and dancing followed.

A new catalogue will soon be issued for the public library, the contract for printing having been awarded to C. B. Fisk & Co. of Palmer, theirs being the lowest of the several bids solicited. The new book will contain an alphabetical list of nearly 4000 books.

Fr. Lee gave his choir and Sunday-school teachers a sleigh-ride Friday evening, the party going to Stafford and stopping at the Springs House. A fine supper was served to the guests, which was followed by dancing. All had an excellent time and arrived home in the small hours Saturday morning.

The gathering of the ice crop is well under way. G. W. Burdick is housing a large supply of nice 15 inch ice, clear as crystal, and is supplying the farmers who find ice a necessity in their business. J. H. Robbins, who supplies town's people in summer, is filling his large ice houses from Ellis & Son's pond.

Dr. Rand's horse took another spin last Thursday, this time accompanied by the driver, who managed to keep him in the road, but did not succeed in stopping him until he had ran some two miles below State Line, where the mantied him to a tree and started home on foot, but was persuaded to ride with another driver.

The following officers of Dayspring Lodge, F. and A. M., were installed by Past Master A. A. Gage Tuesday evening: W. M., Charles R. Bullington; S. W., R. F. Bradway; J. W., George W. Johnson; treasurer, G. E. Fuller; secretary, G. L. Fuller; chaplain, Harlow Chapin; M., Frank Fenton; S. D., Edward R. Sisson; J. D., Charles W. Darling; S. S., Dr. F. W. Bancroft; J. S., M. F. Bacon; T., Nelson Bugbee.

The many friends of Miss Mary E. Leary, oldest daughter of the late Timothy Leary, who went to Denver, Col., last August, were pained to receive the news of her death by typhoid fever last week. Her brother, who accompanied her there and was with her when she died, came home with the remains on Monday. The funeral was attended at St. Patrick's church Monday morning, Rev. Fr. Lee conducting the services. The employes of Gage & Reynold's shop, where she formerly worked, sent a beautiful pillow with the word "Mary," as a token of their esteem.

Josie C., aged 26, wife of Wallace R. Morse, and only daughter of Wm. McDonald, was buried from the house of her parents last Saturday afternoon. Although the weather was intensely cold there was a large attendance, for the deceased was beloved for the virtues that adorned her sweet and stainless character. All who knew her were her friends. The A. O. U. W. of Stafford Springs, of which Mr. Morse is a member, sent a delegation to serve as bearers, and other members of the order were also present. The employes in the Messrs. Reynolds's mills, where Mr. Morse is employed, presented some beautiful floral designs; and other neighbors and friends manifested in many tender ways their sincere affection for the deceased, for which the husband and family are truly grateful. The services were conducted by Rev. G. V. Maxham, assisted by Rev. Ira A. Priest, pastor of the Universalist church, and his choir.

Following is the programme of the concert to be given by the Ladies' Schubert Quartette, assisted by E. C. Abbott, reader, and Gad Robinson, banjoist, under the auspices of the Y. M. S. Club, next Tuesday evening. Tickets are on sale at Keeney's:--

FIFTY YEARS OF MARRIED LIFE.

An enjoyable event, and one which will long be remembered by the participants with much pleasure, occurred at the house of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Blanchard on Green street last Saturday evening, when they were surprised by a number of their friends who came to remind them that they had been married 50 years. A gold-headed cane, upholsteredeasy chair and crayon portrait were presented, to which Mr. Blanchard appropriately responded. A poem written for the occasion was read by Frank King of Ludlow. A fine supper was served, the feature being "the bridal loaf of cake," bearing the figures "1838" and "1888", made by Mrs. S. S. Swett. Mr. Blanchard was born in Monson Dec. 17, 1814, and has spent his whole life here. His wife was also born in this town, April 20, 1814. There marriage took place at the old King tavern in Palmer Center in 1838, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Samuel Baccus. The wedding dress worn at that time by Mrs. Blanchard was lavender silk, and was worn at the golden wedding by Mrs. Hattie E. Rogers, a granddaughter. Mr. and Mrs. Blanchard have a son and daughter, two grandchildren and two great-grandchildren, all of whom were present on this occasion.

WARE AND VICINITY.

Cheever's horse broke through while getting in the crop of ice, but was gotten out without serious damage.

The Knights of Labor are to give up their lease of Music Hall February 1st, and hold their meetings in Grand Army Hall.

Nineteen young friends of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Howard paid them a visit at South Brookfield Tuesday night, and report an enjoyable time.

Wheeler B. Parker has bought the Kenney place on Church street of P. H. Sagendorph. It is reported that the price paid was about $2100.

A sleigh-ride of about ten couples went from Ware Center to Greenwich Wednesday evening, attending a chicken pie supper that was served there.

R. C. Snow and daughter Alberta, who have been on a trip to London and Paris since Thanksgiving time, arrived home last Monday night, having had a most enjoyable trip.

Frank J. Lothrop and his sister Mary have gone to California to spend the winter. Their brother, Fred O. Lothrop, formerly in the jewelry business here, is at Los Angeles.

W. F. Kahn of Marlboro is to open the photograph rooms in Dr. Yale's Block for sittings on Wednesday of each week. Engagements may be made at Dr. Yale's Drug store, where samples will be exhibited.

Rice's Female Minstrels are booked for the Town Hall February 9. This company is not to be confounded with the low-lived Duncan Clark's Female Minstrels, who were here some time ago, but are said to give a fine strictly moral entertainment.

The Owl's grand concert and ball, which promises to be the event of the season, will be held at the Town Hall a week from to-night. They have spared no pains or expense to have it one of the finest social gatherings of this kind ever held in this town.

George H. Goldsmith was convicted at Worcester Tuesday, of an assault on Miss Mabel Leonard, over a year ago. At the time of writing sentence had not been pronounced, although it has been reported on the street that he got 15 years in state prison.

A party went sleigh-riding from Ware to East Brookfield last week, to visit Ed. Sagendorff, formerly of Ware. On the way home they had a tip over, and Miss Agnes Campbell was taken up insensible, but soon recovered and was not seriously injured.

The cold wave struck Ware the past week. Monday morning the mercury was reported from 18° to 26° below zero. It was a little more mild Monday night and Tuesday morning, but Wednesday morning it was from 6 to 12 degrees below, and a bitter cold day.

George La Prox, an employe at the Otis Company's bleachery, had his left arm completely torn of in an extractor yesterday. He was putting wet goods in the machine, and after setting it in motion attempted to press the goods down with his hand, which was caught and drawn around the spindle of the rapidly revolving machine, which tore the arm completely off before the speed could be shut off.

Trinity Episcopal society is circulating a paper for subscriptions to their building fund, and when the sum of $6000 shall have been raised the lot on South street, corner of Munroe street, known as the Collins property, will be purchased as a site for their proposed new church. No doubt many would subscribe liberally to have the society locate there, as the buildings now located there are a blot on the otherwise beautiful street.

LEGISLATIVE DOINGS.

From our Special Correspondent.

BOSTON, JAN. 25, 1888.

The Senate took its vote on the prohibitory amendment which is required by the constitution on Thursday afternoon, and below is the result:

YEAS: Clark of Hampshire, Clark of Essex, Cook, Fletcher, Gleason of Worcester, Gleason of Plymouth, Howe, Howland, Keith of the Cape, Keith of Plymouth, Kimball, Kingsley, Ladd, Marble, McAlpine, Messinger, Palmer, Pike, Sleeper, Southworth, Stevens, Towne, Tucker, Walker, Wheelock—25.

NAYS: Collins, Dwyer, Hathorne, Perkins, Roads, Slatery, Spellman, Sprague—8.

No Democrat voted yes and two Republicans, Hathorne and Sprague, voted no. Hartwell and Glines (yes) were paired with Crosby and Howard (no) and Messrs. Boardman, Shea and Sullivan did not vote.

After adjournment the House Republicans met in caucus to see what action they would take on the amendment. Rev. Mr. Gracey of Salem opposed the change of the word "alcoholic" to "intoxicating," as it opened the door to much uncertainty, but he did not press his motion to change it. By vote of 127 to 3 they showed their preference for the amendment, though some who vote for it because the Republican party is in favor of it, will vote against it at the polls. But they believe that they must waive their personal opinions on account of the party.

Each branch held but a short session on Friday. No debatable matters were in either calendar and but few petitions and orders were presented. Among the petitions was one from the committee of the trustees of that notable institution, Mount Holyoke Female Seminary. Rev. Dr. N. G. Clark, ex-Gov. William Claflin and Henry D. Hyde petition for a charge in its charter so that it may add a college department and may issue degrees for its college course, and that its name may be changed to "the trustees of Mount Holyoke Seminary and College."

A report was presented in the Senate from the committee on expediting business that all matters should be reported to the two branches at once which have been heard by previous Legislatures or have been the subject of public discussion, "provided," adds the committee, "it can be done without injustice to any interests."

The labor committee is already hard at work on the labor matters before it, and has now under special consideration a bill to prevent the infliction of heavy punishments for imperfect weaving. Some radical legislation is proposed, the most extreme of which is that if a weaver is discharged for resisting an unjust fine, he shall be regarded as the victim of a conspiracy to prevent him from earning living, and can sue for damages accordingly.

The state house commission has made a creditable report. They had the usual appropriation of $10,000 made for repairs and furniture in the state house, and they report a balance of $6,834.

Some of the new legislation proposed on Monday was to prevent women and minors from working over 56½ hours a week; to priovde that no person engaged in the liquor business should be surety on a liquor license; to provide for biennial state elections (this was a petition from John R. Bronson and others of Attleboro); to enact a stringent prohibitory law; to allow the incorporation of a new agricultural society to embrace Oxford, Sutton, Auburn, Millbury, Charlton, Dudley and Webster (this was a petition of ex-Senator Stockwell of Sutton and of one official representative of each of the other towns); to prevent the repeal of the weekly payments law (a petition from the Central Labor Lyceum); to change the age of consent from 13 to 18; to change the ten hour law to an eight-hour law; to allow widows who pay taxes to vote for city and town officers; and to prevent unlawful gaming.

On Tuesday the Beverly Farms hearing was begun, with George M. Stearns as counsel for the petitioners and ex-Gov. Robinson as counsel for the old town, which does not want to be divided, but Stearns's associate, Williams, could not be present, and the hearing was put off until to-day, when it was resumed before a large crowd.

Tuesday's new business was worth mention in part. The Franklin county commissioners and several county court officials ask for an increase of salary. Frank K. Foster, once Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, remonstrated against restoring the convict labor contract system in any way. It is proposed to increase the number of jurors who may be challenged peremptorily. An order was introduced in regard to more thorough examinations of school teachers, but to the Catholic mind this appeared to be suspicious, and so it was laid over. It was adopted to-day without dissent.

Mr. Quincy of Quincy proposed to put in a bill which was very brief, but was remarkably sweeping. It was that no liquor licenses shall be valid after April 30 next, any existing legislation to the contrary notwithstanding. It made a little flurry and was laid over on the request of Mr. McDonough of Boston, not being formally introduced at all.

The prohibitory constitutional amendment was the last number of Tuesday's calendar and it was advanced one stage without debate, as that could be done by a majority vote, whereas a two-thirds vote is necessary on the last stage. Mr. Dresser of Medford gave notice of moving to change "intoxicating" to "alcoholic," and Mr. Mellen of Worcester urged the opponents of the measure not to pair.

Wednesday afternoon the prohibitory contest was brought on in earnest, and it was the great debate of the year thus far. Mr. Quincy's bill was really an introduction to it, and he said squarely that he did not propose to support it if it came to a vote on its merits, for he did not believe prohibition to be the best way of stopping intemperance. But he thought the people had a right to know how the representatives stood. Members had no right to shirk their real position by voting to submit to the people a matter they did not personally believe in. They were bound by their oaths to vote on the merits of the case. Mr. Parkman of Boston resented being told what was their duty. After a sharp debate Mr. Quincy's bill was tabled by 157 to 74. When the prohibitory amendment came up Mr. Dresser of Medford withdrew a promised amendment to change "intoxicating" to "alcoholic," and Mr. Quincy at once moved it. This was debated at length, the Republicans arguing that "alcoholic" was not as good as "intoxicating," and the Democrats taking the other side. The amendment was defeated, 88 to 137. Then on the final question of supporting the amendment the vote was 160 to 70, or more than two-thirds, so it goes to the next Legislature. Seven Democrats voted yes and six Republicans no. Messrs. Grosvenor of Ludlow and Hitchcock of Ware voted yes.

Henry S. Hyde of Springfield has been confirmed as a trustee of the agricultural college, and George B. Loring of Salem as a member of the state board of agriculture.

Representative Lyman of Belchertown, for the committee on education, reported a bill for the benefit of the Hitchcock Free High School at Brimfield. It enlarges the number of trustees from 13 to 15, and makes any suitable person eligible, provided that at least nine must be residents of Brimfield. They are to be divided into five classes of three, each to hold for five years. They may spend $700 for land from the accumulations of the building fund, and when the fund reaches $8000 the income may be used for instruction in the school, but if use of the money for the original purpose reduced the amount below $8000, the sum must be made good before used for any other purpose. A salary may be paid to the treasurer, who may or may not be a trustee. All persons who have been connected with the school, and the teachers in the public schools, may have the privileges of the library. The school may hold $200,000 of real and personal property.

LANDON.

Prominent Physicians, Clergymen, and all classes of citizens are unanimous in the indorsement of Salvation Oil, the great cure for rheumatism.

No greater guarantee of the excellence of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup could be furnished than that it is recommended by all the leading druggists.

Broadhurst Bros., (Morse's Shoe Store), Springfield, Mass., begin their great annual sale of shoes Wednesday, February 1st. The simple announcement that this sale begins next week is enough to ensure them a crowd of customers. Every shoe slightly soiled must go at some price, even if not in hailing distance of the first cost.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra was organized by Mr. Higginson, a wealthy banker, with a definite purpose of locating in Boston an Orchestra second to none in the world. George Henschel was engaged as director until he went abroad, when Mr. Higginson, then in Vienna, secured Mr. Wilhelm Gericke, of the Imperial Opera, to succeed Mr. Henschel, with instructions to allow no expense to stand in the way of his purpose being realized. Mr. Gericke's ability is admitted on all hands, and under his leadership the organization has made such rapid improvements that the founder's original idea is generally admitted to have been fully realized. Knowing the musical taste of this vicinity, Messrs. C. N. Stimpson & Co. of Springfield, have been permitted a voice in the selections of the programme for the concert of February 6th, and they have selected the most successful numbers of their recent performances in the large cities. The added presence of Adele Aus Der Ohe, the famous pianist of the recent Thomas Concert, and Miss Hattie J. Clapper, the eminent contralto whose voice gave inspiration to the Messiah Concert. Our readers have an entertainment seldom offered in this vicinity.

Singers and public speakers find Ayer's Cherry Pectoral invaluable. It never fails to cleanse the throat and strengthen the voice.

Best of iodides and vegetable alteratives make Ayer's Sarsaparilla the best blood medicine.

I suffered from a very severe cold in my head for months and used everything recommended, but could get no relief. Was advised to use Ely's Cream Balm. It has worked like magic in its cure. I am free from my cold after using the Balm one week, and I believe it is the best remedy known. Feeling grateful for what it has done I send this testimonial.—Samuel J. Harris, Wholesale Grocer, 119 Front street, New York.

Pond's Extract, used by physicians and hospitals in all parts of the world, for pain and hemorrhages. Genuine only in bottles with buff wrappers.

Many preparations professedly harmless, prove exceedingly dangerous, but Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup is perfectly safe at all times. Price 25 cents.

A yellowish complexion is not at all desirable; to banish it, use Laxador, the golden remedy for all liver diseases. It only costs 25 cents.

A FORTUNATE AND GRATEFUL WOMAN.

Mrs. J. H. Giles of Everett, Pa., says: I suffered for many years from Kidney and Gravel trouble. Besides, I had other complaints common to my sex. I began using Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y. A few words tell the result. I am a happy and perfectly well woman once more. Thanks to Dr. David Kennedy and his Favorite Remedy. Price $1. 4w43

BEWARE OF SWINDLERS.

We have exposed, during the last year, many swindlers who advertise, under the name of medicine, vile compounds which only increase human suffering. To all who need a pure medicine and blood purifier, we can honestly recommend Sulphur Bitters.—Editor Sun. 4w43

Facts You Can Bet On.

That the oldest and largest tobacco factory in the world is in Jersey City, N. J.

That this factory makes the popular and world-famed Climax Plug, the acknowledged standard for first-class chewing tobacco.

That this factory was established as long ago as 1760.

The last year (1886) it made and sold the enormous quantity of 27,982,280 pounds, or fourteen thousand tons of tobacco.

That this was more than one-seventh of all the tobacco made in the United States, notwithstanding that there were 966 factories at work.

That in the last 21 years this factory has helped support the United States Government to the extent of over forty-four million seven hundred thousand dollars ($44,700,000) paid into the U. S. Treasury in Internal Revenue taxes.

That the pay-roll of this factory is about $1,000,000 per year, or $20,000 per week.

That this factory employs about 3500 operatives.

That this factory makes such a wonderfully good chew in Climax Plug that many other factories have tried to imitate it in vain, and in despair now try to attract custom by offering larger pieces of inferior goods for the same price.

That this factory nevertheless continues to increase it business every year.

That this factory belongs to and is operated by

Yours, very truly,

THE NEW YORK
Mail and Express

THE ADVOCATE OF THE BEST INTERESTS OF THE HOME—THE ENEMY OF THE SALOON.
THE FRIEND OF AMERICAN LABOR.
THE FAVORITE NEWSPAPER OF THE PEOPLE OF REFINED TASTES EVERYWHERE.

The New York Mail and Express, the favorite American newspaper of many people of intelligent and cultivated tastes, has recently made some noteworthy improvements, materially increasing its general excellence. It is in the broadest sense

A NATIONAL NEWSPAPER,

most carefully edited, and adapted to the wants and tastes of intelligent readers throughout the entire country—North, South, East and West. It is a thoroughly clean paper, free from corrupting, sensational and demoralizing trash, miscalled news, which defiles the pages of too many city papers.

Our Politics.

We believe the Republican party to be the true instrument of the Political Progress of the American people; and holding that the honest enforcement of its principles is the best guarantee of the national welfare, we shall support them with all our might; but we shall always treat opposing parties with consideration and fair play.

Against the Saloon.

The Mail and Express is the recognized National organ of the great Anti-Saloon Republican movement. It believes that the liquor traffic as it exists to-day in the United States is the enemy of society, a fruitful source of corruption in politics, the ally of anarchy, a school of crime, and, with its avowed purpose of seeking to corruptly control elections and legislation, is a menace to the public welfare and deserves the condemnation of all good men.

The Great Secret

Of exceptionally long and abundant hair may never be solved; but that AYER'S HAIR VIGOR preserves the hair in all its beauty and luxuriance, and even restores it, when thin and gray, is

Well Known.

P. J. Cullen, Saratoga Springs, N. Y., writes: "My father, at about the age of fifty, lost all the hair from the top of his head. After one month's trial of Ayer's Hair Vigor, the hair began coming, and, in three months, he had a fine growth of hair of the natural color."

J. T. Gibson, 96 Hope St., Huntley, Staffordshire, Eng., says: "I have seen young men in South Australia, quite gray whose hair has been restored to its natural color after using but one bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor."

Ayer's Hair Vigor.

SULPHUR BITTERS

THE BEST AND PUREST MEDICINE EVER MADE.

TRUTHS FOR THE SICK.

It will drive the Humor from your system, and make your skin clean and smooth. Those Pimples and Blotches which mar your beauty are caused by impure blood, and can be removed in a short time, if you are wise and use the great blood purifier, SULPHUR BITTERS.

DON'T GIVE UP! What makes you tremble so? Your nerves are all unstrung, and need a gentle, soothing tonic to assist nature to repair the damage which your excesses have caused. Sulphur Bitters is NOT a cheap rum or poor whisky drink, to be taken by the glass, like other preparations, which stimulate only to destroy. Why suffer with Boils? Why rave with that terrible headache? Why lay and toss on that bed of pain with rheumatism?

If you have failed to receive any benefit from other medicines or doctors, do not despair. Use Sulphur Bitters. They will cure you when all others fail. No person can remain long sick who uses SULPHUR BITTERS.

The dose is small—only a teaspoonful. It is the best and cheapest medicine. Try it, and you will be satisfied. Get it of your druggist. Don't wait, get it at onec. If you are suffering from Kidney Disease, and wish to live to old age, use Sulphur Bitters. They never fail to cure. SULPHUR BITTERS.

An Unfortunate Incident.

As Mr. Jones walked down the aisle
On Sunday, beaming with a smaile,
His heart was wholly free from guisle.
What then could his calm raisle?
In one hand was a shining taisle;
His clothes were of the latest staile,
And which the same had cost a paisle,
The people eyed Jones all the whaisle—
But mournful to tell,
He stumbled and fell.
Ah, then would Jones have gnawed a faisle,
Or jumped headlong into the Naisle,
But he thought no thoughts that were vaisle,
Nor made a display of his baisle—
He got up and sat down
Without a grin or a frown,
Yet wished he were distant a maisle.

THE LEGEND OF THE TWO SACKS.

There is an ancient legend that tells of an old man who was in the habit of traveling from place to place with a sack hanging behind him and another in front of him.

What do you think the sacks were for? I will tell you.

In the one behind he tossed all the kind deeds of his friends, where they were quickly hid from view; and he soon forgot all about them.

In the one hanging around his neck, under his chin, he popped all the sins the people he knew committed; and these he was in the habit of turning over and looking at as he walked along, day by day.

One day, to his surprise, he met a man wearing, just like himself, a sack in front and one behind. He went to him and began feeling his sack.

"What have you there, my friend?" he asked, giving the sack in front a good poke.

"Stop, don't do that!" cried the other, "you'll spoil my good things."

"What things?" asked number one.

"Why, my good deeds," answered number two, "I keep them all in front of me, where I can always see them, and take them out and air them. See, here is the half crown I put in the plate Sunday; and the shawl I gave the poor beggar girl; and the mittens I gave to the cripple boy; and the penny I gave to the organ grinder; and there is even the benevolent smile I béstowed on the crossing sweeper at my door; and—"

"And what is in the sack behind you?" asked the first traveler, who thought his companion's good deeds would never come to an end.

"Tut, tut," said number two, "there is nothing I care to look at in there! That sack holds what I call my little mistakes."

"It seems to me that your sack of mistakes is fuller than the other," said number one.

Number two frowned. He had never thought of that. Although he had put what he called his "mistakes" out of sight everyone else could see them still. An angry reply was on his lips, when happily a third traveler, also carrying two sacks, as they were, overtook them. The first two men at once pounced on the stranger.

"What cargo do you carry in your sack," cried one.

"Let's see your goods," said the other.

"With all my heart," quoth the stranger; "for I have a goodly assortment, and I like to show them. This sack," said he, pointing to the one hanging in front of him, "is full of the good deeds of others."

"Your sack looks nearly touching the ground. It must be a pretty heavy weight to carry," observed number one.

"There you are mistaken," replied the stranger; "the weight is only such as sails are to a ship, or wings to an eagle. It helps me onward."

"Well, your sack behind can be of but little use to you," said number two, "for it appears to be empty, and I see it has a hole in the bottom of it."

"I made the hole on purpose," said the stranger, "for all the evil I hear of people I put in there, and it falls through and is lost. So you see I have no weight to draw me down backwards."

NO JOKE ON HER.

A woman living on Columbia street east came down town the other day with a "yearling" in a baby carriage, and when she reached a certain dry goods store she left the cab at the door and went in to trade. The youngster was good natured over being left alone, and one of the clerks in the store who knew the mother well thought to play a joke on her. While she was busy trading he slipped out and wheeled the carriage into an adjoining store. A rush of customers prevented him from seeing the woman as she went out. She stood at the door for a moment, as if wondering if she had left something, and then started out and went straight home.

By that time "bub" had become uneasy and was raising a row, and they sent in for the clerk to come and get him. The mother having departed for home, he was obliged to follow her with cart and baby, the latter howling at the top of its voice and attracting general attention. The clerk had reached the gate when the woman came out, and as she saw baby and cart she threw up both hands and exclaimed:

"Dear me, but I thought it was a spool of twist I had forgotten!"—Detroit Free Press.

"I don't think I'd go out like that," he said to his wife, who turned to him radiant in a new hat, and fresh from the finishing touches of the toilet. "What's the matter with me?" "Well I'd wash my face if I were you." "Well, I never! It has taken me two hours to get myself up. Have I put on too much powder?" "No, you have a black smudge clear around your beautiful nose, that's all, my darling." "What!" she screamed, and turned to the glass. "Where on earth can I have got that?" She picked up something in chamois leather from the dressing table, and looked at it. "I declare, if my new powder puff is not completely ruined." "That! That your powder puff?" "Yes; a new thing just out from New York, and there isn't another in town." "That a powder puff? I used it this afternoon for a penwiper."—Chicago Tribune.

Said Brown, in a meditative tone, "Wonder what would become of all the lawyers if the whole world should suddenly turn honest!" "If all the world should turn honest?" repeated Fogg. "Why, in that case there wouldn't be any lawyers, would there?"—Boston Transcript.

I Was Astonished.

Children often suffer greatly from impure blood until a good medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla, is taken to expel impurities and give vitality.

READ THIS:

"I think it my duty to tell how much good Hood's Sarsaparilla did my little girl. She was from birth puny, pale and sickly, and did not gain strength as she grew older. Even when three years of age she could not stand alone. She ate hardly anything, and seemed to be weak constitutionally; but was doubtless kept back by impure blood, which caused her much discomfort and suffering. She had scald head terribly, her head being covered with one sore. I decided to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and I was astonished at the effect the first bottle had on her. Her appetite began to pick up, and soon we could hardly give her enough to eat. She also gained strength, could stand alone, and the sore on her head began to grow less. We soon healed that up with Hood's Olive ointment, and when she had taken three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla she could run about the house as smart as any child. She has been bright and hearty ever since. I write this out of pure gratitude to Hood's Sarsaparilla." E. T. Alexander, 28 Cleaves street, Portland, Me.

How a Dying Child was Saved.

CICERO, HAMILTON CO., IND., Sept., 19, 1887.

The following is a true account of what your S. S. S. has done for our little daughter, Hazel, now four years old. When twelve months old a lump appeared on her heel, which slowly grew larger. The family physician thought it was caused by a piece of broken glass or a needle, but failed to bring anything to light. The child became feebler all the time, seeming to lose the use of her leg, and finally quit walking altogether. The middle finger and thumb became enlarged, the flesh becoming hard. The hip joints became involved, so that when seventeen months old she could not stand, having lost the use of her hand and arm. Partial curvature of the spine also followed. The nervous system was wrecked, muscles contracted, and there was a general wasting of flesh and muscle. At eighteen months she was placed under the treatment of a prominent physician of Boston, Mass., but at the end of ten months she had declined to such a degree that she was in a dying condition. This was in April, 1884. We took the child away not knowing what to do. In this dilemma we were over-persuaded by friends to try "one bottle" of SWIFT'S SPECIFIC, which we did, and before it had all been taken we saw a change for the better in her symptoms. We kept it up, and have done so to this day, and will keep it up, if the Lord wills, for many days to come, for it has brought our dying Hazel to life, to vigor, to strength and health again. The ashen hue of her cheeks turned to a rosy tint. She is able to walk anywhere, her languor and melancholy have passed away, and she is now a blithe, cheerful, happy, romping child. Should you wish to increase your testimonials of proof of the virtue of S. S. S., our names and what we have said is but a portion of what we owe to you, should you wish to use them.

Kindly Yours,

The Cry of the Age.

In this age of rush, push and excitement, the cry of the day is for some preparation that will give food to the nerves and brain, and enable them to undergo the greatest pressure and work without prostration. ALL STIMULANTS ARE DEADLY in their effects, the reaction invariably proving in the long run disastrous. What the brain and nerves call for, and must have, if any permanent good is to be experienced, is a FOOD THAT WILL GIVE STRENGTH, VITALITY, and in a word, build up and restore the shattered frame. This is precisely what that most marvelous remedy of the age,

DR. R. C. FLOWER'S SCIENTIFIC

Brain and Nerve Pills

accomplish. They are not stimulants, nor do they contain a particle of those strong, dangerous drugs found in most nerve remedies, such as strychnine, arsenic, iron, quinine, opium, in any form—coca, caffeine, or bromide; but they are a rare combination of the finest Nerve and Brain Foods ever discovered or compounded. 100 Pills in every bottle. Price $1 a bottle.

The Old man backin' him, fer three months—
And all 'at I heerd the Old man say
Was, jes' as we turned to start away,—
"Well: good-bye, Jim:
Take keer of yourse'f!"

'Peared-like, he was more satisfied
Jes' lookin' at Jim
And likin' him all to hisse'f-like, see?—
'Cause he was jes' wrapped up in him!
And over and over I mind the day
The old man come and stood round in the way
While he was drillin', a-watchin' Jim—
And down at the depot a-heerin' him say,—
"Well: good-by, Jim:
Take keer of yourse'f!"

Never was nothin' about the farm
Disting'ished Jim:—
Neighbors all ust to wonder why
The old man 'peared wrapped up in him:
But when Capt. Biggler, he writ back
'At Jim was the bravest boy we had
In the whole dern regiment, white er black,
And his fightin' good as his farmin' bad—
'At he had led, with a bullet clean
Bored through his thigh, and carried the flag
Through the bloodiest battle you ever seen,—
The Old man wound up a letter to him
'At Cap. read to us, 'at said,—"Tell Jim
Good-bye;
And take keer of hisse'f."

Jim come back jes' long enough
To take the whim
'At he'd like to go back in th' cavalry—
And the Old man jes' wrapped up in him!"—
Jim 'lowed 'at he'd had sich luck afore,
Guessed he tackle her three years more.
And the Old man gave him a colt he'd raised
And follered him over to Camp Ben Wade,
And laid around for a week er so,
Watchin' Jim on dress-parade—
Tel finally he rid away,
And last he heerd was the Old man say,—
"Well; good-bye, Jim:
Take keer yourse'f!"

Tuk the papers, the Old man did,
A-watchin' for Jim—
Fully believin' he'd make his mark
Some way —jes' wrapped up in him!
And many a time the word 'u'd come
'At stirred him up like the tap of a drum—
At Petersburg, fer instance, where
Jim rid right into their cannons there,
And tuk 'em, and p'inted 'em t' other way
And socked it home to the boys in gray,
As he scooted fer timber, and on and on—
Jim a lieutenant and one arm gone,
And the Old man's words in his mind all day,—
"Well; good-bye, Jim:
Take keer of yourse'f!

Think of a private, now perhaps,
We'll say like Jim,
'At's clum clean up to the shoulder-straps—
And the Old man jes' wrapped up in him!
Think of him — with the war plum' through,
And the glorious Red-White-and-Blue
A-laughin' the news down over Jim
And the Old man bendin' over him—
The surgeon turnin' away with tears
'At had n't leaked fer years and years—
As the hand of the dyin' boy clung to
His father's the old voice in his ears,—
Well; good-bye, Jim:
Take keer of yourse'f!"

THE LIEUTENANT'S PRISONER.

Charles Parker, being a young man from the East, and a newly-fledged graduate of the military academy, was not looked upon with awe by the frontiersmen around his Arizona post, and certainly not with a fearful respect by the military.

The frontiersmen, from their proud height of dyspepsia and dirt, recognized tidy Mr. Parker only as a "tenderfoot," while the older officers and soldiers were slow to concede military merit to a youngster who had escaped death or court-martial for a shorter period than themselves.

In reality, Lieut. Parker knew very little about the energetic West as it is materialized around Fort McDowell, and what little he knew did not swell him with pride. It was his idea that if knowledge is power, knowledge of Arizona was only mule power and not to be coveted. He was not in deadly fear of that truculent creature, the Arizonian, in a red shirt, but if he had chosen an individual to stand betwix the wind and his nobility, the gentleman in the carmine camisa would not have obtained the situation. His life was not totally without charms, one of those charming young ladies found only in army cirles, who have all the polish of their more fortunate city sisters with a seductive frankness and abandon developed in their Bohemian existence.

It was arranged between Miss Helen and Parker that when he could get leave, it should be a wedding journey. It was the peculiar charm of this arrangement that it was made without the colonel's assistance or knowledge. Lovers must have their secrets. A lover without a weighty secret would cut as poor a figure as a secretless statesman.

However, the chances of Parker's getting a furlough were slim. His captain was on an indefinite sick leave, having a splendid time and entering heartily into business, while his first lieutenant was in Washington engaged in some onerous duty which required peculiar talents and considerable "influence."

"One officer," said the law, "must be with the troops," and when the law uttered these words, it ignored the astute captain and the powerful first lieutenant, and pointed with its crooked finger at our friend, Mr. Parker.

The morning when history finds him, the lone lieutenat, acting as post adjutant, was sitting at his desk in the colonel's office, gravely referring official papers to himself in some of his many capacities, such as quartermaster, commissary, ordinance officer, post treasurer, chief of scouts, overseer of schools, or perpetual officer of the day. By his formal words one would have thought him on very frigid terms with himself. Instead, for instance, of saying, "Parker, will you take a squint at this!" he wrote: "Respectfully referred to Lieut. Parker, who will take the action required."

Meanwhile the colonel was knitting his brows over the order from headquarters.

"What do you think of that?" he said at last, handing the paper to Parker.

The young man read the order, but made no answer. He liked to have his opinion asked, but did not suppose that his crude ideas would be of value to an officer of so much greater experience.

"What do you think?" repeated the colonel, mildly.

"I suppose it'll have to be done," said the lieutenant, vaguely, not knowing on what point a reply was wished.

"Yes," mused the colonel, "but how? This says he is supposed to be at Sanford, but the description is vague to make a search on."

"Oh, that," said Parker, "why, I think I know the man already. I saw him last summer when I was surveying the line from Gila Bend to Tucson. He keeps a saloon in Sanford."

The colonel shook his head.

"I was going to send for an older officer, but if you can identify the man you'll have to go. Humph! Not a very pleasant or easy duty"—and he looked hard at the young man's smooth face—"it's worse than Indian fighting. Maybe I had better have an older officer go with you."

"If you think it is necessary."

"I don't," said the colonel, instantly determined by Parker's look; and he wrote in pencil the draft for an order:

"Lieut. Parker will proceed directly to Sanford, Arizona, with a detail of six men, and arrest escaped military convict, John Devine."

"Just have that published."

Parker hesitated; but as the responsibility of the arrest was to depend on him, he determined to speak.

"If that order is published, word of it will go to this convict by means of the 'underground,' and he will give me the slip."

"Suppose you were to go away without an order," said the colonel; "that would excite suspicion as well."

"Let it be a false order."

"It wouldn't do any good. When these fellows see a soldier, they are on the alert, order or no order. They know the soldier is after some one, and they send the word on by their underground for the benefit of whom it may concern. You will have to take the chance of traveling as fast as the news of you coming."

But Parker had an idea. He thought he could entrap an Arizonian as easily as if he had worn a red shirt from infancy.

"I learned something," said he, "last summer when I was down there. When they knew I was surveying I could have had as many blacklegs in my society as I wished. Mr. Devine himself waited on me at his saloon. Send me down on telegraph business again."

"Good!" cried the colonel. "Make out an order to examine the line and publish it here. You will have the real order in your pocket."

In half an hour the ambulance rolled out of Fort McDowell into the long road across the desert. The soldiers were in good spirits over a holiday. Very true, they carried carbines and revolvers, but in Arizona carbines and revolvers are as readily associated with good spirits as cheerfulness with beans and big grocery bill in New England.

The travel brought them to Sacaton on the Gila, where Parker had been the year before. When the people learned his present errand he was hospitably entertained and no warning of his coming was sent forward. But in conversation with the Indian agent, to whom he revealed his true orders, he learned that the convict, frightened by previous rumors, had sold his saloon and was about to leave. This rendered an arrest a matter of double danger and difficulty.

Under these circumstances, although the next day was Sunday, Parker determined to push on. At six o'clock Sunday morning the ambulance was on its way with a drive before it of eighteen miles. Parker, half a mile from his destination, put off his unconcern and ordered the driver to stop. Then he pulled the true orders out of his pocket and read them. The soldiers exchanged glances. They thought the young lieutenant would not take things so easily if he knew the desperate character of his business. More respect was visible in their faces when he gave his orders. They perceived from his tone that if anyone faltered it would not be the "boy."

"We will drive into the plaza in front of Smith's. Devine will probably be in some saloon opposite. I shall go across the plaza to the saloon. You will loaf along, fifty yards in the rear, with your carbines. I'll let you know when I want you. Now drive on."

Arrived at Sanford, these directions were carried out to the letter. A small, but hard looking crowd gathered around the ambulance.

"Hello, Lieutenant!" said Smith, the own shyster coming out. "What is it?"

"Telegraph," replied Parker, for all to hear. "I have come to see what you can put up for it."

"Good," said Smith, while a murmur of approbation went through the crowd. "I'll take you round to see the people. Have the man put up the rig."

"Can't stop long enough. I'm going on to Florence to get their ideas. Driver, keep the team here. You men can go where you please, but be back in time to start."

The ruse having succeeded so far, Parker and Smith walked across the plaza to the saloon, while the men followed aimlessly along, carrying their carbines on their hips.

"Come in and have something," said the hospitable Smith, when they crossed the square; "help you talk business."

Parker accepted and they went in. The saloon consisted of two rooms. In the front room were two or three lounges, but from the back room there issued various sounds, which gave evidence of a crowded table of gamblers. Parker gave his order and placed himself so that by turning his head he could command a full view of the back room. Then he looked for his men.

They were already at the saloon door. They played their parts well, for they seemed not only waiting for their superior before they took a turn at the bar. Parker poured out a generous glass, and turned his eyes and glanced in the back room.

Directly in front of him at the opposite side of the table sat Devine. At the word "lieutenant" the convict raised his eyes and met Parker face to face. His first instinct was to escape recognition, he resorted to the clumsy device of dropping his glance and slouching forward his sombrero. Parker looking at him absently, turned to the front of the saloon, and still holding up his glass, made the signal. Then, without drinking, he sat the glass down, and walked directly to the door of the gambling room. He did not know what tragedy would follow his words, but he said:—

"John Devine I want you!"

A dozen pair of eyes were turned toward him and a dozen hands sought for the eyer-ready "guns;" but the pistols were not drawn. Almost immediately the men assumed a look of welcome, and seemed tacitly to acknowledge that they had mistaken the intruder.

"Hullo, lieutenant" cried two or three, in a frantic effort to set themselves right. "Hullo! Come in, come in. Glad to see you. Barkeeper, something for the lieutenant. Come in."

"Thank you," said Parker, wondering what deceit this greeting was meant to cover. "I'm on business, and business comes first. Come Johnny, I want you."

"What! want Johnny? What's he done?" they cried in grieved surprise. "Now, lieutenant, you don't want Johnny, do you?"

Parker made no reply but kept his eye warily on the crowd.

Devine threw down his cards, as if in dispair, saying:—

"All right; I've got to go. This thing has been hanging over me for a year, and I'm glad it has come."

"But don't be in a rush, lieutenant. Have a drink. Come in and sit down. We ain't seen you in years."

Parker was so dumbfounded by this continued politeness that he looked about for the cause. It was evident. A big sergeant stood behind him for two cocked revolvers aimed at the crowd, and on each side of the door were soldiers with pointed carbiners.

The Arizona desperado understands the doctrine of chances as well as the rest of us.

Devine arose to follow. He looked mournfully at his big pile of chips.

"Who's banker?" asked Parker. "Banker, cash Johnny's chips. Sorry I can't let him stay so that you can have back at him, the money's his."

The disappointed banker made the exchange.

While the party were taking Devine to his house, where the convict wished to say good-bye to his wife, a horseman passed them at full speed, going toward Florence, a little town five miles to the east. The incident did not escape the unsophisticated lieutenant. He sent an orderly for the ambulance, and hurried Devine through his farewells. When the wagon drove up he was ready. Everybody was mounted. The convict had the appearance of being perfectly hopeless.

"Which way?" asked the driver.

Parker looked Devine keenly in the face and answered:—

"Back through Sacaton."

The convict dropped his head and his hopelessess was no longer assumed.

"Our friend on the horse will prepare his ambush for nothing, won't he?" asked Parker.

"He just will," replied the convict, with a laugh.

That night at ten o'clock, having driven eighty-three miles since nine in the morning, the detail arrived at the fort and Devine was secured in the post guard-house. The colonel was delighted and surprised.

"I spoke," said he "of having another officer here. I think I had better have him come now and give you a leave."

"Thank you," said the bold lieutenant; then he explained that leaves were best for wedding journeys, and so led up to a full revelation.

"In that case," replied the colonel, with a dusty, Arizona wit, "I will send for my other daughter, and give Helen a leave too."

RELATED TO HIM BY MARRIAGE.

San Francisco Chronicle: It was at a ball and he had just come from the East. He had just been introduced to a lovely creature. He told me what she wore. He was one of those kind of fellows who know what ladies wear. It was a sky blue tunic, trimmed with green lace and embroidered in gold, with a skirt of Valenciennes linsey-wolsey — or something that I don't remember. He had caught her name in introduction as Miss Something and he was the apparently friendly terms she was on much touched by her beauty. But he did not like with another fellow, and he began quietly pumping to find out how things stood.

"He seems very fond of you," he said.

"O, yes; he rather likes me."

"It looks very serious."

"O, no; it's not very serious."

"But there is something?"

"Nothing out of the ordinary."

"Perhaps he is a relation."

"Yes, he's a relation."

"Brother or cousin?"

"Neither. He's only a relation by marriage. He's my husband."

Two Lovers.

Two lovers by a moss-grown spring;
They leaned soft cheeks together there,
Mingled the dark and sunny hair,
And heard the wooing thrushes sing.
O budding time!
O love's best prime!

Two wedded from the portal stept;
The bells make happy carolings;
The air was soft as fanning wings,
While petals on the pathway slept.
O pure-eyed bride!
O tender pride!

Two faces o'er a cradle bent;
Two hands above the head were locked;
These pressed each other while they rocked;
These watched a life that love had sent.
O solemn hour!
O hidden power!

Two parents by the evening fire;
The red light fell about their knees
On heads that rose by slow degrees
Like buds upon the lily spire.
O patient life!
O tender strife!

The two still sat together there;
The red lights shone about their knees,
But all the heads by slow degrees
Had gone and left that lonely pair.
O voyage fast!
O banished past!

The red lights shone upon the floor,
And made the space between them wide;
They drew their chairs up side by side,
Their pale cheeks joined, and said, "Once more!"
O memories!
O past that is!

LETTER FROM CALIFORNIA.

Ostriches, Watermelons and Corner Lots.

PASADENA, CAL., JAN. 11, 1888.

I went out to an ostrich farm to-day. Eleven birds, all the way from Cape Town, Africa, comprise the colony. The birds as they stand (and the tallest are eight feet six inches tall) are valued at $1000 each, and weigh from three to four hundred pounds. The male birds have black and white feathers and the females are a sort of grey color. The feathers are picked twice a year. The "crop" is one pound to every bird, each picking, and the value is $100 per pound. Formerly it was an easy enough matter to get the birds, but the foreign feather dealers began to lose their business so that now an export duty of $500 per bird must be paid The birds have a pretty eye and are very quick of sight and hearing, but cannot jump nor fly, an ordinary board fence being sufficient to restrain them. The industry is profitable but risky. On my way to the ostrich farm I passed a watermelon patch, hundreds of melons lying about loose, apparently in good condition.

To the rear of our hotel is the Arrayo Seco. An arrayo is a valley, but the soil of California is peculiar, when it rains it seems to cut through the soil as easy as a knife through cheese, and the result is a valley with perpendicular sides in many places, and in time this forms a sufficiently deep and narrow place to be dignified with the name of canyon. The rains make bad work with the roads, and on bad days the genuine Californian simply drops business and retires to a dry place, and it is a very sensible thing to do.

It is said there are more miles of street railway in Pasadena (population 12,000) than there are in Worcester. A man or a syndicate purchases a track of land, and about the first thing done is to lay it out into lots and build a street railroad to it. The result is, a good many of the lines simply run out into the fields, but all the lines are said to pay expenses. The biggest lot of gamblers ever gotten together are now laying out the entire state of California into city and town cites, corner lots and "cheap lots." Bands of music are engaged, excursions planned, and it's hurrah boys in some direction or other all the time. That there is money in it to the man with money I have no doubt; to him who can afford to wait it is a pretty sure thing, but a great deal of the buying is done with the expectation of an immediate rise or before the purchaser's credit expires, and that's where a good many would-be millionaires are going to get left.

ONE NOTCH BETTER.

As a train was ready to leave the Central depot the other day, a drummer who occupied two seats, or had prepared to, left the car to say good-by to some one. When he returned he found his luggage on the wood box and a strange man in possession of the seats.

"What does this—this 'er—mean," he demanded as he drew himself up and took in the situation.

"Drummer, ain't you?" queried the other.

"Yes, sir."

"Drummer on $1200 a year?"

"That's my salary, sir, but what has that to do with this case?"

"A great deal, sir. I'm a lightning rod man on $1500."

And he calmly crossed his feet and unfolded his newspaper, while the drummer gathered up his things and went into the next car.

THE EDITOR MATERIALIZED.—A sullen looking young man with a horsewhip, entered a Nebraska newspaper office and asked the boy where the editor was. The boy "sized him up" and answered:

"Gone to Ohio; won't be back for six months."

"Where's the foreman?"

"He's gone to Washington with an invitation to the President. Won't be back 'fore cold weather. What do you want—want to paralyze 'em?"

"No, no, I owe $4, and though I'd pay up."

"That's so? Hold on a second; perhaps the editor hasn't started yet."

He whistled, a long, dark form crawled out of the wood box, and the editor was ready for business.—Nebraska State Journal.

TRAVELING BRIDES AND GROOMS.

"To watch the newly married couple who travel is one of the compensations of our arduous life," said an old hotel clerk the other day.

"How can you tell whether they are newly married or not?" inquired the Sun reporter to whom the remark was addressed.

"Tell them?" ejaculated the clerk; "I can pick them out as easily as if they carried signs, 'We are just married.'"

"Yes; but how?"

"Well, in the first place, they are always most abundant in the fall and winter. I don't know why it is, but such is the fact. One of the signs of a newly married couple is their spick and span new clothes. Somehow, when people get married they get as many new things as possible. The bride and groom have new hats and new trunks and new dusters. Then, again, they spend money more freely. When a man is in his honeymoon he generally feels as if he ought to be generous. He has a grateful sort of spirit, and throws his money around as if he wanted to show that the world has used him well. He has put by his money for the occasion, and is not afraid to spend it. He is specially anxious that the bride should eat and drink of the best. He must have a room with a private parlor, and not up stairs too far, and with a good view. Sometimes he is a little charry of asking for these things, but when we suggest them he always says 'Yes.' Of course it is part of our business to suggest them. We consider that we have the same right to pluck newly married couples as the undertaker has to pluck bereaved relatives."

"Do they behave differently from other people?"

"I should — well, yes. The husband does not run off to the barroom or the billiard room as the old married men do. When the old married couple arrive, you may be certain that the first thing the husband does is to take a drink or lounge about the billiard tables, telling his wife that he has some business to attend to."

"Are newly married people bashful?"

"That depends. The widowers and widows don't mind it, but the young people are a little coy. At Niagara Falls we had most of the new couples late in the season, when regular boarders had left. I have seen as many as a dozen at a time file into the dining room, trying to look as if they had not been married yesterday, but casting furtive glances about to see if they were suspected. The men were especially watchful lest somebody should be ogling the brides. One day I thought we should have a fight in the dining room. A strapping big fellow from the West in a new suit of store clothes sat dowu to the table with his bride, a buxom brown-eyed beauty. She looked so fresh and rosy that she could not but attract attention, and she got it. Every gentleman in the room took more than one look at her, and she knew it. Of course she did not object. But the man began to get angry. He did not like to speak to the bride about it, because she was evidently not displeased. Finally he got up and walked to the nearest gentleman whom he had observed and said:

"'Look here, stranger, I'd like to know what you are staring at my wife for?'"

"'Your wife! allow me to congratulate you, my dear fellow. You have the finest wife in the city,' said the gentleman addressed. 'The fact is, I thought she was your sister. Excuse me if I was rude; but if you don't want people to look at your wife, you really must never take her out in public. No offence meant, sir.'"

"The bridegroom went back to his place, but he took good care at the next meal to put his wife with her face to the wall."

"Which do you think take to the new conditions more gracefully?"

"Women by all odds. The men are always betraying themselves. They want to talk about it; they are full of the subject. Woman are more artful and have more adaptability to new circumstances. But, with all their arts, they can't deceive the hotel clerk, and it is very seldom that we don't turn in a few dollars extra to the house on account of our knowledge."

"Another peculiarity of the newly married couples who go to hotels," continued the clerk, "is that many of them live in the city. They always come equipped for a long journey. They have left the wedding guests with the announced intention of taking a long journey, conspicuously displaying, perhaps, their railroad tickets, and have been driven by way of the depot to a first-class hotel previously selected. I knew one case where a bridal couple, to avoid detection, actually boarded a train and started apparently on a journey, but took at the next station a train back to the city, and stopped at a hotel a few blocks from home. Then the wedding guests were permitted to stay at the feast as long as they pleased, without disturbing anybody."—New York Sun.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, FEBRUARY 3, 1883.

Prof. Asa Gray, Harvard's professor of natural history for 46 years, and a botanist of world-wide fame, died at Cambridge Monday, at the age of 77.

An earthquake shock was felt at Fall River and along the Narragansett Bay early Monday morning, and another was experienced in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont Wednesday forenoon.

Some of our legislators want a constitutional amemdment limiting the length of legislative sessions to four months. This is too thin. What people want is a chance to vote on an amendment making the sessions biennial.

And now it is intimated that Gov. Ames believes there is luck in odd numbers, and that his retiring disposition will not lead him to voluntarily give up the executive chair until he has enjoyed a third term. He was going to be satisfied with one term to begin with, we believe, but he don't seem to "satisfy" worth a cent.

The moon did the handsone thing by us last Saturday evening, the eclipse being done up in the most perfect manner, and those who missed it lost a rare treat. The atmospheric conditions were perfect, affording excellent opportunities for valuable observations at the different observatories.

Among the cheerful possibilities of the present year in Massachusetts is a state tax of $3,000,000, owing to the growing prodigality of recent Legislatures in making appropriations. The last Legislature, for instance, authorized expenditures of nearly $800,000 in excess of the auditor's estimates. There is no sufficient excuse for this sort of thing, and unless the pruning knife is applied with considerable vigor there will be music in the air before long for the party which is responsible for the extravagance.

The United States Senate has passed unanimously a constitutional amendment changing the date of the president's inauguration from March 4 to April 30. If the House follows suit it will then be submitted to the state legislatures for ratification. George Washington was inaugurated as the first president of the United States April 30, 1789, but since that time the date of inauguration has been March 4. It is argued, in behalf of the change, that it will give Congress much more time for legislation at its short session, but it remains to be seen whether the legislatures will consider this enough of an object to make the change.

Mayor Hewitt of New York has envolved a rapid transit scheme for the city which is the best thing, by far, yet suggested in that line. Starting with the present depressed tracks of the New York Central road north of the Grand Central depot, he would continue them beneath the depot and the present Fourth Avenue tunnel and surface road and other streets to the city hall. North of the depot he would continue the present tracks under the river to the annexed district, with a branch from 45th street to Broadway and up the Boulevard. He estimates the cost at $10,000,000, and would have the New York Central build and operate it for 35 years, when the rent would have paid the entire outlay, and the city will then own the road free from debt, and a new bargain can be made for running it. With trains running 40 or 50 miles an hour, this would seem to furnish just the transit which the city so much needs, and the project ought to be taken into serious consideration.

The mill of the Chemical Paper Company at Holyoke was damaged to the extent of $100,000 by fire last Saturday night. Sunday evening the hospital for the ruptured and crippled at New York took fire and the 163 children were saved by the presence of mind of two 10-years-old cripples. Monday five large dry goods stores on Broadway, New York, were burned at a loss of $1,400,000, and Buffalo had a $1,200,000 dry goods fire Tuesday.

A 19-years-old young man at Reading, Pa., is starving to death from the effects of an explosion of molten iron. Some of the fluid entered his mouth, and slipping down his throat and cooling closed the entrance to the stomach so as to prevent his taking food.

Creditors of the wrecked national bank of Stafford Springs, Ct., have been given a 50 per cent dividend, and the bondsmen of Cashier Hicks have been sued to recover the balance of his shortage.

Four of a gang of laborers engaged digging out a snow-bound train on the Connecticut River road above Holyoke last Friday, were struck by a train on the other track and killed.

Springfield aldermen got around to granting 21 druggist's licenses Monday. These are the first since last May, and will expire April 30.

About 100 miles of track of the new California and Oregon Railroad in California have been buried by a recent landslide.

Gen. Philip Sheridan arrived at Boston Wednesday, and was given a reception by the Loyal Leigon at Hotel Vendome.

A fireman at a fire at Norwich, Ct., fell last Sunday and broke his neck by striking his nose on a hydrant.

Judge Joseph Neilson of Brooklyn, N. Y., who presided at the Beecher–Tilton trial in 1875, died last week Thursday.

Gov. Ames has appointed William H. Haile of Springfield a trustee of the Northampton lunatic hospital.

It is estimated that the jubilee gifts to Pope Leo will reach a total valuation of $20,000,000.

Ellen Spellman, 104, the oldest person in New Hampshire, died at Concord last Saturday.

The public debt was reduced about $14,500,000 last month.

East Brookfield is to petition to be made a town.

An unknown man who had been imbibing the "ardent" quite freely lay in front of John Feeney's saloon on Main street Tuesday afternoon with his face terribly lacerated, which indicated that he had been indulging in the "manly art," and had got "knocked out"— of the saloon.

According to an old saw the winter is not yet half gone, for

> "If Candlemas Day be bright and fair,
> Half o' the winter's to come and mair."

Yesterday was Candlemas day, and as bright and nice a day as one could wish to see in winter.

A series of addresses upon "The Bible" will be commenced next Sunday evening by Rev. A. W. Weeks at the Baptist church. Subject of first address, "The Bible—a revelation from God." Service begins at 7 o'clock; address preceded by a praise meeting; all are welcome.

The adjourned meeting of the Western Massachusetts league of ball teams will be held at the district court room to-morrow at 6 o'clock p. m., to hear the report of the committee on by-laws and to transact some minor matters. Teams in the league and those that intend joining should be represented at this meeting by one or more delegates, in order that some action can be taken relative to appointing a committee to make out the schedule of games.

The Congregational church was well filled Tuesday evening at the concert by the Fry Concert Company of Boston, which was one of the best ever heard in Palmer. The programme consisted of twelve numbers, five of which were encored. Each member is a thorough artist, but the vocal solos by Eugenie Fry, and the flute and violin solos by Lulu and Alta Fry were especially well received by the audience, as was also the song by Lulu Fry.

One business firm in town received a circular from a New York party a few days since, offering to furnish them with a stock of "[good] money that will go anywhere and everywhere, in sizes $1, $2, $5, $10, so fine that they cannot be detected by the best experts in the world," at from two to eight cents on the dollar, according to the amount taken. By this means a "quick and independent fortune could be made, and no one be the wiser." It is needless to say the intended sucker did not bite.

Another accident, this time on the New London Northern road, was narrowly averted Monday morning by a man on the track near Belchertown, who discovered a broken rail about a half-mile the other side of that station and signaled the boat train, bound north, by displaying a pair of red mittens. The train was stopped and investigation revealed the fact that a rail was broken in three places, one of the pieces being entirely crushed. The locomotive managed to pull its load over the dangerous place by running very slowly. It is thought that the rail was broken by the early morning train into Palmer.

The largest party of the kind this season enjoyed a sleigh-ride to Belchertown yesterday afternoon, where the visitors were entertained at the Belcher House. The party formed in front of the Converse House on Main street about 4 o'clock, and after taking a drive through the principal streets of the village proceeded on their journey. After arriving a supper was indulged in, succeeding which all repaired to the dance hall where an enjoyable time was had. The Palmer Orchestra accompanied the party on the trip and furnished music for dancing. The party returned at a late hour last night. About 80 couples participated.

The trial of the liquor cases was resumed at the district court Monday morning. The testimony comes in slowly, and therefore but few cases are disposed of in the course of a week. The decisions have been reserved in all of the cases tried, which consequently keeps the dispensers of the ardent on the anxious seat. Aside from the above there has been very little criminal business, the case of Josephine Blair for alleged larceny of coal from James Wilder, which came up Monday, being continued. The liquor seized at E. G. Moulton's place in Wales was claimed by Zeno Farrington and ordered forfeited. Arthur Murphy, a bar-tender employed by Albert Murphy of Monson, was arrested Thursday afternoon by Sheriff Healey on the charge of selling liquor. He furnished bail and was released.

The annual meeting of the Congregational parish was held in the church vestry Monday afternoon, J. N. Lacey being chosen moderator. The report of the parish committee for the past nine months showed that orders for $1954.85 had been drawn, and there was $62.50 due. The treasurer reported collections to have been $1849.54, the balance in the treasury as $79.88, with $189.54 due for pew rents. David Knox was chosen clerk, and J. N. Lacey, G. F. Brown, H. P. Holden the parish committee, who will also act as a music committee; H. B. Knox, treasurer and collector. Appropriations were: Pastor's salary, $1500 and parsonage; music, $750; sexton, $140; fuel and lights, $115; incidentals, $250. A storm porch was ordered built over the front door at the parsonage, and a vote of thanks given F. D. Barton for his three years' service as treasurer and collector, he refusing to serve longer. The bill against the Grand Army post, for use of the church one night, was ordered sent to them receipted, and it was voted not to rent the church to traveling theatrical companies. The pews are to be rented next Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock.

Palmer people are offered a novel entertainment next Monday evening, when the Chinese students will appear at St. Paul's church under the auspices of the Ladies' Social Union. The programme is an interesting one, giving Chinese customs, religion, music and styles of dress, besides which a Chinese supper will be served, and Chinese articles will be on sale. The Bridgeport, Ct., Standard of December 14, 1887, says: "The stage entertainment was intensely interesting throughout, and embraced songs and instrumental selections rendered in true Chinese fashion. It was demonstrated how idols are worshipped, how opium pipes and chop sticks are used, and how the heathern race manipulate the praying machine. These exhibitions were conducted by Chew Sue Chung and Lang Fung in thoughtful English language, and Mrs. Chew Sue Chung gave an address which was illustrative of the life of Chinese girls and the marriage customs of the country. This lecture was one of the most excellent features of the entertainment, and the speaker held the close attention of every person present." The students consist of Chew Sue Chung, his wife and their two little girls, and are most highly spoken of by the press and public wherever they have appeared.

TRAINS ALL RIGHT AGAIN.

The trains on the different railroads centering here which were blockaded last Friday on account of the snow, managed to find their way through by the assistance of large gangs of workmen. Conductor Warner's train on the Ware River road arrived here at 6.17 Friday evening, after having been stalled nearly all day at Gilbertville. Conductor Sedgwick's train did not make any trip Friday, but remained in the yard here. The "modoc" remained at Chester over night, not arriving at Palmer until about 10.18 Saturday morning, over 27 hours late. The 2.04 p. m. express on the Boston & Albany road arrived in Palmer at 9.10 Saturday night. Trains on the New London Northern road made fair time Saturday compared with the day preceeding. Freight and express matter accumulated at the union station rapidly, there being no means of transportation obtainable until the following Monday. Trains began to run on schedule time again Tuesday, and the freights, both local and through, have been unusually busy this week carrying away the accumulated goods.

AN OLD RESIDENT GONE.

Zolva Williams, the aged colored man whose face has been familiar to the oldest residents ever since they can remember, almost, died at the town farm Wednesday evening. No one knows how old Zolva was, for he came to Palmer "when the railroad came," meaning the Boston and Albany road, and was well along in years then. He formerly made his home in the Ware River road's engine house and in the barns of townspeople who took pity on him, working a little when hunger compelled him to, but living mainly on contributions of food from the hands of sympathetic housewives. For several years he has lived in a house of his own building in the woods on Thorndike street, which presents a queer appearance. He was never known to refuse anything which was given him, and the inside of his hut is a curiosity shop indeed, being filled with a little of everything which other people had no use for and wanted to get rid of. Since the beginning of cold weather he has been staying at his old quarters in the engine house, and there he was found this week by Selectman Holden, too weak from old age and a hard cold to keep the fire in the stove going, about the only duty required of him. Much against his will he was carried to the town farm, but pneumonia set in and his system was not strong enough to withstand the attack.

WEST WARREN.

The People's Theater Co. is playing at Warren this week and boarding down here at No. 3 boarding house.

A freight car came down on its trucks just below the bridge Wednesday night, and delayed the 4.50 accommodation over half an hour.

The Warren Cotton Mills are being bothered a great deal by ice in the canals. No. 2 mill can run only a part of its machinery at a time, and No. 3 mill was obliged to shut down Monday owing to the breaking of the main water pipe that supplies all the hydrants and sprinkler pipes in the mill.

LUDLOW.

A telephone is being put in to connect the office of the Ludlow Mfg. Company and the depot of the Athol branch.

Miss Lily Rogers, of Newtow, is to take the first primary school in place of Mary D. Colburn, who has gone to the Central Street school, Springfield.

Those who were brave enough to venture out in the cold last Saturday evening to attend the concert, given in the vestry, by the Congregational church choir of Palmer, felt well paid for doing so, as the music was very fine.

WARREN.

Robert Hastings of Amherst College spent last Sabbath in town.

The teachers in the high school building have Monday to visit schools.

A portrait of L. J. Knowles has been presented to the public library.

The sleigh-ride so long anticipated by the high school is still to take place.

A number of our people will attend the concert Monday evening at Springfield.

Dr. Clarence Cutler gave a very interesting lecture on "Japan" in the church parlor last Friday evening.

Mr. Riley, from Pittsfield, was ordered off a train and in some way got his foot caught so that his leg had to be taken off. Dr. Hastings performed the operation.

A large gathering of the citizens met at the new hotel Thursday evening, and partook of an excellent supper, all the better for having been postponed a week.

During one of the cold days a Chinaman was observed busily cleaning his windows, as he said some one had painted them so he could not see out. When he found "Jack Frost" had done the mischief he stopped his work.

The Home Missionary Circle had a meeting with Miss Elsie Sessions yesterday afternoon, followed by a dime social in the evening.

The farmers' institute held in the chapel of the South church last Wednesday was largely attended. The topic for the morning was "Encouragement and discouragements of the farmer's life," opened by Mr. Smith of Amherst, followed by a lively discussion. Mr. Brooks of West Springfield spoke of the encouragements of farmers, Mr. Whitehead of New Jersey and Mr. C. Buel of Ludlow upon debts. A collation was served in the ladies' parlor. In the evening a grange was organized with 30 charter members, by deputies Douglas of Sherborn and Barton of Dalton. The following officers were elected: Master, F. A. Clark; overseer, C. E. Peck; lecturer, Mrs. Clarence Bolles; assistant steward, George Lyman; chaplin, H. A. Burbank, treasurer, William Day; secretary, Ida Bolles; gate keeper, Albert Pease; pomona, Mary F. Beebe; flora, Gertrude Wetherbee; ceres, Mrs. Wells Phelps; assistant stewardess, May Merrick. The next meeting will be held Friday evening, in the ladies' parlors of the south Church.

BRIMFIELD.

The vital statistics for the past year are: Marriages 8, births 16, deaths 4.

There is a very flourishing Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor in this place, with 28 members, all but five of whom are young people. They are expecting a sleigh-ride party of the Endeavor Society in Palmer at their sociable this evening, and a good time.

The cold wave having passed, sleigh-rides are now in order. The following have been at the Brimfield Hotel: Jan. 24th, 23 couples from East Brimfield; for the dance music was furnished by Webster & Morgan's orchestra, B. W. Charles, prompter. Jan. 31, thirty-six couples from Fiskdale; music by Southbridge orchestra, W. G. Ryan of Springfield, prompter. Feb. 1, seven couples from East Brookfield. Others are expected.

Dea. Nathan M. Goodale, who died suddenly last Sunday morning, had resided in this town over thirty years, where he had established a pleasant home. He was a native of Marlboro, but since he removed to Brimfield has been mostly engaged in canvassing for the sale, by subscription, of works published by the Messrs. Bill of Springfield. In this business he has enjoyed good success, and was widely known. An only surviving daughter died some 15 years ago, and his beloved wife —Lucy Homer—about two years since. A few months ago he married Miss Sarah Holbrook of Monson, who survives him. Within less than three years four members of his father's family have passed away—a brother John in Marlboro, a brother Henry in Clinton, and a sister, Mary Parkhurst, of the same town; and now Nathan; also Nathan's wife, and the wife of the only surviver of the family, a brother Edward in Clinton, Iowa. This mortality in the family is very remarkable.

WALES.

The sleighing is fine, and is being improved for business and pleasure.

A. E. Freeman tried his horse Monday, and made Palmer from Wales in 35 minutes.

The cold snap did not freeze up the fountain, but numerous water pipes were stopped.

Davis Shepardson has sold his home to Mrs. Mary A. Royce, and John Smith has sold a farm to Ansel H. Shaw of Monson.

There was a very large attendance to hear the Ladies' Schubert Quartette of Boston, under the auspices of the Young Men's Social Club Tuesday evening. The concert was excellent throughout, and elicited generous and enthusiastic applause from an audience composed largely of the cultivated and critical musicians of Monson. The solo "Memories of Home," by Miss Anna Louise Whitcombe, was fine, and the audience appreciated her effort. The solos by Miss Roberts and Miss Ollivier, and the banjo playing of Mr. Robinson, came in for a share of the praise.

VITAL STATISTICS FOR 1887.

The books of the town clerk, which owing to the tardiness of the physicians in making their returns have just been made up, show that there were 62 births in Monson last year, against 67 in 1886, there being 31 boys and 31 girls, including a pair of twins.

The marriages were 42 in number—5 more than last year. Of the contracting parties 77 were born in the United States, 4 in Sweden, 2 in Ireland, and 1 in Germany. With 66 it was first marriage, the second with 14, and the third with 4. It was first marriage with both parties in 29 cases; first of the groom and second of the bride, 4; first of bride second of groom, 2; second of both, 3; third of groom and second of bride, 1; third of groom, first of bride, 2; first of groom, second of bride, 3. There were 10 brides and 3 grooms under 21 years of age, and both of one couple were under that age. The youngest bride was 17 and the youngest groom 19, the oldest bride being 64 and the oldest groom 73. The oldest couple were 62 and 64. In four cases the bride was the eldest. These clergymen officiated: Rev. James Tufts, 5; G. V. Maxham, J. H. Emerson, J. F. Lee, 3 each; E. H. Byington, Alex. Dight,

W. C. McCaughen, 2 each; out of town clergymen, 22.

The deaths numbered 62, or four more than last year, 23 being males and 39 females. Of these, five were under 1 year of age; between 1 and 5, five; 10 and 20, three; 20 and 30, eleven; 30 and 40, one; 40 and 50, four; 50 and 60, four; 60 and 70, ten; 70 and 80, thirteen; 80 and 90, five; over 90, one. Nine died of consumption, 7 of apoplexy, 5 each of pneumonia and old age, 4 of heart disease, 2 each of typhoid pneumonia, cancer, paralysis, cholera infantum, croup, dysentery, disease of the liver; one each of tight corset, tuberculosis, concussion of the brain, congestion of the brain, convulsions, dentition, hydrocephalus, diphthceretic croup, pulmonary, heat and alcohol, chronic diarrhœa, chronic parensis, paralysis of the heart, tubercular, meningitis, kidney abscess, phthisic, hepatitis and membranous croup.

WARE AND VICINITY.

The electric lights for the streets that were promised by Feb. 1st will not be in operation for about a month.

Rev. B. V. Stevenson has resigned the pastorate of the Unitarian church at Hardwick, but will continue his residence in Ware.

Rev. T. G. A. Cote, who has been in Ware for some weeks past, has gone to Spencer to assist in establishing a French Protestant mission there.

The ladies of the social science club have completed arrangement for a series of lectures, to be delivered during the season for their mutual benefit and enjoyment. Members of the club are to admitted free.

Thomas N. Guertin re-opened the hotel at Gilbertville Feb. 1st, to be known as the Windsor House. It has been refitted with steam heat, hot and cold water, electric bells, etc.,and sleigh-rides and parties will be accommodated at short notice.

Robert Kershaw, who died at the age of 68 last Thursday, was well known in town, having lived here for the past 25 years, being employed for years in the finishing department of the Geo. H. Gilbert Manufacturing Company's mill. He was born in England.

The Amateur Orchestra, Mrs. H. E. Jordan, director, have set as the date of their proposed concert, Wednesday evening, Feb. 22, Washington's birth-day. Besides selections by the orchestra it is expected that there will be vocalists to assist, and a guitar quartette. The concert is to be in the Congregational chapel.

William W. Barnes had the delicate surgical operation of the removal of his right eye performed by Dr. W. W. Miner on Tuesday. The eye was injured last October by a piece of iron flying into it, and being inflamed it was feared he would lose the sight of the other eye. The patient at the time of writing was quite comfortable.

Miss Annie W. Robinson, daughter of the late Charles S. Robinson of Ware, was married to Frederick A. Perry Tuesday. Mr. Perry is a large orange grower in Florida. The newly married couple left immediately for their new home in Florida. Rev. J. Peterson, formerly pastor of the Methodist church in Ware, performed the ceremony.

Some of the oldest residents of our town say that they do not remember the time when we were so long without receiving any mail, as last Friday, when it was about twenty-six hours. The snow that fell Wednesday drifted so badly that it was about six in the evening before the first train down passed through Ware. The first mail came in about eight in the evening. The Central ran their trains to Boston, but were unable to open the road west of Ware.

The work of removing the looms from the Otis Company's old mills to the new one is nearly completed, there being now running 700 looms in one room 118 by 410 feet, a noisey place to be sure, but as the overseer remarked "there is no more noise to the square foot here than in the old weave room." The number of looms running in this room is soon to be 850, and ultimately increased to 1000. This immense room is lighted by 44 arc electric lights of the Thompson-Houston patent. There are also 33 of these lights in the room below the weave room, making 75 in the building.

The French Protestant society is in a prosperous condition. The attendance at the meetings has largely increased, work has commenced on their new church, and arrangements have been made so that those who have subscribed to the building fund may pay their subscriptions to W. H. Cutler at the Ware National Bank, if more convenient. The officers of the church elected this week at their first annual meeting, over which Rev. Thomas A. Dorion presided, are: Dr. A. A. Auger, clerk; John Bosquet, treasurer; Henry Cloutier, F. X. Lacombe, Eugene Beaulieu, John T. Raymond, Ulysse Auclaire, standing committee; Dr. A. A. Auger, John Bousquet, F. X. Lacombe, John T. Raymond, deacons.

The Wednesday Evening Club was organized last week "For the purpose of obtaining larger ideas of the literary, political, scientific and social questions of the day," and held its first active meeting on Wednesday of this week, when Rev. C. W. Duffield presented a paper, "The Tower of Babel, or the scattering of nations, and the United States, or their ingathering," which was a fine production and enthusiastically received. The officers of the club are: C. C. Hitchcock, president; Dr. O. W. Barrett, vice president; W. H. Cutler, treasurer; E. H. Gilbert, secretary; F. D. Gilmore, Rev. E. Hitchcock, Rev. C. W. Duffield, executive committe; F. M. Sibley, Dr. W. W. Miner, Dr. E. H. Guild, committee on membership. The membership is limited to twenty-five, each member subscribing himself to present at least one paper during the season. The members thus far are: Rev. C. W. Duffield, Rev. E. Hitchcock, Rev. A. T. Perry, C. C. Hitchcock, J. H. G. Gilbert, Edward H. Gilbert, E. H. Baker, Geo. E. Tucker, A. F. Richardson, Dr. O. W. Barrett, Dr. W. W. Miner, Dr. E. H. Guild, William H. Cutler, W. H. Hall, C. E. Stevens, F. G. Fisher, F. M. Sibley, H. A. Smith, R. H. Loomis, F. D. Gilmore, S. W. Hallett.

LEGISLATIVE DOINGS.

From our Special Correspondent

BOSTON, FEB. 1, 1888.

On Thursday the House had a further diversion over Mr. Quincy's bill to annul all liquor licenses after April 30. He proposed to take it from the table, where the Republicans put it Wednesday afternoon, and to refer it to the liquor committee. But the Republicans opposed it, especially Messrs. Gile of Worcester and Wardwell of Haverhill, saying that the House ought not to trifle with the matter like school boys, but ought to keep it on the table and let it die there. So, by a vote of 65 to 95 they refused to take it up. What did Mr. Quincy do then but present an order that the liquor committee consider the expediency of a law to annul all liquor licenses April 30. Mr. Dresser of Medford, a Republican leader, availed himself of his privilege and had the matter laid over to Friday.

Among the House orders on Thursday was one by Mr. Lyman of Belchertown, proposing that no person interested in the liquor business shall be competent to sit on a jury, and one by Mr. Wiley of Hardwick in regard to enacting that the minimum license fee shall not be less than the present maximum.

The general superintendent of prison labor, W. F. Spalding, presented his first annual report on Thursday, showing that serious objections are found in the practical working of the new prison labor bill.

The little discussion over Mr. Quincy's prohibitory bill was ended for a time on Friday. On motion of Mr. Gile of Worcester, it was taken from the table and the House refused to admit it. The Republicans took the ground that Mr. Quincy was trifling with them, and they would not be trifled with. He wanted to put them in a bad light, if possible, and they were not disposed to accommodate him. After they had refused admission to his bill however, they adopted his order for the liquor committee to consider the expediency of just such a law as they had just refused to admit.

Among Friday's orders was one proposing to take away liquor licenses from druggists altogether, and another proposing to pay from the liquor fees in the public treasury some of the damage which is done to innocent people by means of liquor drinking. It looks as if hard times were ahead for the liquor sellers, if the lawmakers can make them hard.

The Beverly Farms people finished putting their evidence in Friday. The same day the annual report of thegas inspector was presented.

This has been the last week for the introduction of new business, according to the rule which requires all matters to be presented by the first Wednesday of February, under penalty of being referred to the next Legislature.

On Monday, after adjournment, the committee on constitutional amendments met, gave a short hearing, and then (Representatives Flynn of Boston and Pinkerton of Worcester dissenting,) voted to report an amendment to the constitution to limit the length of the session to four months, and to fix the salary of the members at $750. They also voted, six to five, to report an amendment to abolish the poll tax as a suffrage qualification. The five dissenters are both the senators on the committee (Hartwell of Worcester and Ladd of Worcester) and Representatives Gile of Worcester, Blume of Boston and Pinkerton of Worcester. It will be noticed that Worcester city and county has a pretty strong representation among the dissenters.

A move for a more permanent tenure of the police force is being made by several of the cities, among them being Holyoke, Lynn, New Bedford, Malden, Worcester, Newton and Somerville.

The liquor committee reported Tuesday adversely on the order of Mr. Quincy of Quincy as to annulling all liquor licenses in the state April 30. This was the order which made such a disturbance last week, and the committee were unanimously against it. They also reported unanimously against the petition of the Massachusetts Temperance Alliance and of the Massachusetts Woman's Christian Temperance Union for a repeal of the local option law and for the enactment of a straight prohibitory law. No hearings were given on this matter, but the committee acted under the resolve which was adopted by both branches, that they would report as soon as possible on matters which had been heard by previous Legislatures.

A bill on leave was presented in the House Tuesday by Mr. Blume of Boston, to establish the office of commissioner of corporations, who shall be required to visit each manufacturing corporation once a year and as much oftener as he chooses, who shall have full power to examine all their records and books and officers under oath (and any one who refuses to answer may be punished by $1000 fine or one year's imprisonment) and who may take steps to put any corporation into insolvency, if he thinks it is insolvent or that it is hazardous for it to go on.

Wednesday witnessed, presumably, the end of the introduction of new business, and a large amount was presented in each branch, far too large for any reader to digest at one reading. Many of the matters were of much importance, and they will tend to prolong the session.

A bill from the railroad committee, Senator Roads of Essex dissenting, allows the Old Colony road to lease the Providence road. Wednesday forenoon, the very day the bill was reported, the New England Shoe and Leather Association, by its counsel, George O. Shattuck, opposed strenuously the passage of the bill, and asked for more time.

Wednesday afternoon the House took up the adverse report of the liquor committee on a prohibitory law and on Mr. Quincy's order as to annulling the licenses in force April 30. Mr. Manning of Worcester, for the committee, and as a prohibitionist, said the passage of a prohibitory law would injure the passage of a prohibitory amendment and so they were opposed to the law. Mr. Quincy said that those members forfeited respect who voted for the amendment, but not for the law. The purpose of Mr. Quincy's order was finally defeated, and then Mr. Brigham urged the House to recommit the petition for a prohibitory law, with instructions to report in favor. But by 84 to 103 the House refused to recommit. The vote on each side was much mixed politically.

We are astonished at parties who introduce new remedies for coughs when they should know the people will have Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

"Kings are like stars, they rise and set." They have headache, cuts and hurts like meaner men, and are just as sure to call for Salvation Oil.

Some idea of the wide spread interest manifested in the Boston Symphony Concert at Springfield for February 6, may be gained when we say that arrangements have been made, or are now in progress, for extra trains or special accommodations on the Fitchburg Railroad, from Athol to Greenfield; on the Connecticut River Railroad, from Greenfield, including Easthampton and Chicopee Falls branches; on the Massachusetts Central, from Amherst to Northampton; on the New London Northern Railroad, from Stafford Springs; on the Ware River, from Ware; and on the Boston & Albany, east to East Brookfield, and west to Chester. The necessity for such extensive arrangements is the strongest endorsement for this orchestra. Indeed, one of our most pronounced local musical critics unhesitatingly says the organization is not surpassed in the world. With such extensive provisions for comfort, convenience and enjoyment, it is clear that no one of any musical tastes can afford to miss this opportunity.

A MUCH MARRIED WOMAN.

Mrs. Fowler, of this city, was married last January to her sixth husband, and strange as it may seem five of them died exactly two years from their wedding day. Her present husband has been sick for the past six months with chronic jaundice, and was given up by four of our best physicians; as a last resort he began using Sulphur Bitters, and yesterday told our reporter that they had saved his life, smilingly saying that he guessed Mrs. Fowler would be unable to take a seventh better half for some time to come.—Exchange. 2w45

It is a fact worth knowing that, as a household remedy, for children and adults, Ayer's Pills are invaluable.

The simplest, safest and surest means to relieve the baby of colic and induce slumber is Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup. Price only 25 cents.

Many diseases date their origin from functional disturbance of the stomach and liver. Laxador always correct these abnormal conditions.

I suffered from a very severe cold in my head for months and used everything recommended, but could get no relief. Was advised to use Ely's Cream Balm. It has worked like magic in its cure. I am free from my cold after using the Balm one week, and I believe it is the best remedy known. Feeling grateful for what it has done I send this testimonial.—Samuel J. Harris, Wholesale Grocer, 119 Front street, New York.

A FORTUNATE AND GRATEFUL WOMAN.

Mrs. J. H. Giles of Everett, Pa., says: I suffered for many years from Kidney and Gravel trouble. Besides, I had other complaints common to my sex. I began using Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y. A few words tell the result. I am a happy and perfectly well woman once more. Thanks to Dr. David Kennedy and his Favorite Remedy. ### Advice to Mothers.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For Sale by Legro & Lynde. 1y29

WHAT AM I TO DO?

The symptoms of Biliousness are unhappily too well known. They differ in different individuals to some extent. A bilious man is seldom a breakfast eater. To frequently, alas, he has an excellent appetite for liquids but none for solids of a morning. His tongue will hardly bear inspection at any time; if it is not white and furred, it is rough, at all events.

The digestive system is wholly out of order and Diarrhoe or Constipation may be a symptom or they may alternate. There are often Hemorrhoids or even loss of blood. There may be giddiness and often headache and acidity or flatulence and tenderness in the pit of the stomach. To correct all this if not effect a cure try Green's August Flower, it costs but a trifle and thousands attest its efficacy. 1

Facts You Can Bet On.

That the oldest and largest tobacco factory in the world is in Jersey City, N. J.

That this factory makes the popular and world-famed Climax Plug, the acknowledged standard for first-class chewing tobacco.

That this factory was established as long ago as 1760.

The last year (1886) it made and sold the enormous quantity of 27,982,280 pounds, or fourteen thousand tons of tobacco.

That this was more than one-seventh of all the tobacco made in the United States, notwithstanding that there were 966 factories at work.

That in the last 21 years this factory has helped support the United States Government to the extent of over forty-four million seven hundred thousand dollars ($44,790,000) paid into the U. S. Treasury in Internal Revenue taxes.

That the pay-roll of this factory is about $1,000,000 per year, or $20,000 per week.

That this factory employs about 3500 operatives.

That this factory makes such a wonderfully good chew in Climax Plug that many other factories have tried to imitate it in vain, and in despair now try to attract custom by offering larger pieces of inferior goods for the same price.

That this factory nevertheless continues to increase it business every year.

That this factory belongs to and is operated by

Reveille.

The day star shines upon the hill,
The valleys in the shadow sleep;
In wood and thicket, dark and still,
My comrades lie in slumber deep,
Far in the east a phantom gray
Steals slowly up the night's black pall,
And, herald of the coming day,
The distant bugle's soft notes call—

"I can't get 'em up,
I can't get 'em up,
I can't get 'em up in the morning;
I can't get 'em up,
I can't get 'em up,
I can't get them up at all!"

A thought of motion at the sound—
As though the forest caught its breath,
And belted sleepers on the ground
Move restlessly, like life in death,
And slumbering echoes, here and there,
Awaken as the challenge floats
And louder on the morning air
Ring out the cheery bugle notes—

"I can't get 'em up in the morning!
I can't get 'em up in the morning!
I can't get 'em up in the morning—
I can't get them up at all!"

And the thrilling strains prolong,
Flames into rose and gold the day,
And springing up with shout and song,
Each soldier welcomes march or fray.
Through wooded vale, o'er wind-swept hill,
Where camp fires gleam and shadows fall,
Louder and clearer, cheerily still,
Rings out the merry bugle call—

"I can't get 'em up,
I can't get 'em up,
I can't get 'em up in the morning!
I can't get 'em up,
I can't get 'em up,—
I can't get 'em up at all!"

Make No Mistake.

If you have made up you mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion and preparation curative power superior to any other article of the kind before the people. Be sure to get Hood's.

"In one store the clerk tried to induce me to buy their own instead of Hood's Sarsaparilla. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was, I had taken it, was perfectly satisfied with it, and did not want any other."—Mrs. Ella A. Goff, 61 Terrace street, Boston, Mass.

"My wife suffered from sick headache and neuralgia. After taking Hood's Sarsaparilla she was much relieved."—W. R. Babb, Wilmington, Ohio.

How a Dying Child was Saved.

CICERO, HAMILTON CO., IND., Sept., 19, 1887.

The following is a true account of what your S. S. S. has done for our little daughter, Hazel, now four years old. When twelve months old a lump appeared on her heel, which slowly grew larger. The family physician thought it was caused by a piece of broken glass or a needle, but failed to bring anything to light. The child became feebler all the time, seeming to lose the use of her leg, and finally quit walking altogether. The middle finger and thumb became enlarged, the flesh becoming hard. The hip joints became involved, so that when seventeen months old she could not stand, having lost the use of her hand and arm. Partial curvature of the spine also followed. The nervous system was wrecked, muscles contracted, and there was a general wasting of flesh and muscle. At eighteen months she was placed under the treatment of a prominent physician of Boston, Mass., but at the end of ten months she had declined to such a degree that she was in a dying condition. This was in April, 1884. We took the child away not knowing what to do. In this dilemma we were over-persuaded by friends to try "one bottle" of SWIFT'S SPECIFIC, which we did, and before it had all been taken we saw a change for the better in her symptoms. We kept it up, and have done so to this day, and will keep it up, if the Lord wills, for many days to come, for it has brought our dying Hazel to life, to vigor, to strength and health again. The ashen hue of her cheeks turned to a rosy tint. She is able to walk anywhere, her languor and melancholy have passed away, and she is now a blithe, cheerful, happy, romping child. Should you wish to increase your testimonials of proof of the virtue of S. S. S., our names and what we have said is but a portion of what we owe to you, should you wish to use them.

Kindly Yours,

A Dream.

Written for the JOURNAL.

I stood with a crowd by a river
And heard the billows roar,
And I knew 'twas the mighty river
That washed the eternal shore.

But the banks were shrouded in darkness,
And I tried in vain to see
If the boat that was passing over
Carried anyone dear to me.

It was borne along by snow-white wings,
And guided by angel hands,
And it paused midstream in a ray of light,
Then crossed to a sunny land.

And there in a rosy sunset cloud,
Far up on an Alpine height,
A beautiful marble palace appeared
With domes and pillars of white.

And a distance voice like an echo
Was wafted across the strand,
Saying, "this is the house eternal,
The house not made with hands."

Then I turned to those on the shore of time,
But sadness was on each brow,
For the houses that once were stately and grand
Were crumbling to ruins now.

And we sought one for rest and refuge,
But as we nearer drew
It toppled over the river's bank
And disappeared from view.

And again we heard the echo
Of the voice from the sunny land,
Saying, "That was the home of a mortal,
And was built upon the sand."

Then I woke; but ere the sunset
A message had come from afar
That one had crossed to her father's house
Where many mansions are.

DOROTHY'S LOVER.

"You have been to the Japanese village!" Therese ejaculated, "and you bought that thing."

"Yes," said Dorothy, unfurling a gaudy yellow fan, on which pink and blue chrysanthemums bloomed with startling exuberance. "Isn't it pretty?"

"Pretty!" Therese echoed in disgust, "it's vile!"

"Oh, well," Dot replied, "the thing is overdone, of course; but you can't help seeing, Tress, that this is a fine color. Indeed, I think it is really wonderful how they get such fine colors on these cheap things. It is all laid on with a brush, you know. Tom, what are you doing?"

"Marking it for you," her brother replied, wielding his pen deliberately; "you would not want to lose such a treasure. There you are, 'Dorothy Calhoun, Lyndham-on-the-Aix.' Lo `s very well, doesn't it?"

"I wish you hadn't done that, Tom," Dorothy said in vexation.

"Why, you are not ashamed of it, I hope, are you?" cried Tom.

"I hate to have my name plastered all over things that are of no value. It looks so mean and snobbish."

"Never mind," said Therese, soothingly, "a hundred years from now that name will greatly enhance the value of the fan. It may bring a price at a sale."

"Give me my fan," she cried, making off with it. "You are not going to make fun of it."

"Be sure and take it with you down to the beach," Therese called after her. "It may serve a hundred ends out sailing, you know, or on the beach."

"Or to use as a warning signal in case of illness," interposed Tom.

"I certainly shall take it," Dorothy retorted. "It will match my batiste gown beautifully."

Perhaps it was perversity, but Dot carried that yellow fan with her everwhere after that.

When Tom stowed her away in the train a week later, he left her fluttering it over the leaves of a new novel.

The train was crowded, as the trains to the seaside usually are. Among the passengers was a tall, slender young man, with a perfectly correct outfit and the air of one who takes the world pleasantly.

"Pretty girl, that," he mused; "but, good gracious, what an extraordinary fan!"

Dot had it spread to its fullest extent, and was bending over now and them to sniff the white lilacs she wore on her breast.

"I wonder where she is going?" the young man mused. "It's such hard work drumming up a girl down at the Point. If a fellow only knew somebody—Ah, beg pardon, may I occupy this seat?"

Some one had got out at the way station, and the seat alongside of Dorothy, being vacant, the young man plumped into it.

Dorothy gave him a cool nod of acquiescence and went on reading.

The yellow fan was unfurled just under the young man's eyes.

He could not help staring at it, and there, quite plain to view, he read:—

"Dorothy Grant Calhoun, Lyndham-on-the-Aix."

"What a bore this conventionality is!" he mused fretfully. "I might have a jolly time of it on the way down if I only dared speak to her."

Dorothy laid down her fan and took out a hair pin to use as a paper knife.

The fan fell to the floor; then came a flourish and—

"Allow me—ahem! Ah, I beg pardon, but I could not help seeing your name on your fan, and I could not help noticing the fan, it is so handsome. I believe I am addressing Miss Calhoun. Have I not the honor of being a class-mate of a relative of yours at Amherst college?"

"My brother Tom!" said Dot in surprise, glancing down at her fan. "How did you know it? Did you recognize his writing?"

"I fancy so," the young fellow fibbed quite boldly. "Excuse me, my name is Russell. I live at Lynn. Tom will tell you all about me. I had no idea when I sat down here that you were his sister, It is so pleasant to meet some one in the train; it is such a long, stupid ride down to the Point. You are going there, I suppose?"

"Yes," Dot assented quite graciously. "My aunt, Mrs. Seymour, has a cottage there."

"How very pleasant!" Russell murmured; and the conversation then proceeded quite easily.

There was nothing more natural than that Dot should recognize him after that on the beach, and that when her aunt asked who he was she should say discreetly:—

"A classmate of Tom's, Mr. Russell."

"Why don't you have him up to call?" Mrs. Seymour inquired, being anxious her niece should have a good time.

So Dot invited him.

At that the Point ceased to be the dull place they had both thought it. A month of boating and strolling together had worked such a spell of pleasure over them that Mrs. Seymour, in a fit of growing anxiety, sat down and wrote to Tom:—

"Dorothy has met one of your old classmates here, a Mr. Russell, who pays her such marked devotion that it has become necessary for me to find out what his prospects are. I have already learned something of his family; they are the Russels of Lynn; but some of that family are rich and some are poor, and I cannot find out where this young fellow comes in. What do you know about him?"

Tom did not answer this letter by post. He came down to the Point in person, very much wrought up.

"Dorothy," he said sternly, "where is this fellow, Russell? There is no such man in our class. He is some adventurer who has taken you in. I am astonished that you encouraged him. Why didn't you ask me about him?"

"He said he knew you," Dorothy faltered.

"He lied," was Tom's brusque rejoinder, "and I'll tell him so."

"I—I did write you about him!" said Dorothy bursting into tears. "That is, I wrote Theresa; but you were off at Portsmouth, and I supposed she] would never say anything about it. Don't—don't glare at me so, Tom!"

"Well, you have made a fool of yourself!" he said savagely. "Dear knows who the fellow is. Like as not he's a thief."

"Oh, he's a gentleman!" Dorothy interposed tearfully. "Indeed he is, Tom!"

"How do you know? It may be all a sham. You can't expect much from a man who starts out with lying. You don't even know whether his name really is Russell"

"Oh, yes I do," said Dorothy. "Aunt Mary knows people who know him."

"Humph!" retorted Tom. "Where did you meet with him, anyhow?"

"In—the—train," Dorothy cried, with a fresh burst of tears.

"Well," exclaimed her brother savagely, "Dorothy Calhoun, I did think you knew enough to travel alone."

"So I do!" she cried.

And then, without explaining herself, she suddenly left him, dashing around the piazza and down the beach beyond Tom's line of vision, where a tall, good-looking fellow in a yachting suit was coming toward the house.

"Why, Dorothy," he exclaimed, holding out his hand with a bright, fond smile, "I was just coming up after you."

"Don't speak to me!" she cried passionately. "You told me a big story, George Russell. You don't know my brother Tom at all—and—you have been deceiving me from the first. Oh, how could you do such a thing? I'll never, never forgive you.

Russell's fine face grew suddenly grave.

"Darling," he said quietly, "come and sit down here."

"Don't call me that!" Dot retorted, stamping her foot. "Oh, to think that I—I— Don't you ever dare to say that again!"

"Dorothy," he went on, gravely, "it is quite true that I do not know your brother. I graduated from Amherst college last year and he is only a freshman; consequently he never heard of me."

But you said he was your classmate. You—you lied about it."

"No; excuse me; I did not. If you will remember my exact words, I did not say that; I merely implied it. Perhaps that is just as bad, for I acknowledge that I did it with the intent to deceive you. But I did not think then that our acquaintance would ripen as it has done. I was off for a frolic; I saw you and I took a desperate fancy to you from the first. It was the name on your fan that first put the idea in my head. I remembered that there was a Calhoun among the freshmen this year, and I jumped at the conclusion that he might be a relative. It turned out to be your brother. Don't be angry, Dorothy; it was all done for a lark, and I haven't deceived you in any other particular. Can't you forgive me for it?"

"You are not even sorry for it!" she cried. "Oh, it is too dreadful!"

"How can I be sorry when it led to my knowing you?" he said, diplomatically.

"You ought to be sorry," she said sternly; "I never want to see you again. Oh, George, there comes Tom!"

The next instant she had decamped, and Russell rose to meet her brother, who came up in a towering rage.

"Is your name Russell?" Tom said angrily.

"It is, sir;" and he made a sign which worked like a charm on Tom's manner, for it showed they were fellows of the same society. "I believe I owe you an explanation."

He made it then and there like a man.

"I acknowledge that I did wrong," Russell continued, "but you would do the same if you were off for a lark."

"I ought to thrash you!" Tom said savagely.

"But you can't do it, you know," Russell replied, with a glance at Tom's inferior height and muscle.

"Confound your impudence!" Tom muttered. "The best thing you can do is to get out of this; and you'd better go quickly."

"Come now, Mr. Calhoun," said Russell, "I am sorry, upon my honor. I—I love your sister, and intend to ask your father"——

"How dare you think of such a thing?" Tom shouted.

"Because," Russell replied with sudden dignity, "my family is quite equal to yours, Mr. Calhoun. Moreover, I am not a beggar. You probably know my uncle, George Chester, of the Vulcan iron works. I am the junior partner there."

Tom gasped.

The Vulcan iron works were owned by the richest and most honorable man in this section of the country.

"That may be," he said lamely; "but why on earth did you go about the thing in such an underhand way?"

Russell smiled.

"Come and see me," he said, holding out his hand.

And Tom took it, though not without a sheepish look.

He tried to say something, but Russell wrung his hand warmly and hurried off. It took Tom some time to get back to the house, for, to use his own phrase, he was "all broken up."

When he did get there his aunt rushed out and seized him with a breathless exclamation.

"Tom!" she cried, "the Rev. Mr. Vanderpool has come, and he knows Mr. Russell well. He says he is worth $3,000,000, and, Tom, see here!"

She drew him to one corner of the piazza, where they could peep through the vines into a little summer house near by.

Dorothy was there mopping away some perverse tears on George Russell's shoulder.

"Well," Tom said resignedly, "I wash my hands of them."

OLD RECORDS.

Sketches from early records, relating to the proprietors of specific grants in the Elbow tract.

The historical committee have been furnished with copies of plots and grants, by S. S. Taft, Esq., that were made by the General Court, and are on record among the archives at the state house in Boston. The first of these grants was made in 1661, to Rev. Peter Hobart of Hingham. He was the first settled minister of that town, and labored as their pastor forty-three years, and was one of the colony of 206 that emigrated from Hingham, Norfolk County, England, and during the years 1734–39, they settled the town and gave it the name of the principal place they left. It was customary, during the first forty years in settling the province, to name the towns and counties from the places which the people held sacred, and in which they delighted to perpetuate the memory of times past.

After twenty-five years of labor in the new colony Mr. Hobart had a desire to visit friends that had drifted west and settled the town of Springfield. The old Indian trail that connected the tribes that lived in the east part of the province with those of the Connecticut River Indians, had become the Bay path at this time, which was afterwards laid out as the country road, with a branch in Brookfield bearing to the northwest, crossing the Ware river above the high falls, and Swift river one and a half miles above the present Ware line, and continuing its course through the equivalent lands to Hadley.

Perhaps to some at the present time it is a query why Rev. Hobart petitioned the general court to grant him three hundred acres of land on Pottoquattuck Mt. (We find the name on the Mass. archives Pottoquattuck, Podoquaduck and Pattaquattuck.) But it was not uncommon for grants of land to be made to the ministers of the Gospel in necessitous circumstances; and in later years, to grant money to meet their claims against the towns when their salary could not be raised otherwise. Again, the location was not so obscure and forbidding as appears to the traveler at the present time. Mr. Hobart's direct route to this grant would be the Indian trail, a branch of the Hadley track, running near the house of the late Charles Shaw and Seva Brown. This trail has become of notoriety in the present century as the route that Capt. Kidd traveled when he secreted his letter that reveals the place where he buried his vast amount of treasure.

This letter was written on parchment, and sealed in a glass vessel, its hiding place was in a ledge of rocks, and found by the Shaws, who were living in that section of the town, while on a hunting excursion. The topography of the country, and the face of nature was such at the time of the visit by Mr. Hobart, that there could be no more flattering scenery lying between his Hingham home and the Connecticut valley. On the north was a view of a thousand acres or more of land, free from bush or anything to obstruct the sight, till his imagination became enraptured, and led him to believe this place a paradise for him, while remaining in the province bay. Added to this scenery was the Ware river on the west, winding its way through the valleys of meadow; which gave abundance of grass, and, in after years, furnished hay for the stock of our first settlers. The ministry lot including some of this meadow; the grass was sold one year for £60, Old Tenor, its value being established in 1742 as equal to one fourth the value of New Tenor certificates, those being the same value as silver currency. Near to, and to be observed by the same view, were twin lakes, known as the great and little Pottoquattuck ponds; those, with the Ware river, afforded an abundance of fish for the red man, while the timber lands and the large tract that was burned over yearly by the Indians, were their hunting grounds. The great amount of work done by the red man was the white man's gain, so far as preparing the land for husbandry; but Brookfield paid dear for these improvements, in the sacrifice of life, before she could enjoy them in her own right.

Rev. Hobart never settled on this grant. Seventy-two years later it was confirmed to his heirs, and laid out on the north and east side of the mountain. He died Jan. 20, 1678–9.

The Hollingsworth grant of five hundred acres was in the north division, including Ware village west of Ware river, the southwest corner extending to the equivalent land. Richard Hollingsworth of Salem was one of the first shipbuilders, and meeting with a reverse in fortune he petitioned the general court for a grant of five hundred acres, which was answered in 1673. These two grants were made previous to Lamb & Co's. Indian purchase in 1686. Mr. Hollingsworth sold this claim and after a change of ownership. Capt. Jabez Olmstead from Brookfield purchased the farm, and Jeremiah, his son, had a grant of one hundred acres by the general court, situated both sides of the river and northeast of this grant. A history of the Hollingsworth grant may be found in Dea. William Hyde's historical address, delivered at the dedication of the town hall of Ware, March 31st, 1887.

The Marsh and Clements specific grant of fourteen hundred and forty-three acres was made October 29, 1733, located in the north part of the Elbow tract, and north of the Elbow District, as surveyed by Col. Timothy Dwight of Northampton in 1723. Although the proprietors of the district petitioned only for the survey of 1723, the committee so far amended the petition as to include all the lands that were not taken up and occupied; which so pleased the proprietors that they gave them, each, one hundred acres in this new addition. These lands were afterwards owned by James and William Brackenridge.

There was a specific grant of five hundred acres to Col. Samuel Patridge of Brookfield, Massachusetts archives, vol. 2, p. 193. The land there described, in the survey, is situated on the west side of Pottoquattuck Mt. It was petitioned for at the session of General Court Nov. 3, 1725. The land was confirmed to Samuel Patridge, Jan. 4, 1731. J. Willard, Secretary; consented to, J. Belcher. Mr. Patridge became a citizen of Brookfield in 1786, at the commencement of its new settlement the second time. He served as one of the committee on regulations of the District till it was organized into a township. He served the colony in Queen Anne's war, and also in the French and Indian wars, as colonel. He several times assumed the responsibility of relieving the wants, financially, of the suffering soldiers, which the General Court approved, and afterwards refunded the money. The records are silent, but with little doubt it was for meritorious service that this grant was made.

Robert Smith, Senior, and William McMitchell, his son-in-law, bought their farms from the south part of this lot. James Smith, the eldest son, bought east of them on Rev. Hobart's land. A large tract of heavy timbered land, belonging to the Patridge grant, was non-resident land, and owned by a lawyer by the name of Wells, of Boston, till the present century. Dea. Wilson Foster and others engaged in cutting the timber, and at first making rails and floating them down the Ware and Chicopee rivers.

The land known on the District records as Dwight's farm was a grant of three hundred acres made by the General Court to Capt. John Sheldon, for Province work in making several journeys to Canada in 1707. The plot describes the beginning at a pine tree southeast from Pottoquattuck pond. Nov. 24th, 1725, the General Court resolved that the land protracted and described in in said plot be confirmed to Henry Dwight, Esq., the assignee of Capt. John Sheldon, Vol. 2, page 123, ancient records. The grant was laid out, the side and end lines parallel to each other, but the corner angles were such that the lot was of diamond form. Mr. Dwight was a Springfield man. His son, of Pittsfield, sold his share of the lot to Dea. Gordon Sedgwick about 1790. The specific grants and the quantity of land in the Elbow tract and confirmed by the General Court amounted to 3043 acres. Aside from this is found on the ancient records a grant to Col. Dwight of three hundred acres in 1725, situated on Ware river, joining Esq. Reed's 10,000 acre farm; this lot was never occupied by him nor his heirs, as the General Court granted 100 acres to John Beman and one hundred of the same was included in the ministry lot. About 1700 we have a description of a long narrow tract of land, wide at the north part and narrow at the termination of the southwest, where some of this land was annexed to Wilbraham.

I find, neither by records nor tradition, the origin of its name, Elbow tract, but reasonably suppose that it was the peculiar shape that it was left in after Brookfield's settlement in 1693 and Brimfield in 1701; with Hadley and the equivalent lands on the West. Rev. Thomas Wilson, in his historical address in 1852, conceives the idea that it was the peculiar angle in the rivers, which may be correct. But the name given as the Elbow District, which includes the largest part of this tract, commences with Col. Dwight's survey in 1723; and from that time, and during the organization of the town, it was familiarly known by that name. But as families came to settle they preferred to consider its name as merely a described location, and were disposed to introduce different names as, New Marlborough, Kingsfield and Kingstown. But the name of Palmer was not adopted till 1752, when the District or Precinct was changed to a town, with all the privileges of other towns, except sending a representative to the General Court. No efforts were made during the past period to make any settlement; Brookfield made the effort in 1673, and the people were driven from their homes, and then formed a new settlement about 1690.

A colony from Springfield engaged in the settlement of Brimfield. They met with many reverses, and it required thirty years, during a period from 1701 to 1731, to complete an organization. The severe struggle of the adjoining towns would be a lesson to prevent others from making a similar effort, without greater inducements than were supposed to exist in the Elbow District. This land was reported by the General Court committee as poor and mean, and the General Court had made specific grants to private individuals of nearly all of the good land. This left too small a quantity to induce any company to undertake a settlement; it also required some seventy families to organize a township with farms of one or two hundred acres, and be made proprietors of the soil with land enough for subsequent divisions to sell new comers, to afford funds for the enterprising, to establish business industries for the benefit of the town.

There were few attempts made by private individuals to make settlements on any of the wild land; and in such cases it was generally a failure, for they were without protection from the Province Government.

John King is considered as one of the pioneers and squatters with no rights or pretension from any one to enter upon lands as he did; but we might learn from better known facts that Lamb and Co. of Boston, with his land interest as a Hardwick man, were the cause of his location here, on his claim, as Mr. King in a few years received a deed of his farm from the same company.

But more favorable circumstances occurred about this time, than ever before, for the settlement of the place; cessation from hostilities by the Indians had somewhat ceased; Lamb and Co. had purchased this tract some time previous, which the Quaboags were disposed to defend against the aggression of other tribes.

Now the cheering report of the circumstances of the location for a new settlement was heralded in the eastern towns so that not only the river towns were represented with a goodly number of their citizens, but some that had commenced to make homes about Worcester soon changed them for a location here.

The greater part that made up the settlement were Irish, Scotch-Irish and Scotch, which were now emigrating to the province bay. This is contrary to the general opinion, that those that came here, came in a colony in 1727.

Town and family records date a larger part of them to an earlier day. Some fifteen or twenty came here while the spirit of emigration prevailed in Ireland in 1717 to 1722. In 1717 three hundred and twenty men memorialized Governor Shute of the Massachusetts Colony, setting forth their desire to come here and settle. Twelve of this number came to this place, with others who were not signers of the memorial and also others that were advanced in years and not known on the records of business transactions, being over eighty years of age. They came to enjoy life for a few years in a log cabin, surrounded by Indians and wild beasts, their luxuries being mostly corn, beans and potatoes for diet. Some of this number had a short duration here; I find in the office of the register of deeds, in Springfield, James McElwane, father of James and Timothy (heretofore unknown to the present generation as well as his descendants); his deed is there recorded of one hundred acres of land, lying at the junction of Ware and Swift rivers, given by James McElwane of New Marlborough, it being the name of the District at that time, to Green and Walker, merchants of Boston.

This land was bought of Gent. Claimers, 1727, sold to the above parties 1729, three years before any one had a clear title. His wife Elenor not signing the deed, she gave a quitclaim of her right of dower, dated New Marlborough, or Kingsfield, 1733.

Thus passed from the wilderness world to the unknown, James McElwane, John Dorchester, John Scott, Nicholas Blanchard, Andrew Bailey, who had purchased their farms of the Gent. Claimers, but never lived tosee teh organization of the District.

We are frequently informed of the rapid settlement of towns in our Western States, but the sudden change that took place here in its day was equalled by few places of a later date. We may imagine a day of amusement to us to have gone through the town, and seen our ancestors erecting nearly one hundred log houses, they being scattered through the forests, upon the hillsides, in the valleys and beside the babbling brook, and with families, composed of the aged sire, the father and mother, the young men and maidens, and the smaller children to enliven the household and stimulate the elders to works of industry. But we are not to suppose these houses were furnished with all the paraphernalia that was necessary, till the little spinning wheel and loom were made to vie with each other in the manufacture of linen that surpassed the make of all others. The Scotch-Irish who emigrated to the colony were connected with the ancestors of the Scotch family for several centuries past, that were skilled in this branch of industry. Some of the northen clans manufactured these goods of the finest texture and most brilliant colors, which other nations have tried to imitate with poor success. The women of north Scotland became so fascinated with their own make of goods, that extravagance led them to wear so large an amount in their apparel that the chief in the clan issued an edict that no woman should use in her attire over sixty-five yards; that business might be carried on with other nations and the goods be a commodity in trade. When the descendents of this race of people came here, and began to make and sell their goods they found others engaged in the same employment. And when the shopkeepers did not give credit to the manufacturer, they applied to the General Court for redress of grievance, and they were allowed a trade mark, Londonderry linen, with a penalty and fine for any others to use the same. (The larger settlement of this people was in Londonderry, N. H.) The men, too, were calculated for a livelihood; they neither forgot to bring their ax and saw to build their houses, nor spade to till their land, for they were well aware they would find no sewing machine agent nor patent-right man to follow the emigrant in those days; but they, with their land, must be selfsupporting. It would be much better for us at the present time if we would imitate them somewhat in this respect, rather han buy whatt should be the products of the farm, because they are cheaper than we can raise them; and then we should not hear so much complaint of hard times.

In the future there will be an answer to the question who were the first one hundred men that settled the Elbow District, and where did each family locate?

GOV. HILL of New York is said to have made up his mind to push for the presidential nomination this year for all he is worth, "burning his bridges behind him," with the determination to have the presidency or nothing. It is safe to say that he will come a great deal nearer nothing than to the presidency, though he may liven up New York politics wonderfully.

THE New York court of appeals has ordered a new trial for Greenwald, a Brooklyn murderer, because incompetent evidence was admitted at his first trial. No wonder that people ask whether law is for protection of the innocent or the guilty. There certainly is an amazing amount of time, talent and money expended in trying to save malefactors from its penalties.

THE riotous conduct of the Shenandoah miners the past week is a fresh reminder of the fact that in all the labor troubles in this country the acts of violence come from aliens, and not Americans. These Polish miners knows nothing of our country, its government, laws, or language, and the same is true to a greater or less extent of the Anarchists and other lawless gangs. They are with us, but not of us, and have no desire to be. These are not the kind of immigrants the country wants, and the fewer it has of them the better.

MEMBERS of the New York Assembly are in a state of mind over the unstable condition of the ceiling in their chamber. The elegant state house, costing many millions, is still new and unfinished, but experts assure the legislators that the massive stone ceiling is liable to come down on their heads any moment. It has been considered unsafe for several years, and is growing more so. The members of the lower house are trying to get the Senate to move into their parlors, so that the Assembly may occupy their chamber while the shaky ceiling is repaired.

MONDAY was the one hundreth anniversary of the adoption of the Federal constitution by Massachusetts, and the event was celebrated in a quiet way at Boston. The constitution had been adopted by Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Georgia, and Connecticut, and the action of Massachusetts was awaited with intense interest, as it was conceded that New York, New Hampshire and Rhode Island would follow the lead of this state in accepting or rejecting it. The vote upon the adoption was 187 to 168. Western Massachusetts favored its rejection.

A horse attached to a sleigh and driven by William Merriam ran away last Friday night, colliding with some obstacle on South Main street, and smashing the cutter badly. The animal was also cut somewhat, but fortunately the occupants of the sleigh escaped serious injury. The accident was caused by running over a large snow-drift in the vicinity of Arthur Tanner's place, thereby overturning the sleigh, at which the horse took fright. Mr. Merriam claims $100 damages from the town of Monson.

A large number of invited guests attended the Masonic social at the lodge rooms Monday evening. The exercises were very interesting, and were interspersed with music by the Palmer Orchestra, singing and recitations. The company then adjourned to the supper room, where an excellent supper was served, which was followed by speeches from different members of the lodge. The orchestra then furnished music for dancing in Union Hall, which was continued until after midnight.

The firm of Fosket & Holbrook, grain dealers, has been dissolved this week after many years of partnership. Mr. Fosket contemplates opening a grain store in the McGilvray block on South Main street, from whence the firm of Fosket & Holbrook moved several years ago to their present location. Associated with him will be William Brainerd, a farmer residing on the road to Warren, and the firm name will be Fosket & Brainerd. Mr. Holbrook will continue at the old stand on Main street.

A certain M. D. not a thousand miles from this village took one of his young lady friends to ride on a professional trip to a neighboring town a few days ago, where he introduced her as his "cousin." When the start home was made he set his medicine case down on the piazza until he should get the sleigh robes securely tucked about the "cousin," and then in the fascination of her fair face forgot all about it until he got home. It was sent him the next day by express, and he had the charges to pay on it.

A petition has been circulated this week and a large number of signatures obtained of those who advocate the removal of the Western Union telegraph office to some desirable, accessible and convenient place on Main street. The petition bears the names of all the business men who patronize the local office, and will be presented to the superintendent of this division. The room in the north end of the Nassowanno House block, recently occupied by E. Hoyt, is considered a very convenient place for the office by the majority of the citizens. It is easy of access and can be obtained at a reasonable rate.

An adjourned meeting of the Western Massachusetts base ball league was held at the district court Saturday night with a small attendance, owing to the unfavorable weather. D. F. Holden presided and called for the reading of the by-laws which the committee chosen at the previous meeting were to present. George W. Phillips, a delegate representing the Ludlow team, read a set which were considered favorably, but not adopted, as other delegates, or members of the committee on by-laws, were not present. The meeting was then adjourned subject to the call of the president of the league. At the next meeting the matter of admitting the Chicopee Falls team to the league will be considered, as an application has already been put in.

Work Begun on the Electric Light Plant.

The work of excavating for the foundation of the electric light station was begun this morning by a large force of workmen. The structure will be 60 feet long and 36 feet wide, located on the plot of land purchased of John M. Converse between the union passenger station and the freight house of the New London Northern railroad. The contract for building the plant has been awarded to H. W. Leach & Co. of Boston, who expect to have the job completed within six weeks. Adjacent to the main building will be a boiler room with a smoke stack 60 feet high, made of iron. The plant will contain two boilers of 100 horse-power each, besides two large engines and four dynamos. It will require the employment of about six men to run the plant, including the linemen. The structure will be built of wood with a brick foundation, and the contractors expect to have a large force of masons from Boston on the spot Monday morning, ready to begin work upon the latter. Charles T. Robinson, the superintendent of the Thomson-Houston Electric Light Company, has made arrangements for lighting Monson and the other villages of this town from this plant. About twenty full arc lights will be required to light the streets of this village, and if they are not satisfactory they will be taken out. The incandescent system will be used quite generally to light the stores, hotels, union passenger station, churches, mills and private residences. Providing the weather is favorable enough to allow work upon the plant to continue uninterrupted, the lights will be in operation by the middle of April.

Y. P. S. C. E. Sleigh-Ride.

No happier sleighing party has gone out of Palmer this season than that of the Christian Endeavor society last Friday night. The weather was mild, the sleighing perfect, and unlike most parties, they reached home the same day. The Congregational church at Brimfield has recently organized an Endeavor society, and one of their first official acts was to invite their sister society at Palmer to visit them. Between 50 and 60 responded to the invitation, and as they drove up to the church singing, "Hold the Fort, for I am Coming," they were greeted by scores of beaming faces and the odor of most delicious coffee. The society is only a few weeks old, but it numbers 28 active members, with more to follow. Each member wore a neat badge of white satin ribbon, and the skill and energy with which the young president and her efficient corps of officers handled their forces showed that they were no novices in the art of entertaining, and called forth many favorable comments from the visitors. After supper the floors were cleared and an hour was spent in singing college songs and social conversation. Then the pastor, Rev. Mr. Kyte, in a few appropriate remarks welcomed the guests and introduced two young ladies, whose singing and spirited recitation was heartily applauded. The president of the Palmer society being absent, the vice president was called on, but adroitly evaded the responsibility by throwing it on her "usual substitute," her husband. He meekly responded, remarking that experience had taught him the folly of refusing his position, being like that of a man who was nominated for lieutenant-governor, who remarked that he ought to be able to fill the office, as he had occupied a similar position in his own family for 18 years. Then after a few words of hearty thanks to the Brimfield society for their generous entertainment the whole company formed a circle and holding each others' hands sang "Blest be the tie that binds," and the party broke up.

F. H. Proctor, a bookkeeper in the office of the Boston Duck Co., has resigned to accept the position of assistant superintendent of the Lowell Bleachery at Lowell.

WEST WARREN.

J. D. Rood has resumed his duties as station agent, Mrs. Rood having recovered from her long illness.

The Peoples' Grand Fair opened in Washington Hall Thursday night and will close Saturday night. The fancy table is a very attractive feature, and is made up largely of contributions from firms in all branches of business in the surrounding towns and cities. There is considerable interest in the contest between J. W. Brown, agent of the Warren Cotton Mills, and J. W. Chadsey, agent of the Knowles Steam Pump Works at Warren, for a handsome easy chair, to be presented to the one receiving the most votes. Miss May Armour and Miss Minnie Neu are candidates for a nice ebony stand. An entertainment is given each night, and the Beacon Light orchestra furnishes music.

There will be no service in the Union church next Sunday, as Rev. Edward Day is to supply the pulpit of the Congregational church in Granby. The Sunday school is to be held at 11 o'clock, an hour earlier.

The public library is closed for three weeks, to give the librarian an opportunity to look over the books and attend to whatever repairs are needed.

Albert A. Fuller, who died at his home last Saturday at the age of 71, was one of the most respected citizens of the town, having been a life-long resident. He was a son of Ezekiel Fuller, one of Ludlow's oldest residents, was brought up and has always been a farmer, having no school privileges until he was 15 years old, and then being able to attend only in the winter. But in spite of this he became one of the best business men in town, and held several public offices. He was tax assessor for a number of years, and was town clerk at the breaking out of the war. He also served the town in the Legislature in 1859. His sufferings through a long illness from Bright's disease and a stroke of paralysis about six months ago were borne with great patience. A wife and two children, Albert Fuller of Ludlow and Mrs. Lucy A. Pease of Ludlow Mills, survive him. The funeral was held at the Congregational church Tuesday, Rev. M. P. Dickey officiating.

Dea. Walter Hitchcock, living just across the line in Hampden, died at his home Sunday morning after a long illness, the result of a paralytic stroke some years ago. He was born in South Wilbraham, Sept. 9, 1816, and has always been a prominent citizen, having served as selectmen for several terms, and in 1865 was elected to the Legislature, where he strenously opposed the setting off of South Wilbraham as the town of Hampden. He had been a member of the Congregational church of Wilbraham for over 30 years, and served a long time as deacon, besides being superintendant of the Sunday-school from 1868 to 1880. He held many high offices of trust, and in his death the church and community suffer a great loss. The funeral was held at the church yesterday afternoon at 1 o'clock, being largely attended, and the burial was conducted with Masonic honors by Newton lodge of Masons, of which Mr. Hitchcock was a member.

Harvey Blodgett died of pneumonia Monday. His wife died a little more than a week ago of the same disease, and Mrs. Charles Sibley, who had been with Mrs. Blodgett during some of her illness. Much sympathy is felt for the friends in these sudden deaths, so near together. Mr. Blodgett leaves two children.

All the schools in town, with the exception of the high school, close to-day for a vacation of seven weeks. The reason for so doing is want of funds. It is much to be deplored on the part of the scholars, as it cuts them off with a small amount of schooling, and as many never go beyond the grammar schools, their facilities for an education are small. It is to be hoped the coming year will find the committee better prepared for school work by using their influence for a larger appropriation.

THORNDIKE.

The roadway south of Arthur Tanner's has not been safe for public travel on account of the snow drifts on the west side, and the recent accidents to the teams of S. F. Cushman and Samuel Stevens are attributed to lack of attention on the part of somebody whose duty it should be to prevent a repetition of accidents and possible damage claims against the town.

John L. Murphy, Jr., and Miss Mary Moriarty were married by Rev. Father Lee on Tuesday, 31st inst., at the parochial residence. Miss Bridget Moriarty acted as bridesmaid, and E. W. Murphy as best man. Immediately after the ceremony the bridal party returned to the home of the bride's mother on South Main street, when a large number of their friends and relations were gathered to greet the happy pair, and present them with a large number of useful and valuable articles.

The entertainment at Central Hall Wednesday evening by the Chinese Students, under the auspices of the Universalist society, was very interesting. Chinese articles were on exhibition during the evening, and tea in the true Chinese fashion was served to all who wished it. The playing of Chew Sue Chung upon the moon instrument, Chinese banjo and fiddle, and the singing by the Chinese people, was very much enjoyed. Mrs. Chung's lecture on the life of the girls in her country and the explanation of the marriage ceremony by Mr. Chung and his wife pleased the audience greatly. This family is devoting all their means to establish a school for girls in China.

WARE AND VICINITY.

Rev. T. S. Huntress of Boston is to preach at Ware Center as a candidate, next Sunday.

Prof. Nichols, formerly a teacher in the Ware grammar school, who is now teaching in the Mt. Herman school, spent a few days in town this week.

LEGISLATIVE DOINGS.

From our Special Correspondent.

Boston, Feb. 8, 1888.

Among the latest business may be mentioned the following plans, presented either as petition or order: The taxation of dogs as personal property; the incorporation of state, county and subordinate granges; offering bounties for the destruction of birds and animals which are injurious ot farm crops, including English sparrows, crows, hawks, foxes and woodchucks; providing that the vote on granting liquor licenses shall be at a special election in March or April.

On Thursday the estimates for county taxes were reported to the House, as follows: Barnstable, $13,000; Berkshire, $70,000; Bristol, $148 000; Dukes, $6400; Essex, $224,000; Franklin, $30,000; Hampden, $95,000; Hampshire, $42,000; Middlesex, $210,000; Norfolk, $68,000; Plymouth, $60,000; Worcester, $115,000.

Mr. Haggerty of Southbridge had taken from last year's files on Thursday and referred to the education committee the orders in regard to a half-mill tax for the benefit of the schools in poor towns of the state, and in regard to a better distribution of the school fund. These were both considered long last year, strongly opposed, and finally referred to this Legislature.

One of the Springfield representatives, Mr. Terry, was before the labor committee Friday forenoon to urge the repeal of the law for weekly payments to employes of corporations. He said he had conversed with many men who were in favor of a repeal of the law, for they could not save money as much as under the system of monthly payments. The surplus for the week by weekly payments was too small to put in the savings banks, and so it was all spent, but the surplus under the monthly system was enough for a deposit and so they saved something. He said that the weekly payments system cost the Boston & Albany $30,000 a year more than the monthly system. He gave figures from the savings banks returns to show that in 1887, when business was good and deposits should have been large, the increase of deposits over dividends was only $434,000 for the state, while the year before, with the old law in force half the year and business not as good, the sum was $5,700,000. Some of the committee thought the difference was due to the investments by wage-earners in coöperative banks. The official figures show that 44 per cent of the savings bank depositors are wage-earners. An adverse report has been made on repeal.

The board of education made a report to the Senate Friday, under the resolve of last year, recommending that the elementary study of civil polity be introduced into all schools of the grammar grade, and that the study of German be required in all high schools in towns of over 4000 inhabitants. It appears that there are 229 high schools within reach of 90 per cent of the population, and that nearly 30 towns have them, which are not required to by law.

On Monday forenoon there was quite a sensation at the state house about the safety of the venerable building. In the rear of the representatives' hall it was found that a board in a panel some four or five feet long had been split its whole length, and that the plastering in the vicinity was also badly cracked. Then it was found that there were bad cracks all over the house and that the ceilings of the governor's chamber and of the council chamber were also cracked. All this, it was said, had developed since Friday. But Sergeant-at-Arms Adams and Chief Wade of the district police made an examination and said that the big cracks were caused by the drying action of the steam heat, and that all was safe. One reason for fear was that the dome over the hall is very heavy, and it has also to support a tank of water, estimated to weigh from 16 to 30 tons, for use in running the elevators. As it is, the elevators jar the building perceptibly when they are stopped suddenly, and there is no doubt that they need strengthening. Last year I remember seeing a new crack a quarter of an inch wide in the old wall a foot and a half thick.

The session of the House on Monday was short, as they adjourned out of respect to the memory of Dr. Rowse R. Clark, the representative from the tenth Worcester district (Uxbridge, Northbridge and Upton).

The committee on constitutional amendments gave a hearing Monday forenoon on biennial sessions and elections, at which Col. E. H. Haskell was the chief advocate, and several representatives of labor organizations and Treasurer Beard were the chief opponents. In the afternoon the committee reported unanimously against biennial sessions of the Legislature, and with only one dissenter against biennial elections. Two of the committee, Senators Ladd of Worcester and Pinkerton of Worcester, were in favor of biennial elections, but they did not wish to dissent formally. Tuesday afternoon Senator Sprague gave a notice that he should move a substitute amendment, and the matter was assigned to Thursday.

A bill from the committee on towns allows the town of South Scituate to take by popular vote at the coming March meeting the names of Norwell, Standish, Deane, Cushing, Hatherly or Satuit. On Tuesday the House admitted under suspension of the rules a petition to make a separate town of East Brookfield, but the Senate to-day refused to admit it.

The great debate on the lease of the Providence railroad to the Old Colony occurred in the House Tuesday afternoon, and the friends of the lease carried the day by 126 to 46.

On Wednesday afternoon Mr. Quincy of Quincy put in an order for the railroad commissioners to investigate the question of the lease of the Providence to the Old Colony, and to report within 30 days the expediency of the lease, and whether it was in line with good public policy. On request of the House chairman of the railroad committee, the order was laid over to Thursday.

Most of the time in the House Wednesday afternoon was taken up with debate on two bills. One was that to prevent fines for imperfect weaving, and it was finally thrown out on a point of order that it went beyond the scope of the order on which it was based. The matter was then tabled in order to allow Mr. McCooly of Blackstone to prepare another bill, which would come within the order. Before the point was raised much was saidto show that severe and unjust fines are put upon weavers, and that no cases have been brought under last year's law, proving, as was said by Mr. Mellen of Worcester, that it is inoperative. Mr. Russell of Maynard held that the hardship was much exaggerated, and that the matter of fines was necessary for the production of merchantable cloth.

The other bill was to legalize the holding of certain Lowell railroad bonds by savings banks, and the debate involved a sharp attack on savings bank management, but the votes were not conclusive, for it was evident that the House was not clear on the matter.

Last week Mr. Grosvenor of Ludlow presented the petition of George A. Birnie and others for an act of incorporation as the Ludlow Savings Bank. On motion of Mr. Grosvenor an order was adopted, "That the committee on the liquor law consider the expediency of amending section 33 of chapter 100 of the public statutes so as to give authority to search the persons as well as the premises of those suspected of illegally selling intoxicating liquors."

Thousands of bottles of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup have been sold by W. H. Brown & Bro., Balto., Md.

The Art Amateur for February gives a delightful colored portrait study of a little girl, by Ellen Welby; decorations for a plate (La France roses), a lamp (sun-flowers), and a fish plate; a striking study of orchids, by Victor Dangon; numerous models for wood-carving, embroidery designs for a cushion and a chalice veil, and a page of monograms in Q. Articles of special practical interest are those on animal painting (dogs), still-life painting (fish), painting in water-colors, wood carving and church embroidery. Mrs. Wheeler tells how one may become an artist with the needle, Mr. Shugio discourses on Japanese sword-guards, Theodore Child and "Greta" gossip about art in Paris and Boston, and "Montezuma's" Note Book is filled, as usual, with piquant paragraphs. An article on beds is profusely illustrated, as is the one on dogs. The Moran and Buhot etching exhibitions are reviewed, and all the minor departments of this excellent magazine are ably sustained. Price, 35 cents. Montague Marks, 23 Union Square, N. Y.

To create an appetite, and give tone to the digestive apparatus, use Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Mothers should remember, when a physician cannot be procured, that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral promptly relieves croup.

The February number of The Eclectic has an excellent list of articles on a wide variety of subjects. The Duke of Argyll's curt attack on Darwin and his school, "The Power of Loose Analogies," has awakened much discussion, and is sure to get stinging rejoinders. M. Charles Yriante's opening paper on Cæsar Borgia is a most picturesque presentation of a uniquely wicked character. "Irish Secret Societies" is an interesting article germane to the interest of the day. The criticism of Carl Marx's great book, "Capital," is a vigorous analysis worth reading by all interested in socialistic problems. Archibald Geikie writes on "Charles Darwin in a most appreciative spirit, and presents the spirit of Darwin's work and life with graphic force. A paper on "Schools of Commerce," by Sir Philip Magnus, is exceedingly suggestive, and ought to awaken wide discussion. Rev. Dr. Jessopp contributes another graphic sketch of English peasant life, under the name of "Doris." Andrew Lang has a readable paper on "Realism and Romance." John Morley's address before the Edinburgh Philosophical Institute, entitled "Aphorisms," has his habitual brilliancy of style and treatment. Other readable contributions are "The Rosicrucian Brotherhood," by Arthur E. Waite, and "The Parable of Indian Art." There is an excellent short story by the Marquess of Lorne. The minor papers are worthy of the magazine.

A MUCH MARRIED WOMAN.

Mrs. Fowler, of this city, was married last January to her sixth husband, and strange as it may seem five of them died exactly two years from their wedding day. Her present husband has been sick for the past six months with chronic jaundice, and was given up by four of our best physicians; as a last resort he began using Sulphur Bitters, and yesterday told our reporter that they had saved his life, smilingly saying that he guessed Mrs. Fowler would be unable to take a seventh better half for some time to come.—Exchange. 2w45

Advice to Mothers.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. A SOUND LEGAL OPINION.

E. Bainbridge Munday, Esq., County Attorney, Clay County, Texas, says: "Have used Electric Bitters with most happy results. My brother also was very low with malarial fever and jaundice, but was cured by timely use of this medicine. Am satisfied Electric Bitters saved his life."

Mr. D. I. Wilcoxson, of Horse Cave, Ky., adds a like testimony, saying: He positively believes he would have died, had it not been for Electric Bitters.

This great remedy will ward off, as well as cure all malarial diseases, and for all kidney, liver and stomach disorders stands unequaled. Price 50c. and $1, at LeGro & Lynde's. 6

Nobody knows of the money it takes
To keep the home together;
Nobody knows of the debts it makes,
Nobody knows—but father.

Nobody's told that the boys need shoes,
And girls hats with a feather;
Nobody else old clothes must choose,
Nobody—only father.

Nobody hears that the coal and wood
And flour's out together;
Nobody else must make them good,
Nobody—only father.

Nobody's hand in the pocket goes,
So often, wondering whether
There's any end to the want of those Dependent—only father.

Nobody thinks where the money will come
To pay the debts that gather;
Nobody feels so blue and glum,
Nobody—only father.

Nobody comes from the world's cruel storm
To meet dear ones who gather

LETTER FROM CALIFORNIA.

Real Estate and Sunshine.

PASADENA, CAL., JAN. 19, 1888.

Enough building lots are already laid out in Southern California to last the multitude for twenty-five years to come, so says a real estate operator. Pasadena claims to have 12,000 population; five hundred of her citizens are real estate agents, and the other 11,500 take a chance in the general lottery now and then, or want to do so. It is the biggest gambling operation ever conceived in this country. Los Angeles is thicker with real estate men and their offices than Chicago is with beer saloons There are thirty millionaires in this town. A residence and 35 acres of land is valued at over $200,000 by the owner. A lot of steam pipe shipped from Boston in October was received in Pasadena to-day. Within one hundred miles are mountains nearly solid with iron ore. Coal (bituminous) sells for $25 per ton. Within the state are unlimited supplies of coal. The fact of it is, the people are too busy dealing in real estate to attend to much else, and until they get pinched either by cold weather or hunger they will not probably do much toward developing the natural resources of the state. New Englanders had better delay their visit to Southern California until the residents get better settled in their new quarters. A great deal of the speculating is done by men who have little or nothing to lose. They will purchase an interest and make a part payment, and before another payment is due sell out, if they can find a bigger fool than they were. Values have got so high hereabouts that Pasadena speculating is nearly at stand still, and as a consequence her real estate men are trying to boom new towns in all directions. A good many having purchased at the balloon prices and made a payment or two, are glad to sacrifice and get enough to get out of the country with. People of means with sufficient patience undoubtedly can make money here, same as anywhere else, but the stack of Eastern loafers and one-lung people cannot last always, and what in the world people of moderate means are coming here by thousands for, where there is simply no business outside of real estate, is past my comprehension, and they are to be pitied. Climate, sunshine, same the year round, and all that moonshine, is the real estate agents' sole stock in trade. They forget to mention an occasional sand storm, dust knee deep in the dry season, myriads of flies, and the climate—oh! yes, the climate. If a man can endure New England climate he can stand Southern California. Hot at noon, cold at night. Drug stores here are coining money. More people have colds to-day in Pasadena than any town of its size in Massachusetts. Ask a man here if he is interested in real estate before you get him to tell about the "wonderful climate." Down at San Diego, that booming health resort, everybody is said to carry quinine pills in one pocket, and to have a strong grip on their overcoats most of the time.

This Southern California is an oasis in a desert, and people who are disinterested tell me, and from personal observation I am forced to conclude, that the more northerly portions of the state are far more preferable for people who are inclined to personal comfort. A. L. H.

THE ANTI-SLANG SOCIETY.

A large number of Chicago girls met one evening last week for the purpose of forming a Ladies' Anti-slang society." The meeting was called to order, and Miss Sadie De Pork elected president. Before taking her seat she said in a clear, calm, well-modulated voice: "Really, girls, I'm too badly rattled by the honor conferred upon me to give you much of my guff. It's the first time I ever tumbled any thing of this sort, and I hardly know just how to catch on. However, I'll try to be sufficiently up to snuff not to let any flies light on me while doing the president of this society act. I'm with you in this move, and don't you forget it. All over our land slang words and phrases are multiplying like flies in sorghum time, and it is our duty to help knock this crying evil as silly as possible. Let our motto be, "Shoot the Slangist."—Tid Bits.

I Was Astonished.

Children often suffer greatly from impure blood until a good medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla, is taken to expel impurities and give vitality.

READ THIS:

"I think it my duty to tell how much good Hood's Sarsaparilla did my little girl. She was from birth puny, pale and sickly, and did not gain strength as she grew older. Even when three years of age she could not stand alone. She ate hardly anything, and seemed to be weak constitutionally; but was doubtless kept back by impure blood, which caused her much discomfort and suffering. She had scald head terribly, her head being covered with one sore. I decided to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and I was astonished at the effect the first bottle had on her. Her appetite began to pick up, and soon we could hardly give her enough to eat. She also gained strength, could stand alone, and the sore on her head began to grow less. We soon healed that up with Hood's Olive ointment, and when she had taken three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla she could run about the house as smart as any child. She has been bright and hearty ever since. I write this out of pure gratitude to Hood's Sarsaparilla." E.T. Alexander, 28 Cleaves street, Portland, Me.

SAVED HIS LEG!

Scrofula of the Bone Cured.

LITHONIA, GA., August 11, 1887.

THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Atlanta, Ga.:

Gentlemen—I have been afflicted with ulceration of the legs ever since I was a child, the disease undoubtedly being hereditary, as my mother suffered from scrofulous symptoms. As I advanced to manhood my affliction increased until the malady became harrassing and painful beyond the power of words to describe. My right leg became particularly involved. the left leg being less painfully affected. Finally, about fourteen years ago, the ulcers on my right leg had eaten through the flesh into the bone. In order to save my life the doctors determined to amputate the leg below the knee. The operation was successfully performed by Dr. H. V. M. Miller of Atlanta, and Dr. W. P. Bond of Lithonia. The loss of my leg gave me only temporary relief. The poison was still in my system and soon began to show itself again. In a short time after large ulcers appeared on my left leg, covering it from the knee to the instep. Frequently while at work I could be tracked by the blood which oozed from the huge ulcers, and the sores and rottening holes were so offensive that my fellow-workmen could not stand the stench and would move away from me.

Last winter I was persuaded to try S. S. S. As a last resort I consented to do so, and about seven months ago I began taking the Specific. I soon began to feel the good effects of the medicine, the offensive running began to grow less and less and finally ceased, the ulcers healed, my flesh became firm and solid, and to-day, after using twenty-one bottles, I am as hale and stout a man of my age as there is in Georgia. I am seventy-one years of age, but feel now younger and stronger than I did when I was twenty-five. I weigh about 150 pounds. Nothing is to be seen of the terrible disease, or to remind me of the torture I suffered for so many years, except the scars of the perfectly healed ulcers.

I want the world to know of the almost miraculous cure effected on me by S. S. S., and I call upon those who wish to know the particulars directly from me to write, and I will consider it a pleasure as well a duty to answer their letters. I refer to Dr. W. P. Bond, of Lithonia, as to the truth of my statement.

Very gratefully yours.

Reunion.

Where shall we meet who parted long ago?
 The frosty stars were twinkling in the sky,
The moorland lay before us white with snow,
 The north wind smote our faces rushing by.
Where shall we meet? On such a moorland lone?
 In crowded city street, or country lane?
On sandy beach-walk, while the sea makes moan?
 In quiet chamber? Shall we meet again
On any spot of old familiar ground?
 Our childish haunts? or in a far-off land?
Ah me! what if on earth on spot be found
 For longing eyes to meet, and clasping hand?
What then?—if angry fate reunion bars,
A better union waits beyond the stars.

When shall we meet who parted in the night?
 At some calm dawning, or in noontide heat?
To-day? to-morrow? or will years take flight
 Before our yearning hearts find welcome sweet?
When shall we meet? While summer roses lie
 Beside our path, and rustle overhead?
Or later, when a leaden winter sky
 Looks coldly on the empty garden-bed?
While youthful faith and hopefulness are ours?
 Or only when our hair is growing gray?
Ah me! we may have done with earthly hours
 Before it comes to us, that happy day!
What then!—Let life's path be humbly trod,
And when, or where we meet, we leave to God.

STRIKING OUT FOR HERSELF.

"She hasn't any talent at all," said Mr. Smith—"not a particle!"

"Oh, pa!" said Mrs. Smith.

"Let her stick to the dressmaking," oracularly added Mr. Smith; "there's money in that."

"But its hard earned money, pa," urged Mrs. Smith; "and it isn't as if Jacintha was a very young girl that couldn't be expected to know her own mind. Jacintha is twenty-four."

"Old enough to know better," said Mr. Smith, curtly. "And there's John Jacob Finlay has as good as said that he won't have nothing to say to a girl that goes careering off to the city, and obtrudes herself upon the public where she ain't wanted nor won't be appreciated."

Mrs. Smith's meek blue eyes grew round with mingled terror and apprehension.

"Oh, pa, don't talk so dreadful!" was all that she could say.

"Truth is truth," said Mr. Smith, "and I can't make nothing else outen it! And Jacinta may just make up her mind whether she'd rather be a good fore-handed farmer's wife, or one of those draggle-tailed artists that are always being turned out of their rooms on account of rent not paid."

The Smiths were generally a most peaceable and harmonious family. Mr. Smith liked to dictate, and Mrs. Smith was willing to obey; but to-day the tides of argument ran high. Jacintha, Mr. Smith's sister, one of the womankind whose duty he considered it to listen and obey, had actually presumed to have an opinion of her own! She had got tired of dish-washing, butter making and the endless cooking of dinners. She wanted to become—an artist!

"Painting!" echoed Mr. John Jacob Finlay, who, although a very worthy young man, was rather narrow in his ideas—"painting?—why, it ain't woman's business, climbing up ladders, and hanging on by scarf foldings, besides the white lead being poisonous to breath!"

"It ain't that, Mr. Finlay," said Mrs. Smith, anxious to make the best of things, "it's painting pictures in a studio. Pictures, you know, such as you put in frames."

"Oh!" said John Jacob.

"It ain't much better according to my ideas," gruffly answered Mr. Smith.

"Oh, pa," said his wife, deprecatingly.

"Well," said Mr. Finlay, "why couldn't you have said artist, instead of painter?"

"Where's the difference?" growled Smith.

"Whichever way it is, it won't suit me," said Finlay. "There's a good deal too many artists in New York as it is, and it's a woman's business to stay at home and help her husband save money!"

"But," gently interposed Mrs. Smith, "wouldn't it be just as well if she could earn instead of saving?"

Mr. Finlay shook his head.

"It ain't in the nature of things!" said he, while the less ceremonious Smith grumbled out:

"Earn, indeed! I'm willing to eat every sixpense she earns for the next six months at picture-painting."

"Op, pa!" said Mrs. Smith.

But Jacintha had her own way. Jacintha was a bright-spirited girl who was not inclined like her meeker sister-in-law, to bow down to the will of 'the men-folks.'

"It may be that I shall not succeed," she said, "but I intend to risk it. I've saved a little money, and I choose to lay it out in this way. And if John Jacob does not like it—why he can lump it!"

Mrs. Smith looked with admiring terror at Jacintha.

"I don't see," said she, "how you dare to be so positive!"

"Because," Jacintha returned, "I know I am in the right!"

Mr. Smith openly opposed. Mrs. Smith tremulously discouraged. John Jacob Finlay set his face like flint against the whole proceeding, but Jacintha persisted and went to New York with her little trunk and gigantic anticipations.

"I wash my hands of it all," said Mr. Smith, "and I want you to have nothing more to do with that girl, Phœbe."

"Oh, pa," twittered the little matron," "she's your own sister!"

"I don't recognize no woman for a sister that don't hear to reason, said Mr. Smith, sternly.

Jacintha Smith cheerily went to work. She lived economicly, slept on a sofa behind a chintz curtain in her studio, and rose at daylight to cook her own breakfast over a kerosene stove, and got to work early. And she had not been in New York a week before her first order came, to paint a portrait of a child whom her landlady had just lost. Her only guide was a battered photograph, but Jacintha made a success of it. She idealized the whole subject. She put the figure of the little child on a daisy-strewn bank, with a brook in front, and a tangle of hazel bushes in the background. The poor mother burst out sobbing at the sight.

"Oh, how beautiful it is!" she cried. "Oh, I love to look at him so! Perhaps he is playing just that way with the angels in heaven at this very moment!"

The landlady was only a poor woman, but she knew plenty of people who were better off. In her business of lodging-letting she came across a great variety of the human species, and the little picture with the glittering shining ripples of the brook, the green gloom of the hazels, and the burnished gleam of the child's long fair hair, was admired far and wide. More orders came in. Some were paying, and others were not—but Jacintha was kept tolerably busy. In the midst of it all, she found time to paint up a pretty sketch of an old ruined mill-wheel outlined against a red sunset sky, which was hung on the walls of the Spring Exhibition.

After that, Jacintha had no doubts nor fears. She knew now that she was going to succeed.

Mrs. Smith had not quite kept faith with her husband. Now and then express parcels of spring chickens, new butter, delicious red apples, jars of home-made mince meat would make their appearance at the studio, and more than once the good soul sat up late to write a laborious letter to Jacintha, telling all the home news, and hinting that if Jacintha would come home and abandon her wild project of a career, Mr. Smith would, she was almost sure, overlook the past! Jacintha smiled as she read Phœbe's irregular scrawls, but they did not move her fixed determination.

Success is a wonderful medium of reconciliation, however. At the end of two years Mr. Smith actually deigned to enter his sister's studio, on one of his visits to New York. It was a large, elegant room now, with another apartment separated from it by Turcoman portieres,—and Jacintha had a regular "reception day," and her meals were sent in from a neighboring restaurant.

"It must take a deal of money to keep this thing going," said Mr. Smith, glancing around him.

"It does," quietly answered Jacintha.

"Humph?" said her brother. "Be careful you don't get into debt."

I'll be careful," said Jacintha. While Phœbe eyed the Persian prayer-rugs that covered the hard-wood floor, superstitiously felt of the red silken hangings, and edged away from the lay-figure which had an unpleasantly human appearance.

"And how much do you expect to get for that thing you're painting there?" said she, glancing at the work now on the easel—a twelve-inch piece upon which a pretty little "interior was now beginning to evolve itself—an open fire-place, with an old lady teaching a child its letters by the red glow, while from a distant window a square of silvery moonlight lay on the carpet.

"It is an order," said Jacintha. "I shall probably charge seventy-five dollars for it."

"Oh, goodness me!" said Mrs. Smith, starting back.

"It ain't worth that," said Smith, with more frankness than courtesy.

"A picture is always worth what it will bring, observed Jacintha, calmly.

"And John Jacob Finlay is so set up because the girl he is paying attention to can earn a dollar a day at plain sewing!" said Mrs. Smith. "I wonder what he'd say to the money our Jacintha makes, Smith?"

Mr. Smith turned on his heel.

"Can you tell me the nearest way to the Somersetshire Savings Bank?" said he, "I have bought that up-land meadow from Squire Donnerley, and I want to borrow a thousand dollars there on bond and mortgage, to pay for it. You remember that twenty-acre meadow, Jacintha?"

"I remember it perfectly," said he. "It is a fine piece of land. What interest does the Somersetshire Savings Bank charge you?"

Smith looked rather surprised.

"Five per cent," said he.

"I'll lend you the money at three and a half," said Jacintha.

"The—mischief you will!" shouted her brother. "And where will you get a thousand dollars to lend me at three and a half per cent?"

"Where other people do—out of my business," said Jacintha—and she produced her bankbook.

And the sight of Mr. Smith's face, as he surveyed its entries, was a study.

"Jacintha," said he, "I give in. You've done well to come here and open your studio. What will John Jacob Finlay say?"

John Jacob himself came up town next day.

"Jacintha," said he, "the best of us are liable to make mistakes."

"Yes?" she interrogated.

"I haven't committed myself to Betsy Dow yet, although folks have been silly to talk," he added.

"No?" still with that questioning air.

"And if you'll say so, we'll let by-gones be by-gones, and renew our old engagement," he went on, with a persuasive smile.

"But I don't say so," cried Jacintha. "I couldn't cut out Betsy Dow for the world. Pray return to her at once. As for me, I am too much absorbed in my art to care to marry any one at present." And she bowed the discomfitted Mr. Finley out of her studio.

"And perhaps, of all the results of her success, this was the most satisfactory to Jacintha Smith. She was only human, after all.

ONLY A COUNTRY WEEKLY.

It is only a country weekly! Yes, that is all. Do those who allude to it with an intentional sneer ever reflect upon the duties and mission performed by the poor, obscure, country weekly, which is as much, nay, more to its few hundred readers in the country, as is the great metropolitan daily to its thousands of readers in the city? Oh, no; they never think of placing any estimation upon the worth of a country paper; it has none within the narrow limits of their superficial and contracted brains. They will not admit of the utility of any form of a newspaper save one that is crammed full of telegraphic despatches, giving the minute details of some revolting and nauseating social scandal; the hour at which the chamberlain of the imperial palace at Isphan put his serene and mighty highness, the shah, to bed; that the savage Gallas of Abyssinia had abjured the tenets of the Cobtic faith, and had bowed down in adoration at the shrine of Mecca's prophet; that the poor unoffending Papuans of the Celebes were being slaughtered by the Dutch invaders from the neighboring isle of Macassar, and so on, in a different variety of detail, all of which is read with an avidity that betokens the importance of these things to a city gentleman. But the financial, commercial, agricultural, religious and social condition of the millions of his fellow citizens, residing without the environs of his mighty empire of a few miles in area, is a sealed book—he has never opened its pages to inquire within; he knows nothing of it; put him to the test and you will find he knows more about the condition of the Berbers of Northern Africa than he does about the people in the neighboring country. We turn from the contemplation of this human superficiality to the practical and common sense man, who wishes to be informed as to the pursuits, condition and prospects of the people of his immediate State and country. He finds in the rural paper the information he seeks. The country organ is to him the camera lucida which faithfully betrays all that occurs; it is in a great measure the reflex of the character of the people comprising the country wherein it is published. But what is the interest which even he derives compared to that entertained by the country people themselves? It is everything to them. In it is found news which they alone probably, can appreciate and understand; information regarding their friends and neighbors, the condition of the crops and market quotations, which, to the farmer and tradesman in the country, is of primary importance; matters of local considerations wherein they are interested, and a hundred and one other things which affect and interest them, both privately and publicly. The country organ performs another function which can only be effectually done by it. As a medium for advertising it offers facilities which are unsurpassed. By it, the farmer, the laborer and the mechanic become acquainted with the goods and wares of the tradesman; they learn where they can purchase what they desire, and at the lowest prices. The county newspaper is to a county what nutritious food is to a convalescent; it helps to build it up and develop all that is good in it. The country that is without one is like a waste plain without elevation, from which a person desires to examine the surroundings can make no observation.—Exchange.

A VALUABLE EMPLOYE.

"Miss Florry," said the employer, "you have been in my establishment as bookkeeper for five years, and I have raised your salary each year until now. I am paying you all I can well afford, and I am afraid I shall not be able to raise the figures for next year any higher than they are now—$1200."

"You've been very kind to me, Mr. Plummer," replied the young lady, "but I have been offered $1300 by Swagg & Co., to take their books next year."

"The underhanded sneaks! Trying to take my employes from me, are they? Well, they can't do it. I'll give you $1400 Miss Florry, and you can snap your fingers at Swagg & Co."

"Fourteen hundred dollars is a liberal offer, Mr. Plummer, and I am obliged to you, but Shroat & Belknap sent me word yesterday, that they would pay me $1500, if I would go into their office as head bookkeeper."

"Shroat & Belknap, hey! They're a pretty pair of sharks. They'll give you $1500 will they? I'll see them in Los Angeles first?" exclaimed Mr. Plummer. "See here, Miss Florry, I'll do better than that. I'll take you into the firm. I'll marry you! Tell Shroat & Belknap you are engaged. Ha! ha! I'll marry you, Florry!"

"Oh Mr. Plummer (demurely,) I thank you sincerely for your offer, but I can never be anything more than a daugh—"

"Wha—what!" gasped the head of the firm.

"I have promised to marry your son Harry, Mr. Plummer."

English horticulturists plant mistletoe on apple trees. Selecting a clear piece of bark on the upper side of a three or four years' old branch, they rub on the berries, which will be found to adhere easily. After three months the seeds will seen to have thrown out sucker-like claws, and the young plants will rapidly increase in size until the apple tree is covered with a dense mass of mistletoe from top to bottom, laden with berries.

Why?

A baby came into the world one day
 And the parents smiled in pride.
As swift to the messages flashed away
 Came greeting from far and wide.

A baby went out of the world one night,
 And the mother moaned aloud,
For the stainless soul that had gained the light,
 For the form in the pearl-white shroud.

Oh! the mystery here, the problem deep—
 Philosophers pause a while!
Why do we laugh when we ought to weep
 And weep when we ought to smile?

SUSIE'S PRAYER.

It was a half holiday. The children were gathered on the green and a right merry time they were having.

"Come girls and boys," called out Ned Graham, "lets play hunt the squirrel."

All assented eagerly, and a large circle was formed with Ned Graham for leader because he was the largest.

"Come, Susie," said one of the boys, to a little girl who stood on one side, and seemed to shrink from joining them.

"Oh, never mind her!" said Ned, with a little toss of his head, "she's nobody, anyhow. Her father drinks."

A quick flush crept over the child's face as she heard the cruel, thoughtless words.

She was very sensitive, and the arrow had touched her heart in its tenderest place.

Her father was a drunkard, she knew, but to be taunted with it before so many was more than she could bear; and with great sobs heaving her bosom, and hot tears filling her eyes, she turned and ran away from the play-ground.

Her mother was sitting by the window when she reached home and the tearful face of the little girl told that something had happened to disturb her.

"What is the matter, Susie?" she asked, kindly.

"Oh, mother," Susie said, with the tears dropping down her cheeks, as she hid her face in her mother's lap, "Ned Graham said such a cruel thing about me," and here the sobs choked her voice so that she could hardly speak; "He said I wasn't anybody, and that father drinks."

"My poor little girl," Mrs. Ellet said, very sadly. There were tears in her eyes, too.

Such taunts as these were nothing new.

"Oh, mother," Susie said as she lifted her face wet with tears, from her mother's lap, "I can't bear to have them say so, and act just as if I had done something wicked. I wish father wouldn't drink! Do you suppose he'll ever leave it off?"

"I hope so," Mrs. Ellet answered, as she kissed Susie's face where the tears clung like drops of dew on a rose. "I pray that he may break off the habit, and I can do nothing but pray, and leave the rest to God."

That night Mr. Ellet came home to supper, as usual. He was a hard-working man, and good neighbor, so everybody said, but he had the habit of intemperance so firmly fixed upon him that everybody thought he would end his days in the drunkard's grave. Susie kissed him when he came through the gate, as she always did, but there was something in her face that went to his heart. A look so sad, and full of touching sorrow for one so young as she!

"What ails my little girl?" he asked as he patted her curly head.

"I can't tell you, father," she answered, slowly.

"Why?" he asked.

"Because it would make you feel bad," Susie replied.

"I guess not," he said, as they walked up to the door together. "What is it, Susie?"

"Oh, father," and Susie burst into tears again as the memory of Ned Graham's words came up freshly in her mind, "I wish you wouldn't drink any more, for the boys and girls don't like to play with me, 'cause you do."

Mr. Ellet made no reply. But something stirred in his heart that made him ashamed of himself; ashamed that he was the cause of so much sorrow and misery.

After supper he took his hat, and Mrs. Ellet knew only too well where he was going.

At first he had resolved to stay at home that evening, but the force of habit was so strong that he could not resist, and he yielded, promising himself that he would not drink more than once or twice.

Susie had left the table before he finished his supper, and as he passed the great clump of lilacs by the path, on his way to the gate, he heard her voice and stopped to listen to what she was saying.

"Oh, good Jesus, don't let father drink any more. Make him just as he used to be when I was a baby, and then the boys and girls can't call me a drunkard's child, or any such bad things about me. Please dear Jesus, for mother's sake and mine."

Susie's father listened to her simple prayer with a great lump swelling in his throat.

And when it was ended he went up to her, and knelt down by her side, and put his arm around her, oh, so lovingly!

"God in Heaven," he said, very solemnly, "I promise to-night, never to touch another drop of liquor as long as I live. Give me strength to keep my pledge, and help me to be a better man."

"Oh, father," Susie cried, her arms about his neck, and her head upon his breast, "I'm so glad! I shan't care about anything they say to me now, for I know you won't be a drunkard any more."

"God helping me, I will be a man!" he answered, as, taking Susie by the hand he went back into the house where his wife was sitting with the old patient look of sorrow on her face—the look that had become so habitual.

I cannot tell you of the joy and thanksgiving that went up from that heathstone that night. I wish I could, but it was too deep a joy which filled the hearts of Susie and her mother to be described.

Was not Susie's prayer answered?

LETTER FROM CALIFORNIA.

Los Angeles—The Champion Mud Hole.

PASADENA, CAL., JAN. 25, 1888.

I took a trip to Los Angeles to-day. The railroad running between this place and the chief commercial city of Southern California is known as the California Central, a part of the great Santa Fe system. I have traveled over this line considerable, and have never known a train to leave on time yet. We are eight miles distant from Los Angeles, the time was one hour. The management of this line is said to be about as bad as it can be, and a movement is on foot to build a competing line with better service promised. To-day is an elegant day for Eastern people to visit the "City of the Angeles." Mud was everywhere, and such a stench arose from the polluted streets that one who is used to inhaling pure air would hesitate about taking a long breath in Los Angeles. Street car tracks were out of sight, under the mud somewhere, and cars were continually jumping from the track, but it is impossible to repair the track until the mud dries up. It has rained moderately previous to to-day for four days, and such a sight as the muddy streets presented is beyond any one's power to describe on paper.

The Worcester parlor car "Yellowstone" came up to Pasadena from Los Angeles yesterday with a party of Maine and Worcester people. They had not intended to come to Pasadena, so said Manager Gare, but they had stood "that mud hole of Los Angeles" as long as possible, and for relief came to Pasadena, which has the advantages of being eight hundred feet higher than Los Angeles and her streets are in comparatively good condition. I heard of a number of Eastern people who landed in Los Angeles lately turning about and going home on the next train. There are no decent accommodations at reasonable prices left in this country, and people who care for comfort and health will either stay at home or direct their steps to the northern part of the state, and run the chances of catching the small-pox.

The real estate speculation boom in this country has seen its high water mark, and is steadily receding, and some of the boomers are beginning to see what lengths the chase has led them. No land good for any thing can be bought within five miles of here short of $1000 per acre. There are millions of house lots for sale, but people will grow sick of that craze after a while, because there is nothing to warrant the expectations of the schemers. A. L. H.

THE GREAT MASTER.

"I am my own master!" cried a young man proudly, when a friend tried to persuade him from an enterprise he had on hand. "I am my own master!"

"Did you ever consider what a responsible post that is?" asked his friend.

"Responsible, is it?"

"A master must lay out the work which he wants done, and see that it is done right. He should try to secure the best ends by the best means. He must keep on the lookout against obstacles and accidents, and watch that everything goes straight, else he must fail."

"Well?"

"To be master of yourself, your heart to cultivate. your temper to govern, your will to direct, and your judgment to instruct. You are master over a hard lot, and if you don't master them they will master you."

"That is so," said the young man.

"Now, I could understand no such thing," said his friend. "I should fail if I did. Saul wanted to be his own master and failed. Herod did, Judas did. No man is fit for it. 'One is my master, even Christ.' I work under his direction. He is regulator, and where he is master all goes right."

"One is my master, even Christ, repeated the young man slowly and seriously; "everybody who puts himself sincerely under his leadership wins at last."—Exchange.

PROVIDING FOR UNMARRIED DAUGHTERS.

There is a Spinsters' Insurance company in Schleswig, which gives shelter, board and pin money to the single lady members of well-to-do families. At the birth of a girl the father enters the girl's name in the books of the company and pays a certain sum every year. If, when his daughter reaches her 24th year, she is still unmarried, she is entitled to a certain income and to a couple of furnished rooms in a house belonging to the company. The house is a handsome one, with a fine garden attached to it. If the father dies before his daughter attains her 24th year, the girl enjoys the same privileges. In case she dies or marries, all her rights are forfeited, and the money paid in reverts to the company. These chances enable the company to make the provisions named, while parents have the satisfaction of knowing the future of their daughters to be secured in case of the death of their natural providers.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, FEBRUARY 17, 1888.

DAVID R. LOCKE, the famous and popular "Petroleum V. Nashby," died at Toledo, O., Wednesday, of consumption.

THE Blair education bill, appropriating $77,000,000 to be divided among the states during the next eight years in proportion to illiteracy, passed the Senate at Washington, Wednesday, by 10 majority.

CHICAGO is overrun with burglars, and now that one of them has murdered a prominent citizen in his own house the city is waking up, and the chief of police and some four hundred of his men are to be or have been dismissed for inefficiency or corruption.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND warns the Democrats of the House that if they are foolish enough to pass bills for expensive public buildings in small towns, as they have been planning on a generous scale through the South, they may expect he will put his little veto foot on them. He does not propose to have the treasury surplus thrown away in this fashion.

SPRINGFIELD begins to see a chance for the long-desired new railroad station, the mayor and aldermen having come to an agreement with President Bliss of the Boston and Albany road as to a separation of grades at the Main street crossing. The company will raise its tracks and build the bridge, and the city will re-grade its streets and pay the land damages resulting therefrom. The railroad waives its modest demand for $75,000 bonus from the city.

MAYOR HEWITT'S scheme for a rapid transit system in New York is put in the shade by Herman Clark, a contractor on the new aqueduct, who brings forward a plan for a tunnel the whole length of Manhattan island, 150 feet below the surface, with branches to Brooklyn and Jersey City. It would cost only $30,000,000, he thinks, and is considered entirely practicable. We suspect that most people would prefer to keep nearer the surface of the earth, after Mr. Hewitt's plan.

GOV. HILL of New York is charged with misappropriating some $17,000 of the state's money, by using funds appropriated for the capitol maintence in furnishing the executive mansion. Such a story is a poor starter for a presidential boom. The governor's bridges, by the way, are being burned behind him a little closer than is agreeable. Lieutenant Governor Jones now gives out that he is a candidate for the governorship, and as the governor has set out for the presidency it looks as though he would have to fight it out on that line.

A BILL has been reported favorably in the United States Senate for the appointment of a commission of five persons to investigate the livuor traffic in all its phases, economic, moral and scientific, in connection with pauperism, crime, social vice, the health and welfare of the people, and so on; and also the practical results of license and prohibitory legislation in the different states. A thorough investigation of this subject by a competent commission ought to settle many disputed questions regarding the traffic, and develop valuable conclusions as to the best manner of dealing with and controlling it.

Does He Mean It?

Mr. Blaine has given the country a genuine surprise this week. A letter from him to Chairman Jones of the Republican national committee was published Monday, in which Mr. Blaine says: "I wish through you to state to the members of the Republican party that my name will not be presented to the national convention called to assemble in Chicago in June next for the nomination of candidates for president and vice president of the United States." He bases his decision upon personal considerations simply, urges the maintence of the present tariff, and prophesies a brilliant victory for the party in the coming campaign.

Mr. Blaine's intention was known to but few, and his letter gives the liveliest sort of a boom to political matters. There has been a strong probability, amounting to almost a certainty, that Blaine would be renominated for the presidency if he desired it, and unfortunately his letter is worded so diplomatically as to leave it an open question if he would not now accept the nomination if tendered him, though he may not desire it. The cautious words of the New York Tribune, which speaks from pretty near the throne, are worthy of note, what it says parenthetically, speaking of the letter, that it withdraws Mr. Blaine's name "so far as it is in his power to do so." His name may not be presented formally to the convention, but there is nothing to prevent the convention taking it up, if so disposed, and nothing to prevent an acceptance.

It is, perhaps, hardly fair to Mr. Blaine to credit him with any such motive or thought, but he invites it by the wording of his letter. However, the Republican party should accept and act upon it as final, for in spite of his unquestionable popularity we believe it would be suicidal for the party to take him as its standard bearer again. The party has plenty of good presidential timber, and ought to pick for the best. We apprehend that Robert T. Lincoln would make as strong and popular a candidate as can be named.

Wednesday was a bad day for fires. Providence, R. I., had a $500,000 blaze, and had to call for help from Boston; Elmira, N. Y., was visited by a $200,000 fire, and Rockville, Ct., lost a business block valued at $25,000.

A heavy derrick, used in the construction of an elevated railroad at Brooklyn, N. Y., fell Tuesday morning upon a horse-car, killing three persons and severely injuring several others.

Mrs. Robinson of Somerville has been found guilty of murder in the first degree, in causing the death of her brother-in-law, Prince Arthur Freeman, by poison.

The Boston city council has been petitioned to repeal the ordinance against preaching on Boston common.

No more palatable dish can be placed upon the table than Quaker Rolled Oats, which by new drying processes acquire a rich, nutty flavor very grateful to the taste.

PALMER AND VICINITY.

To-morrow is civil entry day at the district court.

W. H. Stone has taken Winter's blacksmith shop on West Main street.

Postmaster Brown has practically recovered from his rheumatic illness.

Eugene Perkins of Westfield is now employed at the market of F. C. Hatch.

Miss O. Van Wagnon of Springfield sang soprano at St. Paul's Universalist church last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. F. N. Carpenter entertained a card party at their home on Thorndike street last evening.

P. Linnehan is doing all kinds of furniture repairing and upholstering at No. 10 South Main Street.

A new feature is soon to be added to the store of S. H. Hellyar & Co. in the shape of a ten-cent counter.

The factory of J. S. Holden & Company has been provided with automatic sprinklers for protection in case of fire.

The interior of W. A. Barnes's fruit and confectionery store on Main street has been improved this week by the painters.

The selectmen have been taking the annual inventory at the town farm this week, and find things in excellent condition.

Palmer Lodge, I. O. O. F., has increased its numbers largely during the past year, and is enjoying a flourishing condition.

Freight traffic is unusually heavy just now on the Boston & Albany road, some 30 trains being run each way every 12 hours.

John Sedgwick, traveling agent for the Boston Journal of Commerce, is confined to his home on Pleasant street with erysipelas.

Wilbur F. Miller of Ludlow has been engaged as director of the Second Congregational church choir for the ensuing year.

Fosket and Brainard have their new flour, grain and feed store in McGilvray's block, South Main street, open and ready for business.

The JOURNAL job rooms have this week printed 20,000 copies of a 24-page pamphlet for the National Fertilizer Co. of Bridgeport, Ct.

Good Cheer Lodge, Daughters of Rebekah, has been given an invitation to visit Morning Star Lodge, at Springfield, next Tuesday evening.

Lord & Clark of Holyoke, manufacturing confectioners, have their store in Caryl's block ready for business, and will make candy fresh every day.

The selectmen give notice that they will meet March 1st instead of March 5th, and desire all who have bills against the town to present them at that time.

The cantata "Ruth" has been thoroughly rehearsed by those who are to participate in it, and will be presented the 28th under the direction of Wilbur F. Miller.

W. S. Kelton, for some time past bookkeeper for J. H. Smith, has resigned to occupy a position as traveling salesman with John H. Lyon & Co. of New York,

The local Democratic club held a special meeting Wednesday evening and chose delegates to attend the union meeting held at the town house next Thursday evening.

Office Healey of this place assisted in making a liquor raid at the Cushman House in Monson Saturday night, but after persistent hunting no spirits could be found.

A new telephone has been placed in Station Agent Rice's office at the union passenger station, and connection made with the freight office of the Boston & Albany road.

The lecture on "Berlin and the Royal Family," by N. S. Gage, D. D., of Hartford, Wednesday evening was very interesting, being made more so by stereopticon views.

The regular Thursday evening prayer meetings were omitted at the churches this week to allow all to attend the temperance convention held at St. Paul's Universalist church.

Landlord Southwick catered to another small sleigh-ride party from Wilbraham at the Nassowanno House last Friday night. Previous to supper the party indulged in dancing at Hibernian Hall.

Four tramps who were set at work breaking stone Tuesday morning "took a sneak" when the keeper's back was turned, but were neatly captured by Officer Healey, and have gone up fof four months each.

A small but merry party from Ware visited Palmer Monday evening, stopping at the Weeks House, where an enjoyable time was passed in dancing and sociability. A fine supper was served by Landlord Weeks.

Workmen have been employed all the week thawing out the pulleys which work the signals at the crossing of the railroads, they having been frozen solid in the ice. In the meantime trains have been flagged by hand.

The leading citizens of the village contemplate calling a meeting to be held at the district court room soon to consider the formation of a board of trade, whose duty it will be to build up the business interest of the town.

A union temperance meeting was held at the Second Congregational church Sunday evening, the principal speaker being Miss E. S. Tobey of Boston, president of the Massachusetts Womans' Christian Temperance Union.

About forty-five young persons gave Miss Christa Park a surprise party last Friday evening at her home on the corner of Pine and Squier streets, in recognition of her 13th birthday. Numerous presents were left her as souvenirs of the occasion.

Daniel Keefe, an employe of the Palmer Wire Manufacturing Company, stepped upon a piece of wire at the mill Saturday, which penetrated his foot, making a severe wound. It is thought that he will recover the use of his foot after a time.

The People's Theatre Co., supporting Miss Dorrit Ashton, appeared at the Park street rink Monday and Tuesday evenings to good audiences. The company then concluded to take a rest until after Lent, when it will open again at Spencer.

Washington's birthday occurs next Wednesday. The business places and those employed in them, and elsewhere, as a general thing will "keep right on fishing as though nothing had happened," though the banks and schools will close for the day.

The first stage rehearsal for the cantata "Ruth" was held last evening at the residence of C. A. Brown on North Main street, at which time a unique basket of flowers was presented Mr. Brown by the members of the Second Congregational choir.

The young people of this villiage who presented "Comrades" at Monson Tuesday evening are receiving many flattering words from the people of that village for their creditable rendering of the piece, and there is already talk of having them there again in April.

A leap year party from Monson enjoyed a sleigh-ride to Palmer Wednesday evening, being entertained at the Weeks House, where dancing was indulged in, music being furnished by the Palmer Orchestra. A good supper was served the visitors in Landlord Weeks's usual style.

Landlord Weeks will entertain a party of Springfield visitors this evening, who will come out from that city for their annual sleigh-ride, though this year, on account of the poor sleighing, they will come by special train. A supper and dancing will make up the evening's entertainment.

A communication from Rev. F. W. Betts of St. Paul's Universalist church, who is now absent, was received last week and read to his congregation Sunday morning. The letter stated that the physicians' latest report regarding his condition was very encouraging, and also that a speedy recovery of his eyesight was almost assured.

H. W. Leach and Company of Boston have been pushing the work of putting in the foundation for the electric light plant this week, and would have had it entirely completed by Saturday night had the weather been suitable. The contract for the building has been awarded to George W. Lyman to be completed April 15.

It was a merry party of 53 couples which met at the Weeks House Tuesday evening for a social time. The company was made up mainly of the business men of the place, with their wives, and was one of the pleasantest gatherings ever held in Palmer. The Palmer Orchestra furnished music for dancing, after which all sat down to a supper such as only Landlord Weeks knows how to get up.

Sir Thomas Grattan Esmonde and Hon. John Stuart, the two distinguished laborers for Ireland's cause, were conveyed from Ware to this place Sunday afternoon, being entertained by Rev. T. J. Sullivan of St. Thomas' Catholic church until the arrival of the 6.37 p. m. train for Springfield, from which place they continued their journey to Hartford, Ct. Many of the local Irish citizens greeted them at the union passenger station during their stay.

Medical Examiner Holbrook of this place was called to view the body of Calvin Shaw at Wales Saturday morning, which was found with life extinct, sitting by the fireside in his chair. No inquest was held on the body of the deceased, as it was without any marks of violence that would indicate foul play. His death was thought to have been caused by heart disease. Mr. Shaw was a brother of C. C. Shaw of this place, and quite well known in this locality.

There was some growling in the village Wednesday because the steam fire engine was permitted to go out of the town, with a good share of the hose. There have been times in our own history, however, when we have been glad to receive help from outside, and we can hardly afford to turn the cold shoulder to our neighbors in their hour of need. It would seem, though, as if Springfield could have better afforded to spare one of her steamers for the night, than that Palmer should leave its only one at North Wilbraham, with no means of returning quickly in case of need. However "all's well that ends well."

The Palmer Steamer At The North Wilbraham Fire.

An alarm of fire from box No. 57 was rung in Wednesday about 11.30 in response to a dispatch from North Wilbraham at 10.45 asking for assistance in subduing the flames which were getting beyond control at the mill of the Collins Manufacturing Company. The firemen were quickly on hand, considering that the first assistant engineer was at Bondsville, and that permission to take the steamer out of town had to be obtained from the selectmen, who were then at the town farm. The steamer and hose truck were soon loaded upon a special train which reached the fire at 12.30 and a stream was soon playing upon the burning structure. The bursting of a small pipe by the frost caused a little delay, but this was soon remedied. The company remained on duty that afternoon and all night, returning to Palmer early Thursday morning. The boys worked well, as did the steamer, for which they received the warmest praise from North Wilbraham people. They managed to save the large extension of the mill in which was located the most valuable paper machinery. The firemen suffered severely from the intense cold of the night. W. A. Weld was nearly frozen, and had to be taken to the hotel during the night, where he was cared for. First Assistant Engineer Hitchcock had his ears badly frozen, while others complained of similiar misfortunes. Most of the firemen, however, braved it through, and deserve the greatest credit for their efficient work.

Decisions in the Liquor Cases.

BY THE LOCAL COURT.

The decisions in the liquor cases which have been pending for some time past at the district court were rendered Saturday by Judge Robinson. The testimony of the spotters has been given to the court very slowly, and the counsel for the defense has consumed much time in sifting the evidence, as has also the attorney for the Commonwealth. During the trials of the different cases no startling revelations have been made by the witnesses on the stand, although the spotters' manner of procedure while at work getting cases against the dealers has made the testimony interesting at times, and furnished merriment for the audiences. As the cases have been appealed, there yet remains the decisions of the superior court, at which time this same testimony will have to be reiterated. The opinion of many is that some of these cases will be acquitted by the jury, but that each defendant will be convicted in at least one case. The decisions in the various cases are as follows: William Thompson, two cases for illegal selling, fined $100 and costs; James Lynch, two cases, fined $100 and costs; Michael Sullivan, two cases, fined $100 and costs; S. L. Ferry, one case, fined $50 and costs; Michael Foley, two cases, fined $100 and costs; C. P. Stone, two cases, fined $100 and costs; John Madden, three cases, fined $150 and costs; John Feeney, four cases, one for common nuisance, fined $300 and costs. Frank Nelson, for illegal selling, was discharged owing to the inability of one of the "spotters" to identify him when called upon the stand. Nolle prosequi was entered by the court in the complaints against C. A. Severance, Walter Ripley, Patrick Kennedy, and one case of Michael Foley and the three remaining cases against John Madden.

No License Convention.

STATE WORK IN THE PAST AND FUTURE.

The Massachusetts Total Abstinence Society held a no license convention at St. Paul's Universalist church Thursday afternoon and evening, for the purpose of discussing state and local affairs pertaining to the work that has been accomplished the past year, and arranging for the work to be done in the future. The afternoon session opened at 2.30 with a small attendance. Rev. A. W. Weeks of the Second Baptist church called the meeting to order and read a passage of Scripture. Rev. W. W. Heywood of Framingham was then introduced, and said: "Ladies and Gentlemen: The question of temperance in this state is a vastly important one, and it seems to me that after all the discouraging phases we experience in this noble work, there are enough encouraging ones to overbalance the former. It is somewhat discouraging to fight the battle with the license party over every year in the many towns and cities of this old commonwealth, but say what you will, we are working for a good cause, and the day is not far distant when a continued victory will be ours. The courts of this state, with the statutes they have to comply with, will never do us justice until such laws are materially changed. I say we are never going to accomplish anything by law unless we have a new law passed relating to the sale of intoxicating liquors. Such are facts, not mere conjectures. The object of the no license party, and one reason we are all assembled here to-day, is to help on the work in the matter of the local option law. The legislators we elect and send to the State House at Boston do not in every instance do their duty in the enactment of laws that will benefit the no license party, and so long as laws exist that will permit the manufacturer of intoxicating liquors, just so long will it be dealt out to the people of the land, and just so long will the curse fall upon the inhabitants of the state. Of course it will not be dealt out so extensively, for the no license party will present it. What we want is legislators that will work for the interests of the temperance faction. I am extremely glad that this town went 110 majority last year in favor of no license, but we want to get even a greater majority next month here, and feel that we are making some local progress over last year. We can do it by dilligent work and by no other means that can be devised. Do all you can to elevate, to educate our children, our youth. Do all you can to swell the vote and help on the constitutional amendment. Last of all work to secure a victory at the forthcoming town meeting that will be an honor to the town and to the citizens at the polls whose many homes they represent."

Rev. Hugh Montgomery of Worcester, the noted temperance advocate, followed, saying briefly: "Within a year I have been permitted to speak to over 172,000 people upon the subject, and am exceedingly pleased to be here to-day. Although they may have been defeated at the election in other towns and cities in Hampden county, you need to congratulate yourselves on the local success of the no license party. The work done throughout the state last year makes a very auspicious showing for temperance, and plainly demonstrates the fact that we are steadily gaining, and have by our increased numerical strength placed more illegal liquor sellers behind the prison bars the past year than at any other time in our history. The local courts have as a general thing convicted liquor sellers on fair evidence, and there have been more cases appealed to the superior courts throughout the state and convicted the past year than ever before. The daily and weekly press of the state has also swung into line more generally than ever before, devoting more space to temperance work, which is highly commendable. I have in mind only four newspapers in this state that have denounced the temperance cause. The time is coming when we will have prohibition every year, but this will not be brought about until every temperance advocate makes it a duty to take some active steps in the work of reform. When we get control of the press we will get hold of a mighty lever. This applies to the courts as well.

After the above speaker had finished a few brief remarks were made by Rev. Mr. Brooks of Iowa.

The following committee was then chosen to influence the citizens of Palmer to vote for no license at the forthcoming town meeting. Rev. H. W. Pope, Rev. A. W. Weeks, George A. Wright, Mrs. H. Lawrence, Mrs. W. A. Hitchcock, William Merriam and Hubbard Lawrence.

The evening session was comparatively well attended. Rev. Hugh Montgomery addressed the meeting briefly in the place of Rev. E. C. Foster of Iowa, who was expected to speak, but was unable to be present.

Rev. W. W. Heywood spoke as follows: "The subject that has brought us here tonight is one of intense interest. The question may be old, but it pays to reiterate it as much as we can. Every intelligent man and woman in this town should not hesitate a moment to enter the work of temperance, for by so doing you will build up New England civilization. We find in manufacturing towns and cities of the nation the foreign element, but by our work we are assimilating them day by day. Every steamer that lands on America's shores brings her quota of uncivilized people that settle in the different towns and cities of the land. Unless these people are taught temperance they will soon go on the downward road to destruction. As the old drunkards die and fall out of sight there is another army close behind in their tracks made up of our bright youths. The young man in the high hopes of his life says emphatically that he will never be a drunkard, but unless he is properly watched and cared for he soon falls into the wrong path. In the use of intoxicating liquors we are not using anything that God has made, for you may hunt the Scriptures all through and you will not find anything with alcohol of God's make. In closing I wish to say to you all to be active, energetic and untiring in influencing the citizens of Palmer to vote "no" at the next town meeting, for by so doing you will help to pull down the flag of treason and rebellion and keep the heart of the old Bay State pure and earnest."

The Farmers' Institute.

AN INSTRUCTIVE AND ENTERTAINING MEETING LARGELY ATTENDED.

The Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society held its second institute of the season at the Weeks House hall Tuesday, with a comparatively large attendance at each session. The morning session opened at 10.30 with Vice President Tucker of Monson in the chair. E. B. Lynde of Brookfield was introduced as first speaker, who took for his subject "Hired Help on the Farm." He said: "Mr. Chairman and Brother Farmers: The question of hired help is an important one for every farmer in New England to seriously consider. Upon the farm hand depends the success or downfall of his employer. There was a time years ago when the prices paid the farm laborer were uniform, but since that time, as would naturally be supposed, things have changed, and to-day the prices are different, with no stipulation among the farmers as to what shall be paid the laborer. There are many different classes of help, and my experience with some of these classes extends over quite a period. Take the man, for instance, who is willing to arise early in the morning and continue to work until a reasonably late hour at night—that is all a very pleasant thing to have, but when you employ the man that dislikes to get up early in the morning, and expresses dissatisfaction on all sides because he is asked to, it makes one feel as though he wanted to abandon the vocation of farming. A person that is a good milker is a valuable man for the average farmer to have in his employ; and more especially so the dairyman. Perhaps a better class of young men which were formerly employed upon the farms of New England go into the shops and different industries of the country to earn a livelihood than can be found upon our farms at the present time. This is, of course, due to the fact that they dislike the farm upon which the burning sun spoils their complexion, or because they cannot affiliate with society without carrying with them the so-called disagreeable odor of the farm. The young man that understands his business and is faithful to his employer can find employment on any of the farms in New England when help is needed, and moreover, can make more money than to dig and delve in the shop. We read articles in our agricultural papers that it is an obvious fact were written by cranks, and not by practical farmers, as should be the case. The writers of such articles as appear in our papers should be practical men at the business, allow me to reiterate, or else acquire a knowledge of agriculture by investigation and study at the experimental stations. If the agricultural literature was right there would be more men available that the farmer could obtain. It is not an easy matter to get good and reliable female help for the house. If you have one in your employ she, after a time, almost becomes a necessity, and as you give her privileges she after a while takes them without giving, and terminates her connection with you when she finds out she can't control the family. It is always advisable to treat your help in a courteous way—they will appreciate it and strive to do everything in their power for your interest. If you have a valuable man upon your farm that you think you are paying big wages, do not cut him down, but give him an increase before he demands it; it will pay in the end."

E. F. Bowditch of Framingham followed, saying: "I have had considerable experience in the employment of hired help upon the farm, and have always believed it advisable and good policy to keep a valuable man when I have had one in my employ. If he has reason to think he is worth a trifle more than you are paying him, give him the increase by all odds, you can afford to do it every time. If he is not a valuable man let him go at once, and appoint a successor that is. I don't believe that high prices always secure the most reliable, ablest and best men, for some of those that can be secured at a lower figure have several times within my experience proved the best men. Steady working your help, I find, is better than to have them all the time on the hustle. I think we are not lenient enough with our hired help is one reason that the better class leave the farm for the workshop. Treat them courteously, for if you don't have cheerful labor it don't amount to but little. In the first place to employ help a farmer should be a good judge of human nature, for it will be of great advantage to him in securing help. Always give your help the opportunity to enjoy the principal holidays, and accommodate them whenever it is possible and will not greatly inconvenience yourself."

Foreman Williams of the state primary farm said: "I have had some experience in hired help, and of all the classes that I have employed I prefer American labor to any other. I have not always had the best of success with foreign labor."

A. P. Capen of Ludlow was the next speaker who expresseed liberal views on the subject. He said: "I always found it a difficult task to get a man to do exactly as you would like to have him do when he is assigned a certain piece of work. It is my candid opinion that more work can be gotten out of a man to work him ten hours per day than to make him labor fifteen." The speaker closed his remarks by advocating the employment of foreign labor.

Others prominent in agriculture also expressed their opinions upon the subject.

At noon a dinner was served by Landlord Weeks. The farmers re-assembled at 1.15, the subject for the afternoon being "Sheep Husbandry." E. F. Bowditch of Framingham opened the discussion in an informal way. The speaker told the farmers of the different methods he had employed in sheep husbandry, and that in most every instance they had proved successful. "Every farmer in Massachusetts," he said, "should keep at least one sheep to every cow. It is the most profitable business that the average New England farmer can engage in. Sheep should be watched carefully at all the critical stages, and especially at breeding time. They should be hurdled in the pasture every night during the pasturing season to protect them from dogs. Your pastures upon which they feed will increase its value tenfold, as the old adage reads:—'A sheep's foot is as good as gold for the farmer.' The best fencing to use is made of wire with laths attached. This you will find, as I have by experience, will keep the sheep within their limits. What the farmer of to-day wants to keep upon his farm is the early maturing sheep. It isn't the breed so much that counts in sheep raising as the size of the animal. The old-fashioned Southdown is a kind of sheep that will stand all kinds of exposure better than any other. The Shropshire breed is better for the average farmer to keep than any other, and the wool will bring a higher price at the different markets of New York and Boston than any other kind." H. A. Rindge said that he had always found sheep raising a very lucrative business, and advised the farmers of Eastern Hampden to keep them. Dr. William Holbrook of Palmer, A. P. Capen of Ludlow and E. B. Lynde of Brookfield were among others that expressed their opinions upon the matter, succeeding which C. M. Abbe of Palmer read an interesting and instructive paper on the same topic. He said:—"Mr. President: A noted breeder and flock-master has well said that 'sheep husbandry in some form is a necessity upon most farms in the country.' The requirements for its success are a breed that will furnish a carcass of the best mutton, united with a valuable fleece of wool. The time has gone by when sheep can be profitably kept in the Central and Eastern states for wool production alone. The use of mutton is rapidly increasing in our country, and will extend as fast as a good article can be supplied. Then why not keep more sheep on our rugged hillsides of New England? is a question worthy of our consideration. Perhaps there is no greater hindrance to the success of this profitable branch of farm industry than the constant warfare upon our flocks by worthless dogs that roam at will over our pastures, either to worry or kill any sheep that fall a prey to the appetites of these intruders. The compensation which the law allows for such damages is often less than the circumstances warrant. Brother farmers, did you ever think of it, that you are obliged by law to keep your horses and cattle within the enclosures of your premises, that they shall not intrude upon the rights of your neighbors; and if A's cattle break into B's field of corn, the former is held liable for the full amount of damage by said stock? Now let us carry this point a little further, and give us a law by which all owners of dogs shall be compelled to know where their dogs are, and that they shall not be allowed to roam at will over our pastures, and any violation of this law shall give the flock-master liberty to kill any dogs found trespassing upon his premises. Such a law would do much to encourage and protect sheep husbandry among us. But there is another canine more formidable than those already mentioned, which threaten this industry, and we will call him by the pet name of his friends: 'Tariff Reform.' Let us look at some of the facts of the case. At the convention of wool growers, merchants and manufacturers, held at Washington last month these facts were brought out: 'that under the protection by tariff, the production of wool and of the manufactures of wool, is demanded by the best interests of all American people.' The increase in the clip of American wool from $60,000,000 in 1869, to $302,000,000 in 1885, while the imports of foreign wool advanced only from $26,000,000 to $70,000,000 within the same period, demonstrates the effect of protective duties in promoting sheep husbandry in this country, and thus adding to the sources of national prosperity and wealth. The fact that the reduction in the tariff on wool in 1883 was immediately followed by a decrease in the number of sheep in this country from $50,000,000 in 1884 to $44,000,000 in 1887, gives warning that the abolition of duties on wool would seriously cripple the raising of sheep in this country. As a means to the development of manufactures at home, the sheep industry, which has so largely aided in the development and civilization of our vast Western country, deserves consistent and adequate encouragement in the adjustment of the national revenue. Prudence forbids the overthrow of a system of revenue under which such results have been obtained, while the wages of labor, and the share of production paid to the American artisan are far greater than in any other country. With these facts as its justification, the conference at Washington demanded, instead of free wools or free woolens, a return to the tariff of 1868, which would increase the duties which now protect to some extent the wool growers and manufacturers from foreign competition. In connection with this subject, allow me to submit a ledger account which has come under my notice during the past two years:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| January, 1886. | 15 Ewes and Ram, cost...... | | $65.00 |

"The total income for 2 years is $202.50, an average income per head of $6.85, and the sheep are worth as much to-day as breeders as at any time. Will drop their lambs this month, and it is reasonable to expect better prices for the lambs another season. These are grade Southdown sheep, crossed with a Shropshire ram. But little grain was fed the lambs, and still they weighed 60 lbs at 13 weeks of age. Only ordinarily good care was given, such as any farmer ought to furnish. The raising of early lambs for the market can be made one of the most profitable of our live-stock interests, and is worthy of much consideration. Feeding sheep for market is another branch of this industry which is deserving of more attention than it receives, we fully believe, and the statements of many men who feed sheep for market are almost without exception in favor of sheep instead of cattle. Sheep can be profitably kept wherever beef cattle are raised, even if the price of wool is not estimated at all. In England the price of good mutton has exceeded that of the best beef from 2 to 6 cents per pound, and in this country it is about the same ratio. For instance, to-day mutton costs 6¼ to 8 cents. Now, gentlemen, if we can make a pound of mutton for the same cost as that of a pound of beef, then why not produce the one which commands the best price in our markets?"

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

Mrs. Harvey Kent of Stoney Hill is seriously sick at the home of her daughter, Mrs. E. B. Gates.

Cutler & Co. have been awarded a silver medal for their patent grinding mill by the Massachusetts Charitable Mechanics association. This mill is of the firm's own designing, and they claim that it is equalled by few and excelled by none.

The Paper Mill of the Collins Manufacturing Company Burned.

A serious calamity befell this village Wednesday morning, when the paper mill of the Collins Mfg. Co. was almost wholly destroyed by fire, which was discovered in the rag room on the third floor about 2.40 a. m., covering a space some 20 feet square. A stream of water was turned on in three minutes, and two streams in five minutes, but the fire spread rapidly to the fourth and fifth stories. The main effort was then directed toward saving the east end of the building, but without success. There was no local fire department able to cope with the flames, and a steamer was asked for and sent from Springfield, arriving about 5 o'clock. The firemen were greatly inconvenienced by the lack of ladders, but did good work in saving the lower floors and L of the building. They could not keep the fire down, however, and another steamer from Springfield and one from Palmer were sent for, arriving about 12.30 p. m., the latter company remaining until the next morning. The floor of the finishing room was saved, with the wing containing the engine and other valuable machinery. The cause of the fire is unknown, but is thought to have been spontaneous combustion. The loss will be over $300,000, with $298,000 insurance.

THREE RIVERS.

A service in memory of the children of Andrew Hall will be held at the Baptist vestry next Tuesday evening.

Schools were closed Wednesday and Thursday, owing to the failure of the steam heating aparatus to work properly.

Mrs. Fannie Ellis, Mrs. Josie Northrop, Mrs. Alice and Mrs. Emma Keith of Palmer, spent the day with Mrs. E. L. Derby Wednesday.

Principal E. G. Ward was quite pleasantly surprised by his pupils at the close of school hours last Friday afternoon, when they presented him with a very handsome volume of Carlyle. After the presentation speech had been made and responded to, the scholars and teachers had a very pleasant social time.

Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Tupper, formerly of this place, but now of Jewett, City, Ct, were pleasantly surprised by a large party of their friends at their home in that place a few evenings ago, on the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage. The bride and groom of twenty-five years ago were presented with a handsome chamber set from their relatives, and a purse of $25 from village friends. Among those present from out of town were: Mr. Cyrus Winchell, wife and nephew, of Rockville, Ct; Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Vanderbeek, of Fall River, Mass., Mrs. Vanderbeek being the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tupper. Mr. J. O. Sweet, agent of the Ashland M'f'g Co., made the presentation address. Miss Myra Bumstead, a teacher in the village school, read an original poem written for the occasion by Mr. Vanderbeek.

The Easter music at the Catholic church will consist of a programme of choice new selections. The choir will be assisted by an orchestra from Springfield.

Several ladies, while on the way to church last Sunday evening, were insulted by a crowd of men who were standing on the sidewalk near the Clinton House. Such conduct as this should not be permitted.

At the sociable held at the Congregational church the other evening, the Ladies' Benevolent Society elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. R. K. Houston; vice president, Mrs. Emma Murdock; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. H. E. W. Clark.

The Hungarian Quartette concert at Union Hall Monday evening was well attended, nearly every seat being taken. The selections by the quartette and the reading by Miss Florence was well received and heartily encored.

There will be a convention of the different branches of the Democratic club next Thursday evening at the town hall, Four Corners. The object is to call the branches together and prepare to take action in the coming spring town election. Each branch is entitled to six delegates.

A party of three, consisting of two ladies and one gentleman from this place, met with an accident last Friday evening while driving home from Gilbertville. They were thrown from the sleigh, and the horse managed to free itself and came home without a driver, the party being compelled to remain at Ware until next morning. They received no injuries.

A large audience was present at Union Hall last Friday evening to witness the drama "Won at Last," by the young people's club. The parts were well taken and each member deserves credit for the manner in which they presented them. Miss Alice Moynihan, Amanda Gay, Bessie Shea, John McCormick, Daniel Cummings and Dennis Buckly deserve special mention.

MONSON.

"Comrades" was presented by the Women's Relief Corps of Palmer, to a fair sized audience at Central Hall, Tuesday evening. The company was a good one, and deserved a much larger house.

Thousands of pieces of burnt paper were seen floating around town Wednesday, which were supposed to come from the Collins Paper Co's. mill at North Wilbraham, which was burned that morning.

A good many Monson people will be pleased to know that Hi Henry's Minstrels are booked to appear at Central Hall, March 5. This company is the finest of the kind that ever appeared here, and are assured of a good house.

The present craze for "Decorative Ar." will be illustrated by tableaux, with music interspersed, at the Congregational church parlors next Friday evening, to which all are invited. Admission 15 cents. Proceeds to go toward buying a piano for the Sunday-school room.

Otis Needham, who died at his home in this village last Sunday, was born at the old family homestead in Wales June 25, 1821, being the seventh of nine children of Alfred Needham, Esq., a prominent citizen there, who was the third of eleven children of David Needham, who was born April 22, 1755, and served in the war of the Revolution. The latter was the fifth of six children of Anthony (fourth generation in this country) born 1723, who was the first of eleven children of Anthony, and Mary Moulton, his wife, who were probably the first white settlers of the territory within the present limits of Wales.

About 20 young ladies of this place gave their gentlemen friends a sleigh-ride and supper Wednesday afternoon. The affair was gotten up and managed entirely by young ladies, the gentlemen being passive factors. A select but merry party enjoyed ride through Palmer, Thorndike and Three Rivers, returning to the Weeks House, Palmer, where they refreshed themselves with a fine supper. Dancing and games followed until a late hour. The girls called for the gentlemen, helped them in, took them to supper, waited on them, and in short did everything for them, but when it came to seeing them home they declined.

WARE AND VICINITY.

Police Officer Fisherdick and Clara Angell were married last evening by Rev. B. V. Stevenson.

The Trinity Episcopal society has again changed the time of its Sunday evening service in the Town Hall to 7.30.

There was a sudden change of temperature the middle this week, from 42 above to 14 below zero in the short time of 36 hours. debt.

One of the plate glass windows in Sagendorph's block having been cracked, a new one was set in its place Wednesday by William Medcalf, by whom the windows were insured.

The public library is well patronize this winter. About two hundred volumes of new books have been ordered and are expected to be ready for distribution in a week or ten days.

One of the horses belonging to Liveryman Gilmore ran from more than half way to West Brookfield Wednesday, the occupants of the sleigh being tipped out in a snow drift. No one harmed and nothing broken. Distance run about four miles, time, as near as can be got at from the time the horse arrived, ten minutes.

Eden Lodge, F. and A. M., is to hold a social at Masonic Hall on the evening of Washington's birthday, next Wednesday. The Amateur Orchestra, which is composed of some our leading young men who have for some time been under the instruction of Mrs. H. E. Jordan, has been engaged to furnish music. A collation will be served, and a most enjoyable time is expected.

Zenas C. Marsh, aged 69 years, died at his residence Thursday evening. Mr. Marsh was born at Gilbertville, but was one of our oldest citizens, having lived here nearly all his life, being one of the direct descendants of the first settlers of the town. He was a member of the Congregational church, and the funeral will be held at the chapel Monday at 10 o'clock.

The building for the electric light plant is nearly ready for the machinery, and it is promised to have the thing in running order in two or three weeks at the farthest. There is to be a 50-horse power engine with 60 horse-power boiler, two dyanmos, one of 30 light power for the arc lights, and one for the incandesent lamps capable of running 500 of them. 200 lamps are already engaged for places of business. The work of putting in them commenced with the store of Cox & Nayler.

Quiet a number from Ware attended the Brookfield Associational Conference at North Brookfield Tuesday. Rev. A. T. Perry and wife, John W. Cummings, Henry B. Anderson, W. L. Breckenridge, Mrs. E. Bowdoin, Mrs. L. N. Gilbert, Miss M. Collins, W. B. Yale and wife, also Rev. Thomas A. Dorion and F. X. Lacombe of the French Protestant church. Mr. Perry opened the discussion of "The Work of the American Missionary Society in the Mountain region." Rev. Thomas A. Dorion assisted at the communion with the pastor of the church at Charlton.

The Social Science Club has arranged for a course of lectures to be held in the Town Hall reception room with speakers, subjects and dates as follows: "The Outside of Shakespeare," by Prof. H. Humphrey Neill of Amherst, Friday, February 17; "Air and Ventilation," by Prof. John T. Stoddard of Smith College, Saturday, March 3; "On the Study of History," by Prof. Anson D. Morse of Amherst College, Saturday, March 24; "Robert Browning and His Poetry," by Rev. C. W. Duffield, Saturday, April 14. None but members of the club are to be admitted. It seems a pity that larger audiences should not be allowed to enjoy these literary treats.

J. H. Fletcher, E. W. Cummings and Francis Fisherdick of the Ware Center Farmers' Club, attended the farmers' institute which was held in Palmer Tuesday. The regular meeting of the Ware Center club is to be at their rooms next Monday evening. The question to be brought before those present is: "What is the best crop for the farmers to raise?" Ladies are invited to be present, and a paper is to be read by one of them. At this meeting the subject of holding a farmers' institute at Ware Center some time in the near future is to be discussed, and a committee appointed to make further arrangements. It is expected that Ethan Brooks of West Springfield will be engaged to speak at that time. All of these meeting are enjoyed in a social way, and no doubt all will gain new ideas that are of benefit to them.

LEGISLATIVE DOINGS.

From our Special Correspondent.

BOSTON, FEB. 15, 1888.

Mr. Raymond of Hinsdale, for the committee on banks and banking, reported the following bill last week, and it is making its passage of the Legislature without opposition, having already passed the House:

SECTION 1. George A. Birnie, James W. Hannum, Marquis D. L. Towne, James Henderson, F. W. Sturgis, John E. Stevens and Charles W. Hubbard, their associates and successors, are hereby made a corporation by the name of the Ludlow Savings Bank, to be located in the town of Ludlow, with all the powers and privileges, and subject to all the duties, liabilities and restrictions set forth in all general laws which now are or may hereafter be in force relating to savings banks and institutions for savings.

SECT. 2 This act shall take effect upon its passage.

On Thursday the Senate reached a vote on the amendment to limit the session to four months, and it was rejected by 14 to 16 and three pairs. The chief speakers were Senator Crosby of Berkshire against it, and Senator Hartwell of Worcester in its favor. The former urged that it would lead to bad legislation, in haste to get the business all through in four months, and the latter believed it could all be done in that time if the people knew what to expect. A motion to reconsider is pending.

The House had on Thursday its last fight over the consolidation of the Providence and Old Colony railroads. By 24 to 138 it rejected Mr. Quincy's order to refer the matter to the railroad commissioners, and finally, by 120 to 31, it passed the bill to be engrossed.

One of the reports from the liquor law committee on Thursday, Senator Gleason of Plymouth and Representatives Manning of Worcester and Haynes of Sturbridge dissenting, was a bill providing that no member of the Citizen's Law and Order League shall be competent to sit as a juror in the trial of cases for the violation of any part of the liquor law. This was sharply debated to-day and defeated by a large vote.

Nearly every year, I presume every year, since the retrenchment of 1879, when salaries were so much cut down in consequence of the hard times, some of them have been put up again, and it has come to be a regular thing to receive petitions for an increase in salary. Since the passage of the civil service reform law in 1884 there has been a committee on "public service," to which these petitions have been referred. On Friday that committee reported favorably on three of these petitions. They put the salary of the Franklin county commissioners (three of them) up from $1100 to $1600 a year; the salary of the Essex county judge of probate from $3000 to $3500, and of the Middlesex county sheriff from $2000 to $2500. Lately there has come to be little objection to these bills, if the committee once reports in favor of them.

On Friday the liquor committee reported unanimously a bill to prevent any person engaged in the liquor business from sitting on a jury in liquor trials. This afternoon the bill was in the calendar, and after a long debate the vote on ordering it to a third reading was 66 yeas to 60 nays.

The House listened on Friday to eulogies on the character of the late Representative Clarke of Northbridge, and then adjourned out of respect to his memory without any debate, but after the first call of the calendar.

The constitution of the commonwealth would seem to be sadly in need of repairs, judging by the proposals to remedy it which have been put forward at this session, yet it promises to be changed but little, because the Legislative carpenters cannot agree as to the details of their mending. The prohibitory amendment has got through, but it promises to be the only one. The amendment to limit the session to four months, though a reconsideration of its rejection is pending in the Senate, has but little vitality. The proposed appointment (instead of election) of the attorney general and a long list of the court officers of the state, has been the subject of an adverse report, and that report has been accepted without any opposition, even by the gentleman who drew the order.

On Tuesday the Senate postponed for one week the resolve for biennial elections, so that Senator Hartwell of Worcester might introduce an amendment to Senator Sprague's resolve so as to make half the Legislature elected on the alternate years.

On Tuesday also the House had its debate on the amendment to abolish the poll tax as a voting qualification. Before beginning they voted (at 2.45) to close the debate at half-past four and to limit the speeches to ten minutes. For the appointed time they made the hall ring with their arguments, every one of them as old as the hills, and then the vote was taken by roll call, as provided by the constitution. It takes a two-thirds' vote to pass it and the result was 104 yeas to 103 nays, with 7 pairs, or very far from two-thirds. Of the yeas 48 were Republicans, with one independent Republican and one Independent. Only one of the nays was a Democrat. Mr. Grosvenor of Ludlow is on record against the resolve.

The woman suffrage committee is five to four against allowing women to vote on the issue of liquor licenses. But one of the five goes with the same four to make a majority of the committee stand in favor of municipal suffrage to women.

The House voted on Monday, 95 to 85, in favor of the bill of Mr. McCoveney of Blackstone to abolish all fines for imperfect weaving.

The Boston and Maine Railroad presented a bill to the railroad committee on Tuesday to allow it to buy the Eastern road outright, with its subordinate lines in New Hampshire.

Wednesday was an important day in each branch. The House sat till nearly half-past five, and showed that it is disposed to push matters as fast as possible. Among the bills reported was one to raise the salary of the chief justice of the supreme court from $6500 to $7500, of the other supreme court justices from $6000 a year to $7000, of the chief justice of the superior court from $5300 to $6500, and of the other justices of the superior court from $5000 $6000.

The committee on towns, Messrs. Champlin and Coveney dissenting, reported in the Senate Wednesday a bill to divide Beverly and to incorporate Beverly Farms. It is substantially last year's bill.

The Senate had a long debate Wednesday on the bill for the lease of the Providence railroad to the Old Colony, and it was passed to be engrossed without a change or division.

The labor committee reported the bill of the special committee on the employment of children, except that the prohibition of work in factories and mercantile establishments is raised to include all under 13 years, and children under 14 are to labor only between 6 and 7, instead of 5 and 9, as proposed. LANDON.

She stood at the gate in the late spring twilight, and when she said good-bye she felt neuralgia kiss her rosy cheek; but she only smiled, for her mother had invested 25 cents in a bottle of Salvation Oil.

Pond's Extract used forty years by physicians and the people for pain and inflammations. This success crowns every bottle of the genuine.

Experience proves that nothing else so surely destroys scrofula as Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

For the removal of dandruff, and for curing humors of the scalp, there is nothing better than Ayer's Hair Vigor.

After using Ely's Cream Balm two months, I was surprised and delighted to find that the right nostril, which was closed up entirely for over twenty years, was open and free as the other, and can use it now as I could not do for many years. I feel very thankful. R. H. Cressengham, 275 18th street, Brooklyn.

My daughter and myself, great sufferers from catarrh, were cured by Ely's Cream Balm. My sense of smell is restored.—C. M. Stanley, Shoe Dealer, Ithaca, N. Y.

Women's $1.00 house slippers, now 49 cts. Women's kid opera slipper, now 50 cts. Women's Dongola Button selling for $1.90, former price $3.00, Women's Rubbers all you want for 25 cts. Women's Woonsocket Pure Gum boots, best goods, for $2.98, and more bargains than you can "shake a stick at" are now seen in the great annual sale of shop worn shoes at Broadhurst Bros. (Morse's Shoe Store) Springfield.

NO WOMAN

is beautiful with a bad skin, covered with pimples, freckles, moth or tan. I have been asked many times what will remove these unsightly blemishes. No face paints or powders will remove them, as they are caused by impure blood. The only sure remedy I have ever seen is Sulphur Bitters, and in hundreds of cases I have never known them to fail.—Editress Fashion Gazette. 2w47

The Eleventh Annual Exhibition of valuable paintings will close this month at Gill's Art Galleries Springfield, and should be seen by ever lover of art in Massachusetts. Take time and go; it is worth the small admission to see any one of several of them. 2w47

BE YOUR OWN DOCTOR.

It won't cost you one half as much. Do not delay. Send 3 2-cent stamps for postage, and we will send you Dr. Kaufmann's great work, fine colored plates, from life, on disease, its causes and home cure. Address A. P. Ordway & Co , Boston, Mass. 2w47

A TREAT FOR STORY READERS.

If your readers will get the BOSTON DAILY GLOBE on Monday, February 20, they will find in it the beginning of the last two stories written by Sylvanus Cobb, Jr., just before his death. Mr. Cobb wrote for the Ledger for 30 years. This is one of the most exciting and interesting stories he ever wrote. The Globe not only gives all the news, but splendid stories for the ladies and young people.

Thousands of children who die annually of those diseases incident to early childhood, could have been saved by Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup.

The painful consequences of imprudence in eating is speedily removed and the depression is quickly banished by the use of Laxador.

A Certainty.

Steele's Little Bile Pills are without an equal for stimulating the liver to healthy action, and creating a proper secretion of bile, thus removing from the system the germs of malaria, curing constipation, indigestion, and inducing a healthy circulation of the blood, without which no one can enjoy sound health. They are small, but effective; free from nauseating propensities and griping pains, and do not interfere in their action with the ordinary routine of daily life. Heavily sugar coated. To be had of LeGro & Lynde, for 25 cents per bottle. 1y8eow

Advice to Mothers.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle. 1y23

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child she cried for Castoria,
When she was a Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Some Things Learned by Experience,

That a tablespoonful of salt thrown on a coal fire that is low, will cause it to burn up quickly. That you can clean oil cloth with milk and water; while soap and brush will ruin it. That the skin of a boiled egg is the best remedy you can apply to a boil. That you can't cure Rheumatism or Neuralgia without taking Menard's Rheumatic Bullets. That you can buy them of LeGro & Lynde for $1.00 per bottle. cow7

ELECTRIC BITTERS.

This remedy is becoming so well known and so popular as to need no special mention. All who have used Electric Bitters sing the same song of praise.—A purer medicine does not exist and it is guaranteed to do all that is claimed. Electric Bitters will cure all diseases of the Liver and Kidneys, will remove pimples, boils, salt rheum and other affections of impure blood.—Will drive Malaria from the system, prevent as well as cure all Malaria fevers.—For cure of headache, constipation and indigestion try Electric Bitters.—Entire satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.—Price 50 cts. and $1.00 per bottle at Legro & Lynde's drug store. 5

IS CONSUMPTION INCURABLE?

Read the following: Mr. C. H. Morris, Newark, Ark., says: "Was down with Abscess of Lungs, and friends and physicians pronounced me an Incurable Consumptive. Began taking Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, am now on my third bottle, and able to oversee the work on my farm. It is the finest medicine ever made."

Jessie Middlewart, Decatur, Ohio, says: "Had it not been for Dr. King's New Dscovery for Consumption I would have died of Lung Troubles Was given up by doctors. Am now in best of health." Try it. Sample bottles free at LeGro & Lynde's Drug Store. 5

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.

THE BEST SALVE in the world for Cuts, Bruises, Sores, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Corns, and all Skin Eruptions, and positively cures Piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For Sale by Legro & Lynde. 1y29

8 PER CENT. FIRST MORTGAGES IN KANSAS.

During the next 90 days we shall give our customers 8% on any money they may send us for investments we have for sale. We have on hand First Mortgages and applications for money on first mortgage loans, mostly upon 160 acre farms, amounts ranging from $250 to $500. We have also mortgages in amounts $1000 to $20,000 at 7% which we offer. How much money can you furnish us for these loans? They are A1 security. The stringency in the money market enables us to cut down amounts applied for in each case to an amount that is safe beyond a doubt. Now is the time to get a nice line of small gilt-edge loans. Write for our new Investor's Guide. Remit with advice to JOHN D. KNOX & CO., Investment Bankers and Loan Agents, Topeka, Kas. Boston Office: Room 24, No. 36 Bromfield street. 4w46

She "Displains" It.

"Had, too!"
"Hadn't, neither!"
So contended Bess and May,—
Neighbor children who were boasting
Of their grandmammas, one day.

"Had, too!"
"Hadn't, neither!"
All the difference begun
By May's saying she'd two grandmas,
While poor Bess had only one.

"Had, too!"
"Hadn't, neither!"
Tossing curls, and kinks of friz,
"How could you have two grandmothers
When just one is all they is?"

"Had, too!"
"Hadn't neither!"
"Cause ef you had two," said Bess,
"You'd displain it!" Then May answered:
"My grandmas were twins, I guess!"

AMONG THE PARAGRAPHERS.

"Dressed to kill"—that young woman over there with a low-neck dress on, standing in the draft.—Washington Critic.

"The Angel Dolly" is the name of a ship at San Francisco. The captain probably named the vessel after some sweet creature he isn't married to yet.—Omaha World.

Patron—"Give me a piece of pie and a glass of milk."

"A sea-green glass vase, nine inches high supposed to be 1300 years old, has been found in Bologna." That settles it. We shall eat no more Bologna.—Norristown Herald.

A Nashville, Tenn., editor made a prayer a few days since. The prayer he made was "Oh! Lord!" Incidentally it might be added that the editor had just been filled with shot.—Oil City Blizzard.

A hole in the ground and a smell of gas sold for $8000 in Ohio the other day. The hole was found to be all right, but the smell of gas disappeared with the owner of the land.—Detroit Free Press.

A "colored person" called on a Scranton lady up town the other day and propounded the following query: "Am you de woman what wants de colored lady to wash for you?" The colored "lady" got the job.—Scranton Truth.

Husband (groaning)—"The rheumatism in my leg is coming on again."

Wife (with sympathy)—"Oh, I am so sorry, John. I wanted to do some shopping to-day, and that is a sure sign of rain."—The Epoch.

Home influences appeared in the answer of a child whose father was a strong teetotaler, to the query, "Do you know the meaning of syntax?" "Yes," was the ready reply; "syntax is the dooty on spirits."—Chambers' Journal.

Jones attended a wedding the other day, where the groom was an infantry officer. "One of the best branches of the service," he remarked, as he congratulated the bride; "deaths are so frequent that advancements are certain and rapid."—Judge.

The verdict returned by a western coroner's jury in the case of a man who hanged himself by his suspenders to the bedpost is said to have been: "The deceased came to his death by coming home drunk and mistaking himself for his pants."—Stray.

New congressman at dinner:

Waiter (who has seen new congressmen before)—"Skuse me, boss, but 'taint good fawm to eat yo' pie wid yo' knife."

New congressman—"Well, why in thunder didn't you bring me a spoon?"—Washington Critic.

"Johnny," said the careworn editor to his only son, "I know you want to help your poor old father and give him an item, but I would rather you would stay away from the pond until the ice gets thicker. You may come handy to feed the press."—Merchant Traveler.

Laura—"So you are really engaged to him, dear? He is forty, you say, and you are twenty—just twice as old you, love. Dear me, when you are forty he will be eighty."

Clara—"Good gracious! I hadn't thought of that."—Harper's Bazar.

Johnny, aged four, witnessed a military drill on Boston Common. One of the officers rode a horse that was very unruly, and in some of his antics nearly threw his rider, whereupon Johnny exclaimed, excitedly: "Mamma, mamma, Mr. Fissell's horse don't fit him."—Youth's Companion.

"Where is the island of Cuba situated?" asked an Austin school teacher of a small, rather forlorn looking boy.

"I dunno, sir."

"Don't you know where sugar comes from?"

"Yes, sir; we borrows it from the next door neighbor."—Texas Siftings.

Dry Goods Clerk (to fellow clerk)—"Timmy, you remember that I told you of a desperate flirtation I had with a beautiful girl at Saratoga when I was on my vacation?" Timmy—"Yes, chappie." Dry Goods Clerk—"She was in to-day and bought some dress goods." Timmy—"What did she say?" Dry Goods Clerk—"She asked me if the goods would wash; that's all."—Puck.

Pretty school teacher—"James, is 'to kiss' an active or passive verb?"

James (oldest boy in the class)—"Both."

Pretty school teacher—"How is that, James?"

James—"Active on the part of the feller and passive on the part of the girl."

Pretty school teacher blushes and marks James "perfect" in grammar.—New York Sun.

"You needn't order me around, sir," said the washerwoman. "I'm not the hired girl. It's Bridget's place to look after the milk. I'm the laundry lady."

"That doesn't scare me," said the man. "I'm the milk gentleman, and I'm the P. W. G. R. K. of the U. O. G. G., and Most Eminent Past G. W. of the Ancient Order of M. X. Q. Z., and I want somebody to take this milk."

"Yes, sir," said the washerwoman, meekly, as she went to find a crock.—Chicago Tribune.

Make No Mistake.

If you have made up you mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion and preparation curative power superior to any other article of the kind before the people. Be sure to get Hood's.

"In one store the clerk tried to induce me to buy their own instead of Hood's Sarsaparilla. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was, I had taken it, was perfectly satisfied with it, and did not want any other."—Mrs. Ella A. Goff, 61 Terrace street, Boston, Mass.

"My wife suffered from sick headache and neuralgia. After taking Hood's Sarsaparilla she was much relieved."—W. R. Babb, Wilmington, Ohio.

SAVED HIS LEG!

Scrofula of the Bone Cured.

LITHONIA, GA., August 11, 1887.

THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Atlanta, Ga.:

Gentlemen—I have been afflicted with ulceration of the legs ever since I was a child, the disease undoubtedly being hereditary, as my mother suffered from scrofulous symptoms. As I advanced to manhood my affliction increased until the malady became harrassing and painful beyond the power of words to describe. My right leg became particularly involved, the left leg being less painfully affected. Finally, about fourteen years ago, the ulcers on my right leg had eaten through the flesh into the bone. In order to save my life the doctors determined to amputate the leg below the knee. The operation was successfully performed by Dr. H. V. M. Miller of Atlanta, and Dr. W. P. Bond of Lithonia. The loss of my leg gave me only temporary relief. The poison was still in my system and soon began to show itself again. In a short time after large ulcers appeared on my left leg, covering it from the knee to the instep. Frequently while at work I could be tracked by the blood which oozed from the huge ulcers, and the sores and rottening holes were so offensive that my fellow-workmen could not stand the stench and would move away from me.

Last winter I was persuaded to try S. S. S. As a last resort I consented to do so, and about seven months ago I began taking the Specific. I soon began to feel the good effects of the medicine, the offensive running began to grow less and less and finally ceased, the ulcers healed, my flesh became firm and solid, and to-day, after using twenty-one bottles, I am as hale and stout a man of my age as there is in Georgia. I am seventy-one years of age, but feel now younger and stronger than I did when I was twenty-five. I weigh about 150 pounds. Nothing is to be seen of the terrible disease, or to remind me of the torture I suffered for so many years, except the scars of the perfectly healed ulcers.

I want the world to know of the almost miraculous cure effected on me by S. S. S., and I call upon those who wish to know the particulars directly from me to write, and I will consider it a pleasure as well a duty to answer their letters. I refer to Dr. W. P. Bond, of Lithonia, as to the truth of my statement.

Very gratefully yours,

B. DRAKE.

Homesick.

Written for J. M. B.

Oh! for some mighty power to break the spell
Of silence, laid upon this "treeless waste,"—
The engine's whistle, or the factory bell,
The street-car's rumble, any thing to tell
That I'm not left alone, alone to taste
The "sweets of solitude,"—like Crusoe, I
To dread alarms from hence would gladly fly.

Dear, blest, New England, o'er thy tree-clad hills
How oft once more at will to roam,
To hear the murmur of thy dashing rills,
To list the wild bird's melody, that trills
Through the green shades around my girlhood's home;
To gaze upon thy mountains, wild, and free,—
This "boundless prairie" has no charms for me.

Nightly, in dreams, I stray o'er hill and dell
With friends whose faces I shall see no more,
I hear, with joy no heart but mine can tell
That long-lost music, "the church-going bell,"
And live, in fancy, all my bright days o'er,— Sweet dreams! I wake to cry with homesick pain
"Oh! give me back my dear old home again."

Fair Western land, thy beauties all, I own,
The rolling prairie, wond'rous fruitful plain,—
And yet, as day by day I sit alone,
My homesick heart will make its constant moan
For loved New England, while I try in vain
To feel content, or check the tears that swell
At thought of my lost home, the home I loved so well.

JOSEPH'S ADVENTURE.

"Can't you tell some of your adventures?" I asked of my friend Joseph, who had returned from his many years' travels in the bush, and was sitting with me and my wife. And, though he had been absent so long, he was, so to speak, a young man yet.

"Adventures?" Well, I have met with plenty. Rough ones, some of them."

"Please tell us of one," chimed in Mary. Joseph laughed. "I can tell you of a queer one that I met with in the mountains."

"Oh, yes, do! Which mountains?"

"In California; up in one of its wild districts."

"That will be the very thing."

"Well," said Joseph, running his tapering fingers through his hair and smiling at my wife. "I'll soften down things in telling as well as my blunt speech and uncivilized modes of thought will admit of, and you must excuse the rest."

"Oh, I'll excuse anything. Please begin."

"When I started from home to settle in unfrequented districts," began Joseph, "I set up a theory that no man should ask a woman to marry him until he has prepared a home for her. It is surprising how much you begin to think of a wife out in the West which arises, I suppose, from the extreme of loneliness of one's existance. I was no exception. The land I took up was in the Rogue river valley, and after I had got it a bit ship-shape I worked away with only one object in view—to bring home a wife."

"But, Joseph, had you a selected a wife?" I asked.

"No. I intended to do that as soon as I could, though you may say I was rather young to be thinking of it. I worked on, and was pretty successful. I built me a house, got a considerable stock of cattle, made a flower-garden for my wife, and even put up the pegs and nails she would want to hang her dresses on. I intended that same autumn to mount my horse, ride throug the Wallamet valley, find my wife and bring her home."

At the notion of courting in that off-hand style we laughed a little. Joseph laughed too, as if the recollection pleased him.

"You think it strange, I see. It was not so very strange in those days out there, where girls were as scarce as angels. There was not a girl within forty miles of me; and as I assure you that the very thought of one, as I drove in those nails for her garments to hang on, went through me like a thrill. You don't believe? Go West yourself and try it."

"But I do believe."

"I had about two hundred and fifty head of cattle, a good house with a garden, a young orchard, vegetables growing, sweet-scented flowers—all in readiness for the wife I hoped to bring home to bless me and take care of these my possessions. And what do you think happened to them?"

We could not tell.

"There came such a plague of grass-hoppers upon the valley that everything perished. Crops, orchard, flowers, grass—every green and delightful and promising thing; the grass-hoppers destroyed all. You remember the second chapter of Joel?"

I nodded.

"'The land is as the garden of Eden before them, and behind them a desolate wilderness.' I was ruined. My stock died—at least the greater portion of it; the cattle had nothing to feed upon. Yes, it was complete and absolute ruin."

Joseph paused a moment, mentally looking at the past.

"I considered myself disappointed in love too," he resumed in the quaintest of tones. "Though I had not been out to find my girl, I knew she was somewhere in that other valley waiting for me; and when the greedy grasshoppers ate up everything I felt that I had been jilted. It actually gives me a pang now to think of those useless pegs on which my imagination had so often seen a girl's pink cotton dress and white sun-bonnet."

Joseph gave a great sigh. He was an eccentric fellow.

"I became misanthropic—said to myself that between fate and the grasshoppers I had been hardly used. Packing up my books and a few other traps I bade adieu to the Rogue river valley for ever and started for the mountains. It was a longish journey, as I had to drive before me the stock which was left me. There in the mountains I settled down again, built myself a fort and played hermit. No jilting girls should come near me now."

"A fort?"

"A regular fort; a stockade eighteen feet high, with an embankment four feet high around it and a strong gate in the middle. My tent was in the midst of the inclosure, with my books and household goods, firearms and all the rest of my property stowed away in it."

"Were you afraid of Indians?"

"Indians and white men. Yes, I saw a good many Indians, at first, within the range of my rifle. They learned to keep away from my fort, finding it did not pay to attempt an invasion. Down in the valley below there were mining camps; and you perhaps know what some of the hangers-on of such camps are. I sold beef, that is, heads of cattle, to the miners; and as I had sometimes a tidy sum of money by me, it was necessary to be careful."

"What a strange life for a young man?" said Mary. "For you, Joseph!"

"I herded my cattle, drove them to market, cooked, studied, wrote and indulged in a mixture of misanthrophy and rifle practice. By the time I had entered on the second summer in the mountains I felt quite at home and was getting rich. After all, the life had its charms. A man cannot quite tire of it when he is but a few years out of his teens."

"And the girl wife."

"I am coming to her. Having had time to forget my ill-usage, a reaction set in, you see, and I thought, after all, I must ride to the Wallamet to see after my girl. But I was not in the hurry that I had been before. This is all very dull, you will say, but there'll be some stir presently."

"It is not at all dull."

"One Sunday afternoon (how did I know it was Sunday? you ask. Because I kept account of the days all along; kept my diary regularly) — One Sunday afternoon I was sitting outside writing, when a shadow fell across the paper, and, looking up, I beheld a skeleton standing there before me. Accustomed as I was to lonely encounters with strange men of all kinds, my hair stood on ends as I stared at the specter. He was the merest boy in years, pretty and delicate by nature, and evidently reduced to this shadowy state by starvation. His story was soon told. He had left Boston on board a vessel bound for the northwest coast, had been wrecked at the mouth of the Umpaqua, and been wandering about in the mountains ever since, subsisting on roots and berries."

"He was"—

"No, I assure you," interrupted Joseph, with an amused look at my wife, "the boy was not a young woman in disguise, if that's what you are thinking. He was just a poor, weak, half-starved lad named Edwards. I fed and nursed him until I got Sam Chong Sung to let him take up a claim alongside a Chinese camp, promising to favor the Chinaman in a beef contract if he would be good to the boy. I still continued to see a great deal of the boy."

"And did Edward succeed?"

"Yes; he got on. One day two Chinamen stole some of Sam Chong Sung's horses, and he offered four hundred dollars to Edwards if he would go after the thieves and track them. Edward asked my advice, and I encouraged him to go, telling him where I fancied he would find the men. So he started in pursuit, and I confess I missed him."

Again Joseph paused. We did not interrupt him.

"A man came to my fort one day who was naked and starving. He was a bad-looking fellow, very; but you will say a man naturally does look bad when his clothes are nowhere and his bones protrude through his skin. I clothed him, fed him, cared for him until he was able to travel, and then he went away. The next Sunday I was sitting outside my fort, as was customary on that leisure day, reading some translations from the Greek poets — for I dare say you remember I was never much of a hand at the original — when, chancing to look off my book, I beheld a vision."

"A what?"

"A vision. A vision of a lovely woman. She was riding up the approach to my fort on a fine horse, riding gracefully and slowly, as if to give me time to get over my surprise; and I believe I needed it. The picture she made is in my mind now; I see the very flicker of the shadow and sunlight across the road, and the glitter of some steel that fastened her horse's trappings as he arched his neck in impatience of her restraining hand. Are you tired, old friend?"

"Never less so in my life."

"That vision, breaking in suddenly as it did, upon my solitude, gave me the queerest sensations. I was just spell-bound. Not so she. Reining in her horse at my gate, she squared round on her saddle and looked at me, silently asking my assistance to dismount. I helped her down — what else could I do?— and then, at her request, gently proffered, went to put up and feed her horse. Had she dropped from the clouds? I did not know."

"Well?"

"If you believe me, when I turned indoors, my guest had got her habit off. Evidently she meant to make herself at home. A tall, young, beautiful, well-dressed woman! Her eyes were large, black and melting; her hair was superb, her manner easy. She was hungry, she said; would I give her something to eat? And while I was making preparations to give her of my best she read aloud one of the Greek translations, an ode to Diana, commenting upon it herself. That she was a woman of culture and education, whatever might have brought her into her present strange position, was obvious. Well, now," continued Joseph, "you can guess whether a young man, isolated on the mountains, ruined by the grasshoppers and jilted by the girl of the Wallamet valley, was bewildered or not. Entertaining goddesses was not in my line."

"How long did she stay?"

"Wait a bit. What with reading and eating our acqaintance improved fast. She offered to sing a song, and gave me 'Kate Kearney.' I might have lost my head to her perhaps, to say nothing my heart, but for a certain inward latent doubt. I did not care that my girl should ride about, elegantly attired, on prancing horses, and drop down unexpectedly on hermits. Still, it was a pleasant feeling to find one's self near her, and certainly a novel one. I asked her history and she told it to me. She was of a good New England family, reared in affluence, well educated and accomplished, but by a freak of fortune had become reduced to poverty and exiled from some."

"What is it, Joseph?"

"Ah! what indeed? The old story, I suppose; but I did not ask her. She had made her way to California, resolved to get on and get money; and she had got it. She went about from camp to camp with stationery and various articles needed by the miners and others, sold them these things, wrote letters for them, sang to them, nursed them when sick, and carried their letters express to San Francisco to be posted. For all these services she received large payments, and she had also a good deal of rough gold given to her as specimens. Did she like that kind of life? I asked her, so contrary to her early habits, and she answered me quickly: 'It is not what we choose that we do in this world, but what fate chooses for us. I have made a competency and gained a rich and varied experience. Life is not what I once pictured it would be, but I am content.' She sighed as she said it; and I didn't believe in the 'content.'"

"But what had brought her to you that day?"

"She had not told me herself then, but presently I asked her. I shall never forget the smile with which she turned to answer. It pretty nigh disarmed me. We were sitting pretty close, too; her flowing silk gown touched my knees. Altogether, I began to think of those useless pegs in the house down in Rogue valley. But what she said pulled up my wandering thoughts and turned them to present things. 'Shall you be surprised to hear that I came to do you a real service?' she asked. And she went on to relate that, having had to pass the previous night at a place not many miles away, in a house where the partitions were thin, she had chanced to overhear a plan for murdering and robbing me, the villain-in-chief of the plot being the straved and naked wretch whom I had sheltered and sent away rejoicing not many days previously. All in a moment, while I was pondering on the doubtful problem of gratitude, a fancy came over me that she might not be telling the truth; that it might be just an excuse got up to justify her own visit; and I playfully hinted as much. 'A woman does not trifle with subjects like these, nor does she deceive when she goes out of her way to do a service," she answered. 'I rode off from that house the other way this morning, made a long detour, and came here to warn you. And now that I have done it, if you will please to get my horse, I will ride away again.' All fair, that. I, full of thanks and repentance, asked her to stay longer if she was not perfectly rested; but she declined, and I brought the steed round and helped her to mount him. Once in the saddle her humor changed; she smiled and reminded me that I had not been polite enough to invite her to return. A week of reading, talking, riding, trout-fishing and romancing up in those splendid mountains would be very charming; perhaps she would come if I asked her."

"And did you ask her?"

"I did not. A young man with a reputation to sustain up there in the mountains couldn't invite a young lady to stay a week with him; could he now?" cried Joseph, quaintly: which set us both laughing.

"So I parried the question as easily as I could, and she rode away. In going slowly down the trail she turned and kissed her hand to me with a gracious sweetness. I assure you the struggle within my own mind was great at that moment; and I don t know whether I have forgiven myself even yet for what happened afterward."

"What did happen?"

"She came back again. She came back again and I drove her away. That is, I made the best excuse I could for not re-admitting her, saying we should perhaps have fighting and murder and what not in my fort that night, and it would be no place for a delicately-bred woman. The pretty and modest girl who was to come from the Wallamet valley and hang up her pink garments on my pegs had rushed into my mind, you see. But I never liked to confess to this part of the story, because I get laughed at. But don't you think I did right, having my reputation to keep up?"

While we had our laugh out Joseph was pushing his soft, fine hair off his brow with those slender fingers that looked as if no rough work had ever come near him; and what must they have been before it did come?

He went on thoughtfully; "She finally rode away, not having been invited to get off her horse; leaving me in anything but a pleasant frame of mind. From telling myself I was a bear I turned to the other subject, the contemplated murder and robbery of myself. Had she simply invented that little fable? or was it a true bill? I felt inclined to believe it to be the latter. Anyway, I deemed it well to be prepared for all contingencies, barring and bolting my fort against intruders and sitting up late over the fire. This was Sunday night. On Tuesday morning three or four men rode up, one of whom was the traitor my former naked and hungry protege. He no longer attempted to conceal his true character from me, but said he and his comrades were determined to 'clean out' the Chinese camp, and he asked me join them in the raid. I was on my guard in answering him, simply saying that I would have nothing to do with robbing the Chinese, that they were my friends and customers, and I thought they had best be let alone. With that he went off. That same afternoon Edwards came in, having recaptured some of the horses. He was very tired, and asked leave to stay with the horses at my place till next day. I said nothing to Edwards of the gang just gone away, or that (as I suspected) they had talked of making a raid on the Chinese only to throw me off my guard; for it was my fort on which the attack was undoubtedly to be made.

"Dusk came on. I sent Edwards, dead tired, to bed, made a great fire in the tent and sat by it, facing the window. My expected visitor came, the villain! He made believe to have been drinking, and put that forward as a plea for asking sheltor until the morning. The instant he was inside I made the gate fast, driving the big wooden pins home with an axe. I caught a gleam from his eyes as I was doing this which"—

"But why not have made the gate fast before he entered?"

"Because he was safer inside than out. A conviction had come over me that this man was some most desperate character. His comrades were no doubt waiting near, and his plan had deen quietly to open the gate to them."

"Had you no arms but your rifle?"

"I wanted none; for we understood each other, my rifle and I. This villain understood us too. I don't think, either, that he liked to see Edwards sleeping in the tent. The lad was not good for much, but still he was somebody. It would now be a contest of skill between the fellow and me. He was waiting his opportunity, and so was I. Of all villainous-looking men he was the worst looking. Tall, swarthy, black-bearded, and with a hard face that must have been handsome once, and fierce black eyes gleaming with evil. He sat on one side of the hearth, I sat on the other, our eyes fixed on one another.

"You guess, I dare say, that I have a quick ear, for you know what my temperament is — all sensitive consciousness. My good hearing has been cultivated, too, by listening for the Indians. By-and-by I detected a very stealthy movement outside the fort, and then a faint chirrup, such as a young squirrel might make. Up sprang the man, but I covered him with my rifle, cocked. He saw the movement, showed his teeth, and drew out a pistol, but not before I had ordered him to throw down his arms or die! He hesitated; he saw that in my eye and aspect which made him quail. While I held the rifle leveled and my finger on the trigger, he threw down his arms, pistol and knife, with a dreadful oath. I had the best of him, and he know it, for before he could have put his pistol into form or rushed on me with his knife the ball from my rifle would have been in him. His language was awful — and we are not very nice in that respect, you know, in California — the foam lay on his lips. He demanded to be let out of the house, denouncing me as a murderer and a robber. To all his ravings I had but one answer, to be quiet, to obey me and he should live; disobey me and he should die. He sat there, cowed, on the opposite side of the fire, not daring even to make a doubtful motion. Then I told him what I knew; that I heard who he was and what he intended to do. With that he broke down utterly, or pretended to do so; cried like a child, declaring that now he knew my pluck, and I was the first man ever to get the better of him, he loved me like a brother. All the same, love or no love, he had to sit where he was, and I in front of him with my rifle on my knees. There was a long night before us; he could have no liberty in it, and the restraint was horrible to him. One moment he laughed uneasily, the next cursed, the next cried. It was a strange experience, was it not? To pass away the time I asked him to relate the history of his life. He said he would, but would first of all just shake hands for the respect he bore me. Touching my rifle significantly, I pointed to the stick lying across the hearth-place between us. 'That's your boundry-line, my man,' said I; 'don't go stretching your hand over that.' This sent him into a fit of sullenness."

"What came of it?"

"We must have remained in this position until midnight. Several times I heard slight sounds outside the fort, but, though he too listened, he dared not respond to them; he could do nothing. After a while these sounds ceased; his associates, rightly judging that some thing or other had gone wrong and spoilt the scheme, had no doubt made off, tired of waiting. The fellow's head was bent, his chin wresting on his breast, his shaggy beard spreading over it like a mantle. He suffered martyrdom. By-and-by we got to talking, but I did not relax my vigilence for an instant. Once started on his own history, the subject seemed to have a fascination for him. He had been honestly 'raised,' he said, by good and loving parents in the state Missouri; had passionately loved a young girl in the town where he lived, and his description of her was so pretty and vivid that I declare it brought into my mind that other girl who was waiting for me down in the Wallamet valley. To get the means to marry her he resolved to go to California. He went, was successful, and, full of joyous anticipations, returned to find she had been married to another. The man, the husband, had played them false, told the girl her lover was dead, and married her himself. When he came out of the brain fever which this news gave him, he was invited to an evening party in the town. To this party came his love and her husband; and when he put out his hand to welcome her their eyes met, and both knew then how they had been betrayed. From that hour the man took to evil courses, and his first victim was the false husband. He became a desperate outlaw. Once again he saw his love; he met her in the streets of Sacramento; she was married again; and she turned from him with a cry of aversion. Yes, he might be a desperate man now, he added, but he had had his trials. I suppose I should have done society a benefit had I shot him as he sat there, but I did not. Perhaps you won't believe that I felt a sort of pity for the fellow, but I did. Well, morning came at last. I sent Edwards to get the gates open, and escorting my visitor out, telling him there was not room for him and me in that part of the country, and that he had better quit it for another.

"And did he?"

"I suppose so, for he never attempted to molest me again. He met his fate east of the mountains."

"And what of that pretty Amazon, Joseph? I am sure she was almost as good to you as a guardian angel, coming on horseback to give you warning."

"Was she not? And I had returned it by behaving so unhandsomely to her! But now, I just ask you, would it have been proper to let her come on that week's visit, and I a young man with a reputation?"

"At any rate, you did. But have you ever seen her since?"

"Once; it was in 'Frisco. She was married and staying at the same hotel with me. Her husband was a tall, dashing man, what with you would be called a gentleman, and very wealthy. She had been lucky, you see. I knew her as soon as she came into the dining-room, and in a few minutes I noticed that she recognized me; but she did not take any notice and neither did I. She told me with her eyes that she remembered, but there was an appealing glance in them which I interpreted rightly. After dinner we got into conversation, the three of us, just as strangers will do in a hotel, and I found the husband a very intelligent, well-informed man. In parting I got just a word aside with her. 'I am glad to meet you again, and thus,' I said. 'Hush!' she answered, 'thank you for your reticence. In the past of a life that has been composed of ups and downs there is generally something or other lying on the memory that we don't care to recall or proclaim to the world.'"

"And about the yonng girl in the Wallamet valley?"

"I never found her," replied Joseph, plaintively. "Truth to say, I never started fairly to look for her. Perhaps it's as well."—D. C. Mcdonald.

LETTER FROM CALIFORNIA.

Fruit Raising And Real Estate.

PASADENA, CAL., FEB. 4, 1888.

I visited a fruit farm, or ranch as it is called in this country, a number of miles out, and it was a sight worth looking at. The proprietor has been located here twelve years. He has ten acres of orange trees in bearing, and the trees were so heavily loaded that many were propped up. There are 700 trees in the tract, and the picking will bring the fortunate proprietor about $12 a tree, or $8400. He is also a producer of raisins in large quantities, and has besides lemons, limes, apricots, peaches, etc. The oranges while not as nice as Florida fruit for eating, are very good and most any of the readers of this paper would be glad to get a permit to roam among the trees a second time. Near by is a tract of land, without any water right, containing 100 acres, which was bought for $300 an acre, and the proprietor proposes to set out an olive orchard. Gen. Trumbal. of San Francisco, who was on the train with me coming out, told me that Park & Talford, the grocers of New York, controlled the entire olive oil product of California and, that while he found the California olive oil at Delmonico's in New York he could not procure it in San Francisco, unless he sent to New York after it, and that there was a fortune to be made in raising olives.

Land in the vicinity of the fruit ranch can be bought for from $300 to $500 an acre, with a very liberal water right. Irrigation is necessary to insure the best results, although there are low lands where good crops can be raised without it. I was talking with about the first native Californian I have discovered in this section. He is a large producer of alfalfa. I may have never mentioned that this country has the nicest lot of horses ever gathered together; why it is I cannot say, but such is the fact. They are kept on barley hay and alfalfa. Hay such as the New England man is acquainted with is not seen hereabouts. A raiser of alfalfa is about as independent a citizen as the owner of a fine orange grove. He can cut two tons to the acre, and cuts 6 to 8 crops each year. My informant told me that it takes about 35 days to grow a crop, and it depends on season, but he usally commeces to cut in April and follows it up six or eight times until November or December, but one year he cut every month but February. A man with an orange grove and an alfalfa field is is an independent man in this country today, for oranges are high and alfalfa retails for $18 and $20 a ton in Pasadena.

The fearful blizzards and cyclones in Minnesota, Dakota, Iowa, Nebraska, etc., are sending lots of people to California, and besides there is a big sprinkling of prospectors and tourists from every other state in the union, and speculating and gambling in real estate is an immense business. An assessor told me that upon a certain tract of land that two years ago he made two entries, that last year upon the same tract he had to make 1300 different entries. Town lots are too many in number; acre property is becoming the safest to buy, but is a good deal like putting your money up at a horse race. Pasadena is the daintiest place in this section, and desirable lots are good property. Five acres in one tract a mile and a quarter from the P. O., sold yesterday for $15,000. A person here a month is an old Californian nowadays.

Society Bell—Mother, Mr. DeBrafs has proposed and I have accepted.

Mother—What? Oh, you wicked, ungrateful girl, after all we've done for you. Mr. DeBrass hasn't a cent to bless himself with, and won't have until his father and grand-father die.

"The DeBras I am referring to is the grandfather."

"Oh! Bless you my children."—Omaha World.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, FEBRUARY 24, 1888.

ANOTHER national conference of anti-saloon Republicans is to be held in New York April 18 and 19.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND and wife took a flying trip to Jacksonville, Fla., this week, to attend the sub-tropical exposition.

INAUGURATION day will not be changed from March 4 to April 30, the House having defeated the proposition by a decisive vote.

THE Democratic national committee has selected St. Louis as the place and June 5 as the time for holding the next national convention.

GOV. AMES'S message on convict immigration deserves prompt attention from the Legislature. This country produces all the criminals we need, without having convicts from other lands unloaded upon us.

THE managers of the Bay State Agricultural Society have decided to hold their next annual fair in Springfield, if the citizens will raise a guaranty fund of $7000. They will do this unquestionably, and the farmers of Western Massachusetts will have an opportunity to enjoy a rich treat at their own door.

JOSEF HOFMANN, the wonderful boy pianist, has been withdrawn from the stage, on account of his overworked condition, and will be given a chance to rest and play like other children. Such marvelous genius needs a strong body for its proper development, and this action of the parents will meet with universal approval.

THE full text of the Canadian fisheries treaty has been made public this week, and is received with varying comments. New England fishermen are not satisfied with its terms, and neither are the Canadians, each thinking that their rights have been surrendered. This would indicate that on the whole the treaty is quite impartial in its provisions.

GEN. SHERIDAN talks as he fights, right to the point, and there is no question as to what he means. He has put a quietus upon the talk about his being a presidential candidate by declaring positively that he would not accept a nomination under any circumstances. "I do not want that or any other civil office," says the old soldier, and he is right. Honor and glory are his now, and he does well in declining to enter upon the trials and tribulations of a political career.

THE Prohibitory state committee is out with an address scourging the Republican party right and left for its "utter insincerity and flagrant hypocrisy" on the liquor question. Not a word of condemnation, mind you, for the Democratic party, which is the strong bulwark of the liquor interest, but unstinted abuse for the party from which comes all the restrictive measures which have become laws. It is from the Republican party, if any, that the Prohibitionists must look for accessions, but abuse is not the most winsome of arguments in gaining converts.

A CRUSADE against the liquor dealers at Greenwich, R. I., has been carried on so aggressively, under the lead of Rev. O. H. Sill, pastor of the Baptist church, that numerous threats against him have been made; and an ineffectual attempt was made to blow up his house early last Sunday morning, and when he went to his well for water he found a white powder scattered around, which proved to be arsenic, in sufficient quantity to poison a score of people. These desperate acts illustrate one of the most deplorable results of the liquor traffic, in its deadening and destructive influences upon the moral sensibilities of those who engage in it.

CYCLONES have begun their deadly work thus early in the season, the city of Mount Vernon, Ill., being visited by one last Sunday afternoon which swept through the business section, unroofing everything and destroying many buildings in its course, including two churches. There had been a heavy rain, and then came the destructive wind, without warning. Thirty-seven people were killed, 8 fatally and 100 more or less seriously injured, while 360 buildings were destroyed and 2000 people made homeless. The loss is estimated at $1,000,000. The blizzard-cyclone sections of the West offer very tempting inducement to absence of body.

THE decision of the New York Senate to investigate the working of the trust monopolies in its jurisdiction comes none too soon. If the present tendency to combine various manufacturing interests in gigantic trusts is allowed to go on unchecked and uncontrolled there will be an end to all competition. The working of the system was shown recently at New York, where a cargo of Manila sugar sold for half a cent a pound less than it did before the sugar trust was formed, there being no competition in bids. But in the meantime the wholesale price of granulated sugar had been advanced nearly two cents a pound, showing that the trust is simply a double ended "scoop" for its members, who put prices up or down to suit their own whims.

There has been a general resumption of work in the Shamokin district. Great discrimination, it is alleged, has been made against the strikers, and many of them have lost their old places. Unless these men are reinstated the miners of that region will strike again.

It is estimated that 50,000 head of cattle have been lost this winter in the Navajo country, which lies partly in central New Mexico and Arizona. The snow storms have been of unprecedented severity.

Rev. W. H. Eaton of Westfield has been elected Secretary of the Baptist Convention in place of the late Rev. George W. Bosworth, D. D.

George Henry Corliss, the eminent engineer and steam engine manufacturer, died at Providence Tuesday.

Graff, Bennett & Co., large iron manufacturers of Pittsburg, Pa., have failed for about $1,500,000.

LOCAL NOTICES.

Rev. Mr. Tenney of Stoughton will supply the pulpit at St. Paul's Universalist church Sunday.

A large party from Warren is expected here next Tuesday evening to attend the cantata "Ruth."

It is rumored that some valuable real estate located on Main street in this village is soon to change hands.

Locomotive "Montville" of the New London Northern Railroad has been disabled and sent to the repair shops.

Quite a number of Palmer people received invitations and attended the Elks' ball at Springfield Wednesday.

M. E. Howard of North Brookfield has been engaged to sing tenor at St. Paul's Universalist church for one year.

Nelson Whiton, an employe of W. A. Barnes, has been granted a pension, with back pay, for services in the late war.

Mary Ryan of Thorndike was adjudged insane at the district court Monday, and sent to the Northampton insane asylum.

Rev. H. W. Pope of the Second Congregational church exchanged pulpits last Sunday with Rev. F. S. Hatch of Monson.

A card party was held at the residence of J. S. Holden on North Main street last Friday evening. An enjoyable time was had.

Posters have been put up in town offering inducements to able-bodied men to go into Uncle Sam's service by enlisting in the army.

Several sleighing parties that were booked for entertainment at the Weeks House this week did not come on account of the weather.

The registrars give notice that they will be at the town house next Monday from 2 to 4 p. m., for the purpose of correcting the voters' list.

A delegation from Good Cheer Lodge, Daughters of Rebekah, visited Morning Star lodge of the same order at Springfield Tuesday evening.

Quite a large number of Palmer people attended the bazaar held at Wilbraham Wednesday evening by the Memorial Methodist church.

The next farmers' institute will be held at the Weeks House hall Tuesday, March 13th. The topic for discussion is: "How to Make Farming Pay?"

The Misses Julia and Lillian Allen now have charge of the reading room in the afternoon, while Miss May Robinson is in attendance in the evening.

A portion of the long wooden shed on the south end of Commercial block is soon to be torn down in order to give more light in the harness shop of F. L. Pierce.

Washington's birthday had very slight recognition locally. In the evening some entertainments were held. Nearly all the business places kept open the entire day.

Mr. C. K. Gamwell and wife entertained a card-party at the Converse House parlors Thursday evening in a very unique way. Refreshments were served the invited guests.

J. H. Smith has received a check from the Odd Fellows' Fraternal Accident Association at Westfield for the amount of insurance due him for injuries recently sustained.

Freight No. 27, on the New London Northern Railroad, drawn by locomotive "Palmer," was delayed near Belchertown Monday, caused by the engine breaking down. No other damage resulted.

Chief Engineer Kenerson has received a check of $100 from the Collins Manufacturing Company at North Wilbraham in payment for the services of the firemen and steamer at the recent fire at that place.

Several residents of the village were treated to serenades Tuesday evening by a male quartette, whose excellent singing was in a marked contrast with the usual serenades heard at that hour on Main street.

Many of the local merchants and business men have had a large quantity of freight lying at the Monson depot, on account of the washout, which proved quite inconvenient to some of them in transacting their business.

The Flynt Building and Construction Company has been given the contract to erect a new stone dam for the Dwight company at Chicopee, to take the place of the one washed out Tuesday. The contract price is about $40,000.

The Patterson Club will meet next Wednesday evening at the residence of the Misses Snow on Maple street. The committee appointed at the last meeting has arranged for an excellent entertainment of a musical and literary character.

Henry Holbrook entertained the members of the dancing class at his home on West Main street last Friday evening, quite a number being in attendance. Beside dancing until a late hour the little folk were treated to a fine supper.

The four Democratic clubs of the town held a union meeting at the town house last evening with a large attendance. Committees were appointed from each club to look after campaign work. Other than that nothing of importance was transacted.

The local Democratic Club held a special meeting in Hibernian Hall Tuesday evening, and chose the following delegates to attend a union meeting of all the Democratic clubs, which was held at the town house Thursday evening: A. G. Newton, T. W. Kenefick, M. J. Dillon, James Healey, Thomas Dwyer and H. C. Strong.

The manufacture of confectionery is a novel thing for Palmer, and a large number of persons have visited Lord & Clark's this week to witness the making of the different kinds. Beside doing a retail business they expect to have a large wholesale trade. The confectionery made by them is considered superior to that made in some of the large cities.

Little is heard as yet regarding the forthcoming town meeting. The names of one or two new candidates for selectmen have been mentioned, but nothing is certain as to whether those men will allow their names to be used in connection with that office or not. But there probably will be no dearth of candidates when the time arrives for the election.

The following civil entries were made at the district court last Saturday: J. B. Hyland of Keene, N. H., vs. J. W. Smith of Palmer, for action of contract; Charles L. Gardner for plaintiff, Taft & Kenefick for defendant. A. A. Gage, et al, of Monson, vs. J. M. Rathburn and trustee of Monson, for action of contract; George H. Newton for plaintiffs, no appearance for defendants.

The sacred cantata of "Ruth" will be presented at the Congregational church next Tuesday evening under the direction of Wilbur F. Miller, with a chorus of 50 voices. A large stage will be erected, and the costumes and effects will be something fine. A good deal of time has been spent in rehearsals, and Palmer people are promised a rare treat by home talent. The performance commences at 7.45.

A private dinner party was given by Landlord Weeks to a small number of his friends at the Weeks House Tuesday. The following were among the number present: William Weeks and wife, Lawyer Richards and wife, Henry Robinson and wife, Miss E. Weeks, ex-Representative Levi Robinson, all of Ware, Charles C. Weeks of New York, George C. Jones of San Francisco, Mrs. E. Moore, Miss L. Needham and Mrs. Maj. Morgan of Palmer.

Washington's Birthday was appropriately celebrated at the Congregational church Wednesday evening, when the Christian Endeavor society entertained the societies from North Wilbraham, Brimfield and Bondsville, about 75 visitors being present. George and Martha Washington presided in costume, and there were numerous other costumes of "ye ancient days." A musical and literary entertainment was given, and a supper was served to all.

Officer Crawford received a dispatch from the superintendent of the Lyman school at Westboro Thursday with orders to arrest Charles Colgrove, a youth about 16 years of age, who was placed in that institution some four years ago for larceny of money in Brimfield. The youth was put in the employ of a Westfield farmer, about four weeks ago, and was arrested and placed in custody here for leaving his employ. The lad was taken to Westboro this morning. He is the eldest son of William Colgrove of this place.

Hi Henry's famous minstrels will appear at the Park street rink next Thursday evening in a programme replete with newest novelties. Their roster is a heavy one, embracing artists of established merit, among which are Mr. Phillips, the heavy weight dromio of minstrelly, Messrs. Morton and Coleman, Irish comedians and solo dancers. Mr. Tom Donnely, eccentric comedian and and men. The only Roselle in unriveled personationr of female loveliness. Lorett in graceful delineations, entitled "Silence and Fun." Orke, in feats of juggling, intricate balancing, spring, etc. Prof. Walter Hyde in artistic violin solos. Hi Henry in his distinguished cornet solos. Messrs. Bassett, Maynard, Beufer, Adair and Goewey in beautiful vocal selections. Mess. Hyde, Ross, Umstead, Winget, Barth, Joyce, Maney, Marshall and Mosher in concert orchestral renditions. Seats are on sale at LeGro & Lynde's

Personal.

Miss Effie Shaw is visiting friends at Stamford, Ct.

Mrs. E. W. Plumley of Spencer spent Sunday in town.

Andrew Pinney of Troy, N. Y., has been in town this week.

Dr. J. P. Lynde of Athol was in town Thursday on a visit.

Mrs. A. J. Northrop is enjoying a three-weeks' visit in Boston.

D. H. Brown started last Sunday night on a trip to Nebraska.

E. A. Wall of Pittsburg, Pa., is the guest of Mrs. E. L. Wallace.

Fred Cady of Hampden was the guest of J. G. Tuttle last Sunday.

James Williams and wife of Chatham, N. Y., are visiting in town.

C. K. Gamwell and wife have been visiting at South Hadley Falls this week.

L. B. Fish and wife of South Hadley Falls have been guests of C. E. Fish this week.

Frank Mason of Westboro, formerly one of the local tonsorial artists, has been spending the week in this place.

Electric Light Matters.

The Thomson-Houston Electric Company has rented quarters in the Goddard hat shop which will be used to store the electrical supplies and other material while the incandescent and arc lights are being put in. The company has the foundation nearly in for the plant near the New London Northern Railroad, and work upon the structure will doubtless commence by the latter part of next week. It is estimated that it will take about six weeks to put up the building, and about another week to get the engines, boilers and dynamos set up and in operation. The electricians have been putting in the inside wires this week for the incandescent system. F. L. Pierce, the harness maker, has the honor of having the first wires put into his shop. Wires have also been put into La Salle & Provost's barber-shop, and some of the other business places which have contracted for the light will also have the wires put into their establishments next week. The majority of the business places have decided that it is the best and cheapest, as the price per light is much lower than that charged by any other company in New England. Consequently the light will be greatly used in this village. As regards the light in the other villages of the town, nothing is yet definitely known, but it is thought that the incandescent, if not the arc light, will be used by many.

High Water In The Quaboag.

DAMAGE TO HIGHWAYS, BRIDGES, FACTORIES AND DWELLINGS.

Palmer has never before suffered so severely from floods as it has the past week. The January thaw came on Monday, a few weeks late, but determined to make up for lost time. Rain fell nearly all day, and at night came down in torrents, melting the snow and ice, and rapidly raising the streams and washing the highways. The Quaboag river rose 12 feet in two hours, and owners of dwellings along its banks began to be fearful for their property, and a close watch was kept. The horses in the stable at Marcy's lumber yard were taken out about 11 p. m., when the water reached the floor, the second time ever known. At the woolen mill of J. S. Holden & Co. the water overflowed the dike and flooded the lower floor of the building some seven feet deep. On this floor was the finishing machinery and a lot of finished goods, which were more or less damaged. A total shut-down was necessary, and the loss there is about $2000. At the shoddy mill of J. H. Smith the ice crushed in about 15 feet of the brick wall of the dye house, where the loss is about $500. The foundations of some of the Fay Rubber Company's buildings at Blanchardville were also damaged by ice. A. J. Northrop's wood yard on Commercial street was flooded, and a number of cords of wood started for the Connecticut river, as did also considerable lumber of F. F. Marcy, but a large part of each will be recovered from the meadows when the water goes down. The low fields were covered from four to ten feet deep with water, and on River street several houses were more or less flooded, while pig pens and hen coops were floated away and the occupants drowned. The greatest damage was done by the floating ice, which was about two feet thick and about as solid as rock. The foundation of the Boston & Albany pump house was knocked out, and the building was secured by ropes. A portion of the east abutment of the bridge was also carried away, and some of the stones on the pier in the center of the stream loosened. The bridge of the New London Northern road just south of this station was carried off about 1 o'clock, going some 20 rods down the stream. The bridge, center pier and all at Blanchardville was washed away, and the two bridges near the Clark Fenton place were also carried off. Huge masses of ice, from 18 inches to three feet thick, are piled to a height of 20 feet in some places, while all the meadows are covered. The Monson road at Fay's bridge was covered with about six feet of ice, and the Commercial street way was also overflowed. The telegraph and telephone wires were broken, and the only way of communication between the two towns was by way of Cooley's crossing, about two miles east of this place. The estimated damage to highways, buildings, etc., reaches $20,000.

J. W. Weeks's four-horse team has been employed this week by the New London Northern road in transporting passengers around the wrecked bridge.

It is estimated that between $4000 and $5000 will be required from the town treasury to rebuild the bridges and repair the highways destroyed and damaged by the flood.

Superintendent Spaulding of the New London Northern Railroad was in town Wednesday viewing the wrecked bridge near Holden's mill, and arranging to get through teams over the line as soon as possible.

The water at Holden's mill rose again Wednesday night, owing to the ice jams in the river which dammed back the water, and a force of men were employed yesterday blasting out the cakes with giant powder.

A large gang of men have been engaged in putting in a temporary wooden trestle, to take the place of the wrecked bridge on the New London Northern road, and now have it ready for use. An iron bridge will be built the coming summer.

Work will probably be resumed at the woolen factory of J. S. Holden & Company to-morrow morning. The water is now entirely out of the mill, but considerable damage has been done by it according to Superintendent Fuller, who places the loss at $2000.

Deputy Sheriff Northrop states authoritatively that the water in this village this week was about one foot higher than during the flood of 1869, which the Springfield Republican claims was the highest ever known in this town. Mr. Northrop also states that he can verify the assertion by a high water mark bearing the date of the flood and the height of the water, which was chiseled at that time in the stone foundation in the boiler room of the Goddard hat shop.

The damage done to highways and bridges will make taxes look up a little the coming year, and Monson residents will endeavor to add somewhat thereto by a petition to the county commissioners to compel the town of Palmer to repair the road at Fay's bridge so as to make it passable at times of high water. They think the bridge should be raised about three feet and the road filled in between the bridge and the Tenneyville hill, with culverts enough to carry off the extra water in time of need. They say they would like one road at least kept so they can get communication to Palmer when necesary. It certainly does not speak well for the enterprise of the town to have the three bridges nearest the village—the Fay, Commercial street and wire mill bridges—isolated in every freshet.

WARREN.

Mr. Holly, clerk in Mr. Tarball's store, is home sick with the mumps.

A literary society has been formed the past week by some of the ladies.

The Woman's Temperance Union met with Mrs. Earl Thursday afternoon.

The number of births in town the past year were 136, deaths 64, marriages 47.

F. S. Hitchcock and wife, from Panama, are the guests of Mrs. E. H. Hitchcock.

The Congregational church had a sociable at Alfred Warriner's Tuesday evening.

Mr. Hitchens delivered a lecture on "Salt" Thursday evening for the benefit of the Agassiz society.

Mr. Tourtelette of the pump shop was presented with a gold chain Wednesday afternoon by the men in his employ.

WEST WARREN.

Druggist E. T. Hall is convalescent.

Mrs. Josiah Brooks is seriously ill with rheumatism.

Fred A. Pond of Brookfield is the new man in George Bliss's meat market.

The severe storm Monday made things lively around the mills Monday night. The company had to keep men stationed at the head gates all night to prevent the ice from smashing in the gates and doing damage otherwise. The river rose to such a height as to extinguish the fires in the old boiler. At No. 1 mill tail race there was a sight for a painter. An immense ice jam had been formed and huge cakes lay piled up, some great blocks of ice 12 or 15 feet long and 6 and 8 feet wide being hurled upon the bank as easily as though they were egg-shells. Fortunately no serious damage was done beyond causing the mills to be bothered by black water.

WALES.

The ladies of the Baptist church meet every Wednesday afternoon to prepare for their annual fair.

The roof of the Hegan mill dye house fell in during the rain Monday evening, and a new roof is being put on.

Rev. H. P. Smith has arrived with a two-horse team and hired man, who will draw the wood and logs from his farm, purchased last fall.

Very slight damage were done by the freshet here to dams and bridges. Care was taken to take the flashboards off in season to prevent harm.

Police Officer Barnes searched for Elmer Moulton last Sunday, who is wanted for selling the ardent. He makes his headquarters in Stafford, but comes up occasionally on the sly to visit his friends.

James Freeland, superintendent of the Shaw mill, fell from a chair into which he had stepped to fix something overhead, and dislocated his left shoulder. Dr. Sawtelle set it and he is doing well.

BONDSVILLE.

The mills did not make a holiday of the 22d, but ran as usual.

The regular meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held Thursday with Mrs. F. A. Talmadge.

Wilcox of Ware has kept a stock of dry goods and notions in Caryl's block for the past few weeks, and the great bargains he has advertised have brought him quite a run of trade.

W. Thayer of Thorndike takes the place of P. A. Fitzgerald, who has resigned his position as clerk in the cloth room to accept a more advantageous offer from the Lowell bleachery.

About twenty of the members of the Christian Endeavor society attended the entertainment given by Palmer Christian Endeavors Wednesday evening, and report a very pleasant time.

Sparkling Water Division, S. of T., have bills out for a literary entertainment, consisting of dramas, instrumental and vocal music, etc. A good programme has been prepared and it is hoped they will have a full house.

HAMPDEN.

Last Friday evening the Methodists had an oyster supper and concert which was worthy of a larger patronage than it received.

The creamery association has stored a large quantity of ice of the best quality, and many private ice houses are filled, but sawdust for covering has been so scarce that large quantites have been drawn from Somers, Ct.

The severe rain storm of Monday did considerable damage, leaving several bridges unsafe and taking away a part of the Lacowsic dam. Mr. Wall, who was preparing to start up after his unfortunate failure, has the sympathy of the community in his misfortunes, which have not come singly.

The young people's literary society connected with the Congregational church held a Martha Washington tea party Wednesday evening. General and Lady Washington, a fine looking couple, received the company, while the young ladies dressed in "ye olde time costumes," were lovely as the brides that wore the dresses years ago. It was a very pleasant party, but the society will realize only a small sum, as their expenses were quite heavy.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

Cutler & Co's. elevators were flooded Monday night, and the mill was shut down till Thursday.

Rev. M. S. Dudley and Dea. Reuben Sikes were delegates to the council at the Eastern Avenue church at Springfield Wednesday.

Henry Green and wife have returned from their wedding trip and have already been blessed with two serenades. How many more are to come time alone can tell.

A good sized party of young people were intending to take a sleigh-ride to Palmer to the Christian Endeavor sociable Wednesday evening, but were obliged to give it up, and about a dozen went by train.

The high water washed away part of Ellis & Bro's. dam, which will keep their mill idle for some time. With fire and flood both inside a week, our village is feeling a little chilly, but we expect to come out all right, only give us a little time.

The Collins Manufacturing Company has put a temporary roof over the east end of their burned mill to protect the finishing room. The work of reconstruction will commence at once. The capacity is to be enlarged by the addition of a third fourdrinier machine, and a stock house is to be built separate from the main building.

BRIMFIELD.

Rev. M. L. Richardson of Sturbridge preached at the First Congregational church last Sabbath.

Washington's birthaay was observed at the vestry of the Congregational church Tuesday evening by historical and memorical services, under the direction of the Ladies Benevolent Society. The exercises were declamations and recitations of that period in the costume of "ye olden times," interspersed with patriotic songs. A unique feature of the evening was the song "Origin of Yankee Doodle," by a squad of raw recruits under the charge of the officer of the day, who as they sang, marched around the hall to the music of the fife and drum. The exercises were creditable to the participants and were enjoyed by the audience. After the exercises supper was furnished to all who wished it. At the town hall the Ladids' Union had a C sociable. The exercises wete songs, etc., by G. M. Hitchcock, Mrs. George W. Sherman, Miss Alice Bacon and Miss Mabel Miller. After this came the supper of clam chowder, corn and beans, cucumbers (pickled), corn cakes, coffee and all the other C's, the bill of fare being written on corn husks. All passed off pleasantly, and to the credit of those interested.

WILBRAHAM.

E. H. Brewer has returned from Dalton.

Union society of Club and Philo this evening.

Pieria will hold an open society in Fisk Hall next Friday evening.

The young peoples' dramatic club will give "Neighbor Jackwood" in the near future.

The newly organized Grange is prospering, having thirty members, and at each meeting initiating more.

The Ladies' Benevolent Society of the South church met with Mrs. Loren Phelps Thursday afternoon and evening.

Rev. M. S. Howard and Dea. Albert Phelps attended the the councilto form the Eastern Avenue Congregational church Springfield, Wednesday.

The Kaffe Klatch at the Memorial church Wednesday and Thursday evenings was well attended, and one of the finest entertainments given this winter. George and Martha Washington (Master Paul Sigsbee and Miss Clara Raymond) received, an old folks quartette consisting of Miss Carrie Carr, Mrs. N. Merrill and the Mowry brothers rendered "Come like a youthful Hart or Roe," and other ancient songs, and an oyster supper was served in the supper room, ice cream and cake in a room decorated with snow-covered evergreen trees. Mrs. Dr. Steele, Miss Jennie Fiske, Miss Emily Wright and Mrs. Dr. Foster presided at the Continental booth, which was appropriately draped in the national colors; Miss Wythe, Miss Lucreta G. Noble and Miss Holden had charge of the French booth; Miss Howe, with several young ladies apparently from Switzerland, distributed candy and fruit from the Swiss chalet; Miss Wyman and Miss Mabel Welsh welcomed visitors at the artistically arranged studio, and Mr. and Mrs. Sigsbee, Tetsutaro Yoshida and Matsugata distributed souvenirs of the occassion in the form of after dinner coffee cups from the Japanese department.

THREE RIVERS.

The schools were not in session Wednesday, Washington's Birthday.

E. L. Derby received a car of grain from the West Thursday evening.

Quite a party of young people attended the "Kaffe Klatsch" at Wilbraham Wednesday.

Miss Maggie Parks returned Tuesday from a vacation spent with friends in Warren.

Mrs. J. T. W. Sibley of Gilbertville was in town this week, visiting her sister, Mrs. L. B. Kendrick.

Owing to the high water some of the rooms in the mill were obliged to shut down Tuesday and Wednesday.

L. B. Kendrick, who has had charge of the Palmer Mill boarding house for the past two years, is soon to remove to Salmon Falls.

As Mrs. J. W. Cheney was going to supper Tuesday evening, she slipped on the walk in front of Camerlin's market, striking her head and injuring her quite severely.

H. J. Kendrick and wife of Amherst, with Mrs. C. P. Crossman and son and Miss Hattie Kendrick of Springfield, were guests of Mrs. L. B. Kendrick this week.

Fire was discovered in the gas house of the Palmer mill Tuesday, originating from the oil in the drip pans. There was a big smoke, but the damage was very light, the fire being extinguished eight minutes after its discovery.

A "Poetical Wedding," in connection with a musical and literary entertainment, will be given at the Baptist church next Thursday evening. An admission of 25 cents for adults, and 15 cents for children under fourteen will be charged.

Tuesday afternoon a pair of horses and dump cart belonging to J. F. Twiss went down an embankment of a hundred feet, just north of the school house, into the Chicopee river. Driver Bouvier followed them, doing his best to control them until help came. A large crowd soon gathered and after two hours the horses were extricated from their uncomfortable resting place. Strange to say no serious results followed their bath, and the horses are in good condition, being just a little lame and stiff.

THORNDIKE.

Charles Page and family, formerly of this place, now of Springfield, were in town visiting friends the past week.

Agent Greene, who has been confined to his home several days this week, is now well and attending to his duty again.

The finest string of fish seen in this place for a long time was caught by Charles Page. One of the fish, a pickerel, weighed 5 pounds 14 ounces.

The People's Theatre Co. did not appear at Union Hall last Friday evening as was expected, the manager having cancelled the engagement until after Lent.

The Emmet Social Club of this place will go to West Warren on St. Patrick's Eve in a body, and attend the drama "Ireland of To-day," which is to be presented there.

Patrick Shugrue was bitten by a dog on Monday, receiving a painful wound in the leg. The dog has been killed and the patient is getting along nicely under the care of Dr. Flynn.

The ladies of the Congregational church held a tea sociable at the church vestry Tuesday evening, which was an enjoyable affair. The amusements consisted of singing, dialogues, speaking, etc.

Will Thayer, who has been employed in the cloth-room at the No. 2 mill, has gone to Bondsville, where he has accepted a position with the Boston Duck Co. as second hand in the cloth-room.

The heavy rain on Monday did a great deal of damage to the roads in this village, the sewers being frozen and therefore did not carry away the water, which flooded the streets in an unpleasant manner.

Patrick Burns, an old and much respected citizen of this village, died Tuesday at his home on High street, after a brief illness. His funeral took place Thursday morning at St. Mary's church, with a high requiem mass.

The machinery in some of the rooms in the mills was compelled to stop the past few days on account of high water, caused by the blocking of the river with large cakes of ice, which threw the water back on the wheel.

There is talk of holding a meeting very soon for the purpose of organizing a base ball association in this place to help support the proposed 1888 team. There are many who express a willingness to join and do all they can to arouse interest.

The local Democratic club held quite an interesting meeting Thursday, and elected delegates to attend the convention of the clubs which was held Thursday evening of this week at the town hall. The next meeting of the club will be held at Lawton's Hall next Thursday evening.

MONSON.

All the common schools closed to-day.

Miss Alice Thompson is spending a few days with friends in Springfield.

The literary club met at the academy Monday night instead of Tuesday.

Charles Hathaway and family are spending a few days with friends in Orange.

George H. Newton left Monday for Chattanooga, Tenn., on business for California parties.

Pat Maloney gave a fair show to a fair audience at Central Hall last Thursday evening.

The Womans' Foreign Missionary Society met with Mrs. Horace Squier Monday afternoon.

By actual measurement the amount of rain which fell in one-half hour Monday evening was 1¼inches.

The drama "Enlisted for the War" was presented by the Universalist society to a good audience at Central Hall last evening.

George Topliffe, who went to California last fall, was in town last week and has accepted his old position in the Gilbertville mill.

Dr. G. E. Fuller has bought the land near Pendegast's Block on Main street of C. H. Haskell, and will probably erect a house thereon in the spring.

The Marcus Keep Post, G. A. R., has engaged the "Battle of Gettysburg" to appear here on the 2d and 3d of April. A matinee will be given the children on the afternoon of the 3d.

There will be a regular meeting of Marcus Keep Post, G. A. R., in Grand Army Hall next Monday night, when it is expected that Comrade L. W. Rood will relate his army experiences.

The academy was crowded last Friday evening to hear the lecture by Rev. F. C. Hatch on "Water." The next of the course will be in two weeks by Amos Andrews of the state primary school, on "State Charities."

The Y. M. S. Club held their first whist tournament last Thursday evening. The first prizes were captured by G. L. Fuller and Miss Helen Hussey, and the consolation prizes fell to R. F. Bradway and Mrs. G. L. Fuller.

The Y. M. S. Club will move into their new rooms March 1st. The rooms will be attractively fitted up and a pool table will be put in. Five new members were admitted at the last meeting, and the club is in a very prosperous condition.

C. W. Bradlee, of Augusta, Me., will lecture on "Punctual People," at the Methodist church next Wednesday evening, to be followed by a leap year party, given by 30 young ladies of the church. Refreshments will be served, and a short entertainment will be given after the lecture in the vestry.

Mr. and Mrs. Fisk Rogers celebrated the 5th anniversary of their wedding at their home Wednesday evening, when a large number of the friends of the couple pleasantly surprised them. During the evening there were refreshments and games. There was a general bestowal of presents, among them a fine extension table and a sum of money.

The people of this place will be disapointed to learn that the popular war drama, "The Drummer Boy," which Marcus Keep Post have had in preparation, has had to be given up on account of the stage not being deep enough to allow its being put on. There is certainly a demand for a deeper stage here, and there is some talk of enlarging the one at Memorial Hall.

The Dorcas Society of the Congregational church will hold an A. B. C. bazar in the church parlors next Tuesday evening. A supper will be served from 6 to 8 o'clock, and a great variety of fancy articles, cut flowers, potted plants, confectionery in fancy boxes, bon-bons, etc., will be offered for sale. The proceeds are to go toward procuring a new carpet for the church, and it is hoped that a large number will be present. Nothing will be omitted which will add to the enjoyment of all. If stormy, the affair will be postponed until the next evening.

Very sad indeed was the sudden death of Hugh McGuire, a bright little fellow of 11 years, who was killed at Cushman's mill last Friday. On his way home from school he had stopped at the mill and was engaged in carrying bobbins to his father on the elevator, when in some unaccountable way he lost his balance and fell about 50 feet down the shaft, crushing his skull on the elevator well. He was picked up unconscious and Dr. Fuller was summoned, but the little fellow only lived about 45 minutes after being taken home. The funeral was very largely attended at St Patrick's church Sunday, the floral offerings being many and elegant.

The heavy rain of Monday night caused the worst freshet since the flood of 1869. The roads between here and Palmer were almost entirely blocked up by the over-flowing water and ice, and the bridge on the

New London Northern railroad being swept away at Palmer nearly shut off all communication from points north. The mails were conveyed by the way of Brimfield, and the trains were obliged to run from here up to a point nearly opposite the state primary school, and passengers were conveyed from there to Palmer by teams. The highway bridge at Blanchardville, owned by the towns of Palmer and Monson, followed by the bridge at Fentonville were swept away. The bridge on Main street near Reynolds's mills was undermined on one side, making it unsafe for heavy teams to pass over, and the iron structure will have to be taken up and the abutment relaid. The abutment on the Hampden avenue bridge was also damaged to some extent, and will need some repairs. The shafting and top stones across the dam at the North Monson mill were carried away, and about 15 feet of J. H. Smith's dyehouse was knocked in by the ice. The quarry road is now passable, and all the travel between here and Palmer is over that road. It is estimated that the loss in Monson by the flood will be about $2500.

WARE AND VICINITY.

C. F. Blood has put in an entirely new set of show cases and new scales in his drug store the past week.

The "Chimes of Normandy" will be given by the Gaiety comic opera company at the Town Hall this evening.

Daniel Collins lost a part of one finger and had others badly cut while fooling with a planer in Geo. H. Coney's box manufactory Wednesday.

The Fairbanks family, five brothers with their wives and two sisters, one with her husband, had a family reunion at the boarding place of Luther Fairbanks Tuesday evening.

George Eddy's boot manufactory has closed for a short time to make some changes in the styles of shoes manufactured, but it is expected to resume operations in a week or two.

Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Sagendorph have gone to California for a visit of several months. J. E. Ruggles and his wife, who is a sister of Mrs. Sagendorph, are residents of San Francisco.

Thomas Moriarty has circulated a petition asking the selectmen to insert an article in the warrant for the annual town meeting to see if the town will vote to pay him the amount he spent in his defense in the incendiary case in which he was acquitted.

LEGISLATIVE DOINGS.

From our Special Correspondent.

Boston, Feb. 21, 1888.

Thursday's record in the Senate was brief. They assigned to Feb. 28 the debate on the incorporation of Beverly Farms, and received the adverse report of the woman suffrage committee, five to four, against allowing women to vote on the issue of liquor licenses, with the promise of Senator Howland of Bristol to present a substitute bill.

The House made progress backward, for it never took up its calendar, and even at that sat still twenty minutes of six, its latest this session. The first hour was wasted over the question of suspending the rules to admit new business. This they did in some cases, reversing their action of Wednesday, but in the case of the city of Lowell they refused to concur with the Senate to let in a petition. It often looks as if the rule to keep out new business wasted more time than it saved.

Then they gave an hour and a half to the order for investigating the alleged corruption under the poll tax system. Nobody gave any evidence of corruption, but the state's good name had been smirched and they ought to clean it. By 77 to 128 they had the good sense not to go on that wild goose chase.

Then they took up the bill to prevent liquor dealers from sitting on juries in liquor cases, by the close vote of 92 to 91 reconsidered its rejection on Wednesday, and after a long wrangle, by 89 to 63, sent it back to the liquor committee.

On Friday afternoon the committee on the state house closed its hearing on the proposed plans for an enlargement of the state house accommodations. Several different methods have been laid before them for getting the room which is needed to accommodate the many and increasing departments of the branches of the state government. But that which finds most favor is to take the so-called reservoir lot in the rear of the state house and either put on it an extension of the present building, closing up the street between the two entirely, or erect a wholly separate structure and connect the two buildings by a bridge thrown across the street. Ex-Councilor Tilly Haynes was one of the witnesses Friday, and the latter plan is favored by him. He says that the present representative shall is large enough and good enough, and they do not need a better one.

Ex-Gov. Robinson is counsel for the order of the Iron Hall before the insurance committee in its effort to get its charter changed so it can pay benefits to members even if not disabled by sickness or accident. Some people wonder that he took the job, even as a lawyer.

A benevolent building scheme is proposed by Robert Treat Paine, for improved tenements for people of moderate means, and a bill has been reported for its incorporation.

The state board of education sent to the House on Monday a reply to the request of the House of January 12 in regard to the inspection of private schools under the direction of the board. This, of course, brought up the question of parochial schools, which are the real thing aimed at by the order. The board says that its authority and duties relate to the public schools of the state; that children are authorized by law to attend such private schools as are approved by the school committees; the standard for such approval is regulated by law; whatever inspection of private schools there is must be made by local committees. The board calls attention to the recommendations in its annual report that there be additional legislation in regard to the private schools, and says that if there is to be such legislation it should relate to the opportunity afforded for inspection on the part of the private schools, and the acceptance of that opportunity by the committee; if the Legislature gives larger powers to the school committees, the board should have correspondingly larger powers for getting information from the committees.

The Senate received a message from the governor on Tuesday afternoon which was of much importance. He calls attention to the increasing number of convicts who come to this country from Great Britain, saying they involve much extra expense to the state, and are a serious injury to its morals. There is abundant testimony to prove that persons are sent to this country from the penal and reformatory institutions of Great Britain upon their promise to come here. Many of those who go from the old country to Canada doubtless find their way here soon also. Statistics show that from 50 to 60 per cent of the inmates of our jails are of foreign birth. Though the Legislature can do nothing in the case, he advised it to memorialize Congress to make some arrangement with England for stopping her practice of sending convicts over here. With the message he sent a statement of facts gathered by Charles Carleton Coffin, showing that officers of English jails had accompanied convicts to the vessels to see them safely off for this country. Affidavits to several such instances can be produced, if wanted.

The education committee reported in the Senate on Monday a bill to change the name of Mount Holyoke Female Seminary to Mount Holyoke Seminary and College, and to enable it to confer degrees in the same way as they are now conferred by any university or college in the state.

The bill in relation to preventing fines for imperfect weaving has been tabled with a point of order pending that it is too broad for the order on which it is based.

The House has finally voted strongly in favor of the bill for savings banks' returns to be so made out as it include the amounts deposited by operatives, domestics and in general all who are wage-earners by hard labor.

The Senate had its debate on biennials on Tuesday afternoon, and at its conclusion the substitute resolve of Senator Sprague of Suffolk for biennial state elections was admitted without a count. The Suffolk senator was the chief speaker for the resolve, and Senator Crosby of Berkshire was the chief opponent. The arguments were as old as the subject. On one side Senator Sprague cited the cases of almost all the other states of the Union as proof that we could do better under less frequent elections and Senator Crosby pointed to the high position of Massachusetts and her uniformly good state government to prove that if Massachusetts was peculiar in the matter, she had something to show for it.

The House debated much of Tuesday afternoon on the bill to abolish the present poor debtor law and to substitute for it a law to made it impossible for a creditor to abuse a debtor, or for a debtor to defraud his creditor when he has property to pay his debts with. A large majority was for the bill.

"What will I do?" the maiden cried. "He will be here to-night and my hands are chapped; however, I have a bottle of Salvation Oil."

Old remedies under new names are being constantly introduced to the public, but Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup still maintains it pre-eminence.

Cancers and cancerous tumors are cured by the purifying effects of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

We believe that every case of pulmonary disease, if treated in time, may be relieved and cured by Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

NO WOMAN

is beautiful with a bad skin, covered with pimples, freckles, moth or tan. I have been asked many times what will remove these unsightly blemishes. No face paints or powders will remove them, as they are caused by impure blood. The only sure remedy I have ever seen is Sulphur Bitters, and in hundreds of cases I have never known them to fail.—Editress Fashion Gazette. 2w47

The Eleventh Annual Exhibition of valuable paintings will close this month at Gill's Art Galleries Springfield, and should be seen by ever lover of art in Massachusetts. Take time and go; it is worth the small admission to see any one of several of them. 2w47

After using Ely's Cream Balm two months, I was surprised and delighted to find that the right nostril, which was closed up entirely for over twenty years, was open and free as the other, and can use it now as I could not do for many years. I feel very thankful. R. H. Cressengham, 275 18th street, Brooklyn.

My daughter and myself, great sufferers from catarrh, were cured by Ely's Cream Balm. My sense of smell is restored.—C. M. Stanley, Shoe Dealer, Ithaca, N. Y.

Advice to Mothers.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle. 1y23

Some Things Learned by Experience,

That a tablespoonful of salt thrown on a coal fire that is low, will cause it to burn up quickly. That you can clean oil cloth with milk and water; while soap and brush will ruin it. That the skin of a boiled egg is the best remedy you can apply to a boil. That you can't cure Rheumatism or Neuralgia without taking Menard's Rheumatic Bullets. That you can buy them of LeGro & Lynde for $1.00 per bottle. eow7

DON'T EXPERIMENT.

You cannot afford to waste time in experimenting when your lungs are in danger. Consumption always seems, at first, only a cold. Do not permit any dealer to impose upon you with some cheap imitation of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, but be sure you get the genuine. Because he can make more profit he may tell you he has something just as good, or just the same. Don't be deceived, but insist upon getting Dr. King's New Discovery, which is guaranteed to give relief in all Throat, Lung and Chest affections. Trial bottles free at LeGro & Lynde's Drug Store. Large bottles $1. 6

A SOUND LEGAL OPINION.

E. Bainbridge Munday, Esq., County Attorney, Clay County, Texas, says: "Have used Electric Bitters with most happy results. My brother also was very low with malarial fever and jaundice, but was cured by timely use of this medicine. Am satisfied Electric Bitters saved his life."

Mr. D. I. Wilcoxson, of Horse Cave, Ky., adds a like testimony, saying: He positively believes he would have died, had it not been for Electric Bitters.

This great remedy will ward off, as well as cure all malarial diseases, and for all kidney, liver and stomach disorders stands unequaled. Price 50c. and $1, at LeGro & Lynde's 6

8 PER CENT. FIRST MORTGAGES IN KANSAS.

During the next 90 days we shall give our customers 8% on any money they may send us for investments we have for sale. We have on hand First Mortgages and applications for money on first mortgage loans, mostly upon 160 acre farms, amounts ranging from $250 to $500. We have also mortgages in amounts $1000 to $20,000 at 7% which we offer. How much money can you furnish us for these loans? They are A1 security. The stringency in the money market enables us to cut down amounts applied for in each case to an amount that is safe beyond a doubt. Now is the time to get a nice line of small gilt-edge loans. Write for our new Investor's Guide. Remit with advice to JOHN D. KNOX & CO., Investment Bankers and Loan Agents, Topeka, Kas. Boston Office: Room 24, No. 36 Bromfield street. 4w46

That Feeling

Of exhaustion expressed in the words "all run down," indicates a thin and depraved state of the blood, reacting upon the Nervous System. Nothing will reach this trouble with more speed and certainty than Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

"I was all run down," writes Mrs. Alice West, of Jefferson, W. Va., "before I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and now I am every day. I intend using it till my health is perfectly restored."

GAINING IN STRENGTH

"Being very weak and despondent after an illness which caused frequent loss of blood, I tried Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and two bottles have restored me to my former health," writes Miss Blanche S. Brownell, 4 Boylston Place, Boston.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

SULPHUR BITTERS

THE BEST AND PUREST MEDICINE EVER MADE.

TRUTHS FOR THE SICK.

It will drive the Humor from your system, and make your skin clean and smooth. Those Pimples and Blotches which mar your beauty are caused by impure blood, and can be removed in a short time, if you are wise and use the great blood purifier, SULPHUR BITTERS.

What makes you tremble so? Your nerves are all unstrung, and need a gentle, soothing tonic to assist nature to repair the damage which your excesses have caused. Sulphur Bitters is NOT a cheap rum or poor whisky drink, to be taken by the glass, like other preparations, which stimulate only to destroy. Why suffer with Boils? Why rave with that terrible headache? Why lay and toss on that bed of pain with rheumatism?

DON'T GIVE UP!

If you have failed to receive any benefit from other medicines or doctors, do not despair. Use Sulphur Bitters. They will cure you when all others fail. No person can remain long sick who uses SULPHUR BITTERS.

The dose is small—only a teaspoonful. It is the best and cheapest medicine. Try it, and you will be satisfied. Get it of your druggist. Don't wait, get it at onec. If you are suffering from Kidney Disease, and wish to live to old age, use Sulphur Bitters. They never fail to cure.

Keely Motor's Song.

I've a deep mysterious power and an occult "etheric" force
That shall rattle thro' the galaxy and shake the universe,
That shall haul the solar system like a mighty train of cars,
Crack the ridge-pole of creation and shake down the polar stars.
A ten-million engine power in my etheric vapor floats,
That will shake the constellations if my motor ever motes,
If my motor ever motes,
If my motor ever motes,
I will jostle up the planets if my motor ever motes.

Hitch a belt from my invention round the axis of the earth,
And a "vibratory sympathy" will speedily go forth
That will start the earth rotating, and no power its course can stop;
Spinning thro' the constellations like a planetary top,
And scare the trembling Pleiads like a herd of frightened goats,
Shake the rafters of creation if my motor ever motes,
If my motor ever motes,
If my motor ever motes,
Let the sun and moom take warning if my motor ever motes!

And I think 'twill mote directly in about a week or two;
Please subscribe another million just to put the matter thro';
Just a paltry million dollars will secure what I seek
And I'll set my motor moting by the middle of next week;
So hand in your prompt subscriptions, cash or promissory notes
And you'll all be Goulds and Astors if my motor ever motes,
If my motor ever motes,
If my motor ever motes,
All be Vanderbilts and Rothschilds if my motor ever motes.

Make No Mistake.

If you have made up you mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion and preparation curative power superior to any other article of the kind before the people. Be sure to get Hood's.

"In one store the clerk tried to induce me to buy their own instead of Hood's Sarsaparilla. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was, I had taken it, was perfectly satisfied with it, and did not want any other."—Mrs. Ella A. Goff, 61 Terrace street, Boston, Mass.

SAVED HIS LEG!

Scrofula of the Bone Cured.

LITHONIA, GA., August 11, 1887.

THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Atlanta, Ga.:

Gentlemen—I have been afflicted with ulceration of the legs ever since I was a child, the disease undoubtedly being hereditary, as my mother suffered from scrofulous symptoms. As I advanced to manhood my affliction increased until the malady became harrassing and painful beyond the power of words to describe. My right leg became pariciularly involved. the left leg being less painfully affected. Finally, about fourteen years ago, the ulcers on my right leg had eaten through the flesh into the bone. In order to save my life the doctors determined to amputate the leg below the knee. The operation was successfully performed by Dr. H. V. M. Miller of Atlanta, and Dr. W. P. Bond of Lithonia. The loss of my leg gave me only temporary relief. The poison was still in my system and soon began to show itself again. In a short time after large ulcers appeared on my left leg, covering it from the knee to the instep. Frequently while at work I could be tracked by the blood which oozed from the huge ulcers, and the sores and rottening holes were so offensive that my fellow-workmen could not stand the stench and would move away from me.

Last winter I was persuaded to try S. S. S. As a last resort I consented to do so, and about seven months ago I began taking the Specific. I soon began to feel the good effects of the medicine, the offensive running began to grow less and less and finally ceased, the ulcers healed, my flesh became firm and solid, and to-day, after using twenty-one bottles, I am as hale and stout a man of my age as there is in Georgia. I am seventy-one years of age, but feel now younger and stronger than I did when I was twenty-five. I weigh about 150 pounds. Nothing is to be seen of the terrible disease, or to remind me of the torture I suffered for so many years, except the scars of the perfectly healed ulcers.

I want the world to know of the almost miraculous cure effected on me by S. S. S., and I call upon those who wish to know the particulars directly from me to write, and I will consider it a pleasure as well a duty to answer their letters. I refer to Dr. W. P. Bond, of Lithonia, as to the truth of my statement.

Very gratefully yours,
B. DRAKE.

Over The Starry Way.

Gone in her child like purity,
Out from the golden day;
Fading away in the light so sweet,
Where the silver stars and the sunbeams meet,
And storms no more on the pathway beat,
Over the silent way.

Over the bosom tenderly
The pearl-white hands are pressed;
The lashes lie on her cheek so thin,
Where the softest blush of the rose hath been,
Shutting the blue of her eyes within
The pure lids closed to rest.

Over the sweet brow lovingly
Twineth the sunny hair;
She was so tender, that Love sent down
From the heavenly land, a soft, bright crown
To shade her brow with its waves of brown,
Light as the dimpling air.

Gone to sleep, with a pleasing smile
Carved on her silent lips
By the farewell kiss of her dewy breath;
Cold in the clasp of the Angel of Death,
Like the last fair bud of a faded wreath
Whose bloom the white frost nips.

Hearts where the darling's head hath lain,
Held by Love's shining ray.
Do you know that the touch of her gentle hand
Doth brighten the harp in the unknown land?
Oh! she waits for you with the angel band,
Over the starry way.

INTERRUPTED RESOLUTION.

"So you see that 'interrupted resolution' is simply an unexpected turn of affairs."

Percy Blake was musical instructor in the Hillside Seminary, and he stood up before a class of ten young ladies to whom he was unfolding the mysteries of harmony and composition. He brushed the chalk from his fingers, and continued:—

"After hearing the dominant seventh chord, which is the point of unrest, a feeling of expectancy is excited in the musically sensitive ear, and there is an imperative demand for the tonic chord, which alone can constitute a point of repose. No other progression leaves a sense of completeness; and even the uncultivated ear can accept nothing else as a finality.

"I will illustrate on the piano. Now listen: Here is the dominant, and you expect next to hear the tonic; but I substitute a different chord, and its effect is disappointing. You feel that the expected termination is delayed, and that to stop here would be impossible."

"This is what constitutes 'interrupted resolution.' Its employment is a fruitful source of variety in musical. compositions. Used with judgment and art, it may lead to effects which tantalize or excuse the listener. These effects may be likened unto threading one's way through the mazes of a labyrinth, or branching off from a pleasant country road into a bypath, or a sudden change of purpose when a certain end is apparently in view, or the losing of one's way in a forest. Interrupted resolution may be compared with the spice of life, imparting novelty to humdrum experience. It is a departure from hackneyed ways, arousing curiosity, expectation, wonder. The composer makes you speculate as to what new developments may turn up. He opens new visions of beauty, and occasionally gives the impression of letting his thoughts run wild."

"Yet there is method in all that he does. His path is marked out, and he knows his course. He is like a novelist who works on the sympathy of his readers by raising up obstacles between the lovers, though he is sure to unite them finally.

"Is he?" This question came in a low chirp from a pair of pouting lips, from above which two round eyes looked in mischievous inquiry at Percy Blake. The questioner blushed forthwith, for the chirp had been a little louder than was intended. Mr. Blake heard it, and his glance quickly darted in the direction from which it had come. The whole class tittered, and Mr. Blake himself was somewhat confused. But he recovered his self-possession instantly and replied:—

"Certainly he is, Miss Boyce; that is, if he understands the tastes of his young lady readers."

"Oh!" came from several voices, in mock disdain, and there was a small gust of breezy laughter.

But Percy Blake tapped on the table to secure attention, and began to give a black-board lesson, frequently illustrating it on the grand-piano. He then gave the girls an exercise to write, and concluded by putting a little part song on the black-board and making them sing it. Then a bell rang, and Professor Blake said:—

"Well, try and remember the rules of the new progression. Don't make consecutive fifths, and bring your exercises written neatly. Come to me if you stumble on any knotty points. Dismissed."

He turned to the piano as the girls filed out of the room, and awaited the coming of a dull pupil who could not remember the thumb letters of the scale of C.

Percy Blake's boarding house was in a quiet part of the village. After taking tea that evening he went to his room, and tilting back in an easy chair, indulged in a reverie. That valuable aid to meditation, a cigar, was between his fingers, and an occasional puff of smoke were projected toward the ceiling. In these curling wreaths of blue he seemed to seek counsel, studying with great intentness their varying and fantastic shapes. At length, with a gesture of impatience as if at his own irresolution, he abruptly rose, put on his hat, and quitted the house. A brisk walk soon took him to the Hillside Seminary, and into an instruction room of that institution he quickly proceeded, having first sent his card to Miss Mildred Boyce. This young lady soon appeared. She was the pupil who had put the question to him, following his disquisition on "interrupted resolution." She was the daughter of the principal of the seminary, and inherited much of a certain outflow of energy which characterized her father. She was the life of the school and the inventive spirit in all entertainments. She was a little older than the other girls, and studied only music and painting. Of course her social privileges exceeded those of the regular pupils.

"Good evening, Mr. Blake; I am so glad to see you!"

Mildred Boyce put out her hand to Percy Blake, and looked at him with a pair of eyes whose soft radiance was at all times dashed with a suspicious sparkle. His own eyes rested on hers with an expression not to be mistaken. His heart had surrendered itself long ago to her sweet face, of which fact Mildred was not entirely ignorant.

The two sat down together, and Percy Blake, with a look of determination that was almost stern, plunged headlong into the subject that was uppermost in his mind.

"Dear Mildred," he began, "since teaching in your father's school I have found something that makes life seem brighter than I ever thought it could be."

Mildred experienced a little inward trembling, and immediately divined what was coming.

"It is something," he continued, earnestly, "that has made me ambitious and anxious above all things to be worthy of a great blessing."

"Oh! I am sure you are both ambitious and worthy," she said with a low, wavering cadence.

"But not alone in my art—" he hesitated.

"No!" her elastic temperament was asserting itself, and her averted eyes, while showing no displeasure, began to flash forth enigmatic sparkles.

"No," he continued; "that is but a small thing. I am ambitious to be worthy of you, and I want you for mine through life."

He held her hand tightly, and waited with a wildly beating heart for a reply. It came in a moment. Moving suddenly from him, she arched her brows and exclaimed:

"Dear me, Mr. Blake, how extremely sudden, and how perfectly absurd!"

Her tone of voice was slightly elevated, with just a tinge of haughty reproach, and she had banished from her face every vestige of expression save that of polite surprise. He stared at her with dull wonder, and his exhilaration rapidly sank as if from a cruel blow.

"Well, Miss Boyce," he at length said, in a sad and mortified tone, "if the absurdity of what I have said impresses you so strongly—"

"Why, of course it does."

"Then there remains but one thing for me to do, and that is to very humbly ask your pardon. Good-night."

There was resentment as well as regret in his tone and manner as he rose and moved toward the door, leaving Mildred Boyce still seated.

"Oh, Professor Blake!"

"Well?" He halted and looked back.

"Won't you wait just a moment? I want you to show me something about that ugly 'interrupted resolution' lesson."

"I beg your pardon, Miss Boyce, but I tried to make the subject as clear as possible in the class."

"Oh, but you told us to come to you if we stumbled on any knotty points."

"Very well," he replied rather stiffly, "bring your music slate and pencil."

"Never mind them. Don't hold the door open. Sit down at the piano by me." He obeyed her commands, with a dismal smile at her imperious tone.

"Now play the chords. There" (as she listened), "isn't that the place where the resolution is interrupted?"

"Yes."

"What a horrid place it would be to stop!—"

"Certainly; we must progress something like this—"

"Wait! Don't play any more yet. What a delightful state of suspense!—don't you think so?"

"There is a feeling of dissatisfaction which—"

"Yes, I know; just like the affecting love story you were telling in class."

"Love story!" in an indignant tone.

"Yes; when the novelist makes believe everything is coming out wrong, and then brings about a happy ending."

"Ah, I remember, I used it as illustration."

"Well, now finish the lesson. Don't dwell on that disagreeable minor chord any longer."

Percy Blake humbly obeyed, and by a series of skillful changes arrived at a satisfactory ending on the tonic chord.

"There, that is better. It brings one to a sense of repose. I believe that is the proper term."

"Yes."

"How different music and novels are from real life!" said Mildred, with a low sigh.

"In what respect, Miss Royce?"

She looked at him from under her lashes. "Why the musician doesn't stop when disappointment comes in the shape of 'interrupted resolution,' and people in novels never give up when obstacles come before them."

"Well?" Percy Blake was evidently somewhat puzzled.

"But real people do."

"Do they?" in a listless tone.

"Of course they do. You do! You turn away from your purpose just as soon as the least thing happens."

Percy Blake gave a sudden start. An electric shock seemed to dart through his whole being, and a wild look of hope came into his face. Seizing both of Mildred's hands, he exclaimed: "Mildred, do not trifle with me. Are you sure you understand how much I love you? Will you give me the right to make it plain to you?"

"Ah," she murmured, "here is the point of unrest again! Let the answer be what you will."

The moist, lustrous eyes beamed on him, and the pouting lips were so tempting and convenient that he accepted the permission, and took his answer in a way that was altogether blissful.

And thus, with the aid of his beautiful pupil, did Percy Blake find a solution to the most interesting problem in interrupted resolution that he had ever encountered.—O. S. Adams, in Harper's Weekly.

A SCHOOL COMMITTEE CORNERED.

At an examination of a public school on Staten Island the teacher, justly proud of the scholars, addressing the audience, said:—

"Ladies and gentlemen, to prove that the boys are not crammed for the occasion I will direct one of them to open the arithmetic at random and read out the first problem. Then I shall invite a gentleman of the audience to work out the sum on the board and to commit intentional errors, which, you may observe, the boys will instantly detect. John Smith, open the book and read the first question."

The scholar obeyed, and read out:—

"Add fifteen-sixteenths and nine-elevenths."

The teacher turned to the audience and said:—

"Now, Supervisor—, will you step to the blackboard and work it out?"

The supervisor hesitated, then said, "Certainly," and advanced a step, but paused and asked the teacher, "Is it fair to put the children to so difficult a problem?"

"Oh, never fear," replied the teacher; "they will be equal to it."

"Very well," said the supervisor; "go on."

The boy began the question:—

"Add fifteen-sixteenths—"

"No, no!" said the supervisor. "I will not be a party to overtaxing children's brains. I have conscientious scruples against it. This forcing system is ruining the rising gereration." And he gave back the chalk and left the room.

"Well, Judge Casselton, will you favor us?" asked the teacher, tending the chalk.

"I would do so with pleasure," replied the judge, "but I have a case coming on in my court in a minute or two." And he left.

Assessor Middleton, we must fall back on you," said the teacher, smiling.

"Oh," said the assessor, "I pass—I mean I decline in favor of Collector X."

"Well, that will do," replied the teacher. "Mr. Collector, will you favor us?"

"I would, certainly—that is—of course," replied the collector, "but—ahem! I think it should be referred to a commit—who—bless me, I'll never catch it! Good-bye. Some other time." And he left.

"I know Judge Southfield will not refuse," said the teacher, and the justice stepped promptly up to the blackboard amidst a round of applause from the audience. The scholar again began to read the sum:—

"Add fifteen-sixteenths—"

A dozen hands went up as the judge made the first figures.

"Well, what is it?" asked the teacher.

"He's got the denominator on top of the line," cried the boys in chorus.

"Very good, boys, very good; I see you are attentive," said the judge, as he rubbed out the figures and began again, but was interrupted by the class calling out:—

"Now he's got the numerator and denominator under the line."

"Ah, you young rogues! You're sharp, I see," said the judge, and again he commenced.

"That ain't a fraction at all. It's one thousand five hundred and sixteen," was the cry that hailed the judge's new combination of figures.

"Really, Mr. Teacher!" ejaculated the judge, "I must compliment you on the wonderful proficiency of your scholars in algebra. I won't tire their patience any more.

"Oh, go on," said the teacher. And again the judge wrote some figures in an off-hand manner.

"That ain't a fraction! It's six thousand one hundred and fifty-one," yelled the boys.

"Mr. Teacher," said the judge, "it would be ungenerous on my part, and simply an unworthy suspicion as to your efficiency, to put these extraordinarily bright children to additional tests; I would not—I could not—Oh, excuse me! There's Brown. I have important business with him. Sheriff! I want to see you." And he left.

Some weeks afterwards a boy was brought before Judge Southfield for throwing stones in the street.

"John," said the judge, sternly, "were you the boy that laughed in school on Monday while I was working that problem?"

"Yes, sir," was the reply. John got thirty days.

The body of General Parkenham, who commanded the British at the battle of New Orleans, is said to be buried near Rossville, S. C. The story goes that the corpse was placed in a barrel of rum and sent to England. Through a mistake, the cask was not opened on its arrival there, but was shipped to Charleston, whence it found its way to a country grocery store. A spigot was placed in the barrel and the boys who had returned from the war would congregate around the store, take large potations of the good old Jamaica rum and tell their exploits in the war. After the rum was exhausted the head of the cask was knocked out and the body of a man was found therein. The news spread like wildfire and the boys gathered to inspect the body. Several of them had seen General Parkenham, and at once identified it as being no less a corpse than that of the general. The body was inclosed in a coffin and buried near the store.

A Song of Winter.

Sing a song of rapture,
Gayly everywhere!
Four and twenty thousand
Snowflakes in the air.

Sing a song of sleigh bells
Ringing loud and clear,
While the roguish urchins
Follow in the rear!

Sing a song of sledding—
Now the sport's begun!
Four and twenty snowbirds
Looking at the fun!

Sing a song of sunshine,
For the storm is o'er;
Gay old earth is laughing
At the marble floor.

RAILWAY KINGS' FINESSE.

At Chamberlain's the other evening a friend called my attention to a young man sitting at a table near us and said:

"Robert Garrett owes much of his financial misfortune to that fellow."

"How is that?" I asked.

"Why," he replied, "for twenty-five years the Baltimore and Ohio and the Pennsylvania railroads were struggling to obtain possession of the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore railroad, which, up to a few years ago, maintained a separate and independent organization and was owned by a few rich men in the state of Delaware. Their influence was such as to prevent any other corporation obtaining a charter from the Legislature of Delaware or any other railroad from obtaining the right of way across its territory. The stock of the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore company was held at most inflated figures, and many offers for its purchase were declined; nor would the road pool with either the Baltimore and Ohio or the Pennsylvania, and both the rival roads were greatly distressed at the situation. One night at a dinner party in Baltimore this young man was a guest. Robert Garrett was another, and under the warming influence or some fine Burgundy he boasted at the dinner table that the Baltimore and Ohio company had finally triumphed in its fight with the Pennsylvania, and that papers for the sale of the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore railroad would be signed the next day.

"This young gentleman happened to be related to some of the officers of the Pennsylvania company, and was sober enough to appreciate the importance of the announcement. As soon as he could do so politely he left the dinner table, hurried to the railway station in his dress suit, caught the midnight train for Philadelphia, and arriving there about 3 o'clock in the morning, drove immediately to the residence of Thomas A. Scott, the president of the Pennsylvania company. Rousing that gentleman he told him what he had learned in Baltimore, and as soon as Mr. Scott could dress the two started for the residence of the solicitor of the Pennsylvania company. At 8 o'clock in the morning Mr. Scott and his solicitor were in Wilmington, and before noon that day the papers transferring the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore railroad to the Pennsylvania company were signed, while those which had been prepared to be mailed to Baltimore were thrown in the waste basket. The Baltimore and Ohio people never knew how the Pennsylvania railroad company got ahead of them on this, the most important contest that was ever made between the two roads. But the desire for revenge was so great that they attempted to build a competing line to Philadelphia, and sunk the surplus which the elder Garrett was so long in accumulating."

WHERE THEY NEVER FEEL THE COLD.

"Yes," remarked the St. Paul man to a friend from Chicago as he stood arrayed in his blanket suit and adjusted a couple of buckskin chest protectors, "yes, this is climate which causes a person not to notice the cold. Its extreme dryness," he continued as he drew on a couple of extra woolen socks, a pair of Scandinavian sheepskin boots, and some Alaska overshoes—"its extreme dryness makes a degree of cold, reckoned by the mercury, which would be unbearable in other latitudes, simply exhilarating here. I have suffered more with the cold in Michigan, for instance," he added, as he drew on a pair of goat-skin leggins, adjusted a double fur cap, and tied on some Esquimaux ear-muffs—"in Michigan or Illinois, we will say, with the thermometer at zero or above, than I have here with it at from 45 to 55 below. The dryness of our winter air is remarkable," he went on, as he wound a couple of rods of red woolen scarf about his neck, wrapped a dozen newspapers around his body, drew on a winter-cloth overcoat, a fall-cloth overcoat, a light buffalo-skin overcoat, and a heavy polar-bear-skin overcoat; "no, if you have never enjoyed our glorious Minnesota winter climate with its dry atmosphere, its bright sunshine, and invigorating ozone, you would scarcely believe some things I could tell you about it. The air is so dry," he continued, as he adjusted his leather nose protector, drew on his reindeer-skin mittens, and carefully closed one eye-hole in the seal-skin mask he drew down from his cap—"it is so dry that it seems next to impossible to feel the cold at all. We can scarcely realize in the spring that we have had winter, owing to the extreme dryness of the atmosphere. By the way," he went on, turning to his wife, "just bring me a couple of blankets and those bed-quilts and throw over my shoulders, and hand me that muff with the hot soapstone in it, and now I'll take a pull at this jug of brandy and whale oil, and then if you'll have the girl bring my snow-shoes and iceburg sealing stick, I'll step over and see them pry the workmen off the top of the ice-palace who were frozen on yesterday. I tell you we wouldn't be going out this way 500 miles further south, where the air is damp and chilly. Nothing but our dry air makes it possible."—Fred H. Carruth, in the Chicago Tribune.

DECEIVING CHILDREN.

My attention has recently been called to this subject, and I ask mothers why they do it.

A bright little girl of two and one-half years is one of our neighbors.

"There, Mamie, you must not go; the dogs are there, and they will bite. Ah, you must not do that—cows will come and eat you."

These are the statements little Mamie hears from morning until night, day by day. She used to be frightened, and the sight of a real dog or cow nearly drove her into convulsions.

One day, she stood looking at me through the window. Her mother, wishing her to go away, said: "The lady is gone, she is not there." She knew I was there, but did not know that Mamie was looking at me. Again, "I shall whip you if you do not mind." Mamie knows that one-half the times she does not receive the promised whipping, and ventures to disobey, and, catching the spirit of her mother, she will say, "No mamma, I will not run away," and as soon as her morher's face is turned runs as rapidly as she can. These are daily occurrences.

What will Mamie be, fifteen years from now? A true woman? A help to society? One who will lead from paths of falsehood a weak friend? Will she be this?—and yet what mother does not want her daughter to be all this?

A little boy, being carried with his mother to visit a friend, peeps cautiously under the bed with the remark, "Oh, you don't chase bears under your bed."

Mothers, all responsible mothers, what are you doing? Where are your thoughts? How can you allow yourselves to teach day by day that which will warp and make narrow those little minds given to you so pure and clean, coming in perfect purity to receive what you may give to exaggerate with the growth of years, beyond control and power of selection, plant in the tender minds?

Oh, I earnestly ask, how can you be so careless? What right have you to expect respect from the world when you are daily undermining that truth and honor which we have a right to claim from your children?

If you bring to us a child we have a right to demand a noble, true, and perfect man or woman, so far as your training and example can train the "young idea to shoot."—Yankee Blade.

BANDAGED EYES.

"I must go and bandage Hazel's eyes," said a young Detroit mother, who was entertaining evening company.

"Do her eyes trouble her?" asked one of the friends sympathetically.

"No, but they trouble me," said the mother, laughing. "Just as long as she can see a glimmer of light she will lie awake and ask questions, but as soon as I bandage them she goes asleep."

Sure enough, not another word was heard after the little girl's eyes were tied up.

"I never heard of such a thing," said the friend. "Is it a punishment?"

"Not at all. The child likes it. The sensation gives her something to think about, and in a moment she falls asleep."

"Is it an original idea?"

"It is an Indian custom," said the handsome brunette mother, "and descended to me from my grandmother, who was an Indian princess. When I travel I always bandage the children's eyes when I want them to sleep. It acts like a charm."—Detroit Free Press.

CONCERNING TEMPERATURE.

There is a popular notion, chiefly among unobservant people, that our winters are becoming colder and our summers hotter. As a matter of fact, the average winter temperature has not gone below its mean—say 50°—but eight times in forty-four years. The same general statement may be made in regard to summer temperature during the same time, the average mean of each year varying through a very narrow range during the long period above mentioned. It is the habit of mankind to regard everything as phenomenal that appeals strongly to the senses. "The coldest weather within the memory of the oldest inhabitant" is a saying older than the oldest inhabitant. If it were a truthful saying, the gradual cooling of the terrestrial globe, which some alarmists believe will freeze out humanity, in the course of ages, is going on at a great rate.—Newark Advertiser.

SPICE.

The following is related of a popular divine, in conversation with one of his parishioners who was fearfully addicted to profanity and at the same time one of those conceited fellows who are apt to allude to themselves as "plain, blunt, men." The latter concluded a speech with this shibboleth, adding, "and I call a spade a spade." The patient dominie responded:

"I am glad you do, Mr. B———, I was afraid you would call it a d—d old shovel."

When the telephone was first introduced into New York a tourist from the "other side," writing back to the old country some of his experiences here, said the people down town were constantly going to a hole in the wall saying, "Hell oh!" and then blackguarding each other all over New York.—Boston Commercial Bulletin.

NAST AND THE ELEVATOR BOY.—When Thomas Nast was in Kansas City recently, he was annoyed by the rudeness of the elevator boy, and said as much. On a later visit the boy was all politeness, and asked Mr. Nast for his unique autograph. Mr. Nast drew him a hasty pen and ink sketch of himself bowing deferentially to the elevator boy, and wrote under the drawing: 'Those who elevate others must be polite themselves." The boy learned a lesson.—New York Sun.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, MARCH 2, 1888.

W. W. CORCORAN, the distinguished Washington citizen and philanthropist, died last Friday, at the age of 89 years. His public and charitable gifts are estimated at $8,000,000.

THE tariff bill prepared by the Democratic majority of the ways and means committee is published this morning, and will command a wide reading. It makes an aggregate reduction of about $50,000,000 in the revenue, and adds largely to the free list.

Two more train robberies have occurred in the Southwest within a week, one in Arizona and another one in Arkansas. The passengers were not molested, but the express safes were emptied. Express messengers out that way ought to be provided with Gatling guns for the reception of such visitors.

TEXAS is happy over the near completion of its fine new capitol, whose dome is four feet higher than the capitol at Washington. What pleases the Texans particularly is the fact that the state hasn't paid out a cent for the building, but gives a syndicate 3,000,000 acres of public land for it. This, with the $9,000,000 surplus in the treasury, may well make the state feel jolly.

THE Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad has been tied up this week by a strike of its engineers over a question of wages. The engineers demand uniform wages, but the company will not change its practice of graduating the pay according to qualifications and service. The company has engaged enough engineers so that its passenger service is now running in pretty fair shape.

GOV. AMES has made excellent nominations for the two additional judges for the superior court, in the persons of James R. Dunbar of Westfield and James Lathrop of Boston, the latter a Democrat. Mr. Dunbar needs no introduction to the people of this section, where he is well known and highly esteemed. Mr. Lathrop has been reporter of the supreme court decisions for fourteen years, and his appointment is commended in the eastern part of the state.

MR. BLAINE had an interview in Florence the other day with a correspondent of the New York World, and settled the question of his being a candidate for the presidency again by stating emphatically that he would not permit his name to be used under any circumstances. Said he: "I could not go through another contest with the certainty of the presidency at the end of it. The struggle is too great, and there is nothing in life worth such a contest." This would seem to settle the matter pretty effectually, and there is now a clear track for other candidates.

A SECRET CIRCULAR has been sent by the Democratic state committee to every town committee in Massachusetts, it is stated, urging them to see to it that as many Democrats are worked into office as possible in the coming town meeting, and especially in every office having to do with registration,— assessors and collectors more particularly. This with an eye not only to the town elections, but "for the more important fall election." This trotting politics into town affairs is neither pleasant nor desirable, and the particular anxiety to obtain control of the registration lists is rather suspicious, to say the least.

POSTMASTERS in New York state are receiving a circular from Washington asking them to furnish lists of all the voters receiving mail at their offices, with the politics of each one. The lists are desired "for the purpose of distributing documents and papers discussing political questions," and the request is backed up by the assistant secretary of the treasury and the public printer. This is a is a fine way of wringing the post offices into political work, and forwarding reform in the civil service. Here is a good opportunity for President Cleveland to display a little of the sturdy reform spirit with which he is credited by rebuking these officials for prostituting their offices to such political work. Bet you he won't do it, though.

SOME interesting facts relating to the oil, envelope, and other trusts have been brought to light this week by the Senate investigating committee at New York. It appears that the capital of the oil trust is $90,000,000, and that the shareholders received a 10 per cent dividend last year and also a 20 per cent stock dividend. The nine trustees have the entire management of all Standard oil refineries, and receive the modest salary of $25,000 each, though the president is paid $30,000. The envelope monopoly is a much smaller affair, but is doing its level best in the same line, buying up and shutting down rival manufacturers, and arranging with the maker of a patent machine to buy one a month of him, while he is neither to sell machines to nor repair them for outsiders. Prices of commercial envelopes have been advanced from 15 to 20 per cent since the "combine" has got under headway. This is the nub of the matter in all these trusts — competition is smothered, the public is bled and the members of the pool fatten on the proceeds.

CONDENSED NEWS.

The Hartford, Ct., Post was burned out yesterday, the loss being $20,000.

Commodore Samuel Barron of the federal and confederate navies, is dead at the age of 86.

A large number of ladies and others visited the fine boudoir car occupied by Hi Henry and his famous minstrels here Thursday afternoon. They came away much pleased with the novel inside attraction, and also with the courtesies shown them by the members of the troupe.

Hi Henry's minstrels gave a good performance to a crowded house at Park street rink last evening, the audience being composed of the best class of Palmer citizens. The entertainment was first class in every respect, there being a noticeable lack of "chestnuts," which was appreciated by all.

The four Democratic clubs in the different villages of the town held a union meeting at Thorndike last evening to discus the campaign outlook and to talk over candidates for the office of selectmen. No definite action was taken in regard to candidates, although some names were proposed.

Train No. 457 on the Ware River Railroad, in charge of Conductor Francis, was derailed at Barre Plains last Friday afternoon, causing a temporary blockade of trains on the main line. Some of the side track was torn up by the derailed cars, which were somewhat damaged. Fortunately no one was injured.

H. G. Loomis has had a large casket cabinet constructed and placed in a room designed expressly for the exhibition of caskets at his furniture warerooms. It is of artistic workmanship and adds greatly to the convenience of the establishment, as it is a model of its kind, and is said to be one of the finest in the state.

The Democratic clubs are developing considerable activity as the annual town meeting draws near, and are apparently going in with a determination to scoop all the offices, from selectmen to field drivers. It is too early to name candidates yet, but the woods are full of 'em, it is said, and they will come to the surface in good season.

Lindley & Co. at North Monson have had hard luck the past few weeks. A consignment of wool was stopped at Palmer on account of the washing away of the New London Northern Railroad bridge at this place, and when they had some sent by way of New London it got just south of South Coventry when the bridge there was burned.

The foundation for the electric light station has been completed for several days, and the masons are now putting in the brick work, which will also be completed in a few days and in readiness for the carpenters to commence work upon the structure. Some new poles have been set this week while, cross-bars and insulators have been attached to many others.

A 30 by 60 barn belonging to Thomas Jenks, located just over the Palmer line in South Belchertown, was destroyed by an incendiary fire about 8.35 Sunday evening. The building contained about fifteen tons of hay, six harness and numerous farm implements, besides three cows, all of which were consumed. The loss on barn and contents is estimated at $1500; insured.

The singers who took part in the cantata "Ruth" this week have invited the children of the state primary school down to the rink next Wednesday evening to see the cantata, and also invite all children of the town under 15—both in this and the other villages—to attend free. Persons over that age will be charged 10 cents. The performance will commence at 7 o'clock.

Sears and Cook of Lenox have bought the grocery store of H. P. Longley on Central street, and took possession yesterday. The new firm is composed of enterprising young men who will no doubt still further increase the business already built up by the former owner. Mr. Longley is to remain in town until about April 1st, when he will remove to Westboro, having been offered a partnership in a large and long-established grocery business there.

The temporary bridge of the New London Northern Railroad over the Quaboag river near J. S. Holden & Co's. woolen mill came very near being washed away Sunday night. The ice came down the river in huge cakes, making another blockade against the timbers, and necessitating the employment of a force of men to cut the ice into small cakes so as to allow it to pass under the bridge and down the river. The new iron bridge will be built there as soon as the necessary arrangements can be made.

The adjourned base ball meeting of the Western Massachusetts League will be held at the district court room next Thursday at 6 p. m. All teams intending to enter the league are requested to be represented at this meeting by one or more delegates. The committee on by-laws will report, and the other business to be transacted is of an important character. The teams at West Warren and Monson are especially requested to be represented at this meeting if an entrance to the league is desired, as it will be almost impossible to properly arrange the schedule of games for those places unless the teams are represented at the next meeting. The base ball season will open about May 15th.

One of the large wooden bridges of the New London Northern Railroad at South Coventry, Ct., was destroyed by fire Tuesday at 11.35 a. m. The fire was started by sparks from a passing locomotive, attached to express freight No. 20. The loss is estimated at $10,000; insured. Roadmaster Shanks, with a large force of men, immediately commenced the work of constructing a trestle bridge, which was completed Wednesday night. Trains have been greatly delayed since the bridge was destroyed, as a transfer of passengers and freight around the scene of destruction has been necessary. This makes the second bridge that this company has lost within one week.

A local branch of the Order of the Iron Hall was instituted in this place Wednesday evening with a charter list of thirty members. The new lodge starts off very auspiciously, and will occupy the hall over the Palmer National Bank on Church street, formerly used by the Good Templars. The following officers have been elected and installed: J. P. J., Charles A. Le Gro; C. J., Charles E. Fuller; V. G., Charles H. Betts; A., A. C. Page; cashier, W. H. Hitchcock; herald, W. H. Blanchard: adjuster, C. K. Gamwell; prelate, John Shaw; watchman, Charles A. Bogue; vedett, Pliney E. Miller; medical examiner, Dr. W. H. Stowe; trustees, John H. Smith, C. E. Fish, F. H. Caryl.

The bids of contractors for building the new high school house on the corner of Thorndike and Park streets closed Saturday evening and were opened at the office of S. S. Taft at that time. They were as follows: Daily Brothers of Holyoke, $14,241; F. F. Marcy, $14,085; G. W. Lyman, $13,000; E. Bigoness of West Warren, $12,000; Darling Brothers of Rochdale, $11,700. The committee rejected all bids owing to the fact that they were all in excess of the appropriation. It is thought that later on in the season the building can be erected for about $1000 under the price named by the lowest bidder, as a considerable reduction in the price of brick is expected by that time, and some changes may be made in the plans which will lessen the expense.

The cantata "Ruth" was presented in a very pleasing manner at the Congregational church Tuesday evening by our local singers, under the direction of W. F. Miller. There were none of the hitches so common on a "first night," but everything moved smoothly from beginning to end. The limited stage room gave little opportunity for dramatic action, but the singing was excellent throughout, and suggested the query why we cannot have more of the same sort once in a while. There are singers enough here to do some good work, as was demonstrated on this occasion. The demand for seats was so much larger than the capacity of the house that the entertainment was repeated the next evening.

C. H. Bradley, who has filled the office of first supervisor at the state primary school for several years past, has tendered his resignation and accepted a position as superintendent of the Boston asylum and farm school on Thompson's Island in Boston harbor, at a salary of $1500 a year. Mrs. Bradley, who has been first supervisor of the girls' department at the school for two or three years, will be matron of the institution there. The island belongs to the school, and Mr. Bradley will have the entire management of that aside from the institution. He will be greatly missed at the state primary school, where he has so faithfully discharged the duties assigned him since he came from Johnson, Vt., about seven years ago, when Col. Tufts was superintendent. The new position is a responsible one, and his friends and acquaintances, both here and elsewhere, will be pleased to learn of his promotion. His successor at the institution has not yet been appointed. Mr. Bradley will assume his new duties about March 15.

Elijah A. Moore of Canton, Mass., is to address the people of Ware on the subject of temperance on Tuesday evening, March 20th. He is the proprietor of the "Rising Sun" stove polish, and is an enthusiastic temperance worker, coming without any pay and also footing his own bills. As a speaker he is always entertaining and instructive. All are invited to attend.

Rev. E. Hitchcock has proved to be the right man in the right place at the Methodist church, and the society have unanimously voted to ask for his return another year. These officers have been elected: Trustees, Benjamin Davis, George E. Puffer, H. P. Cummings, Harry Fletcher, George B. Eddy, Daniel C. Gates, Hiram Ramsdell and J. P. Crowell; stewards, J. P. Crowell, John T. Winslow, H. P. Cummings, O. C. Stetson, J. T. Cummings, C. H. Ormsby, D. L. Barlow, D. C. Gates, Hiram Ramsdell, Malcolm M. Campbell, W. J. Pratt and H. P. Billings; church secretary, C. H. Ormsby; district steward, H. P. Cummings; treasurer, H. P. Billings.

On Wednesday evening the Wednesday Evening Club met to discuss the question "Does protection protect?" This subject being so broad E. H. Gilbert, who delivered the essay of the evening, took as his subject, "The relation of the tariff to the laboring man." The speaker invited the club to criticise as the different headings came up, so the paper was somewhat broken up. The club adjourned to Monday evening, when an extra meeting will be held to finish up this same subject. At that time Lawyer F. G. Fisher is to speak. Their next regular meeting will be held on Wednesday evening, when Calvin H. Morse will speak on the subject of the evening: "American newspapers."

The postponed meeting of the Ware Center Farmers' Club was held at their room Monday evening, and after the discussion on the question "What is the best crop for the farmer to raise," it was decided that hay was the most profitable crop for the farmers in this locality. A paper was read by Miss D. R. Howard on "Farming now as compared to farming in olden times." It was very interesting, and appreciated by all who heard it. There was a good attendance, among which were quite a number of ladies. The next meeting of the club is to be held next Monday evening, when they will talk on forming a Grange at the Center, and to hear the report of the committee which was appointed a few weeks ago, on the subject of soon holding a farmers' institute there.

LEGISLATIVE DOINGS.

From our Special Correspondent.

BOSTON, FEB. 29, 1888.

Mr. Grosvenor of Ludlow had put on the table of the House this afternoon the report of the committee on railroads, inexpedient to legislate, on an order relative to providing that the recommendations of the railroad commissioners as to fares on railroads shall be binding upon the railroads. It is a matter which especially concerns people on the Boston & Maine Railroad, in consequence of the refusal of that road to regard the recommendations of the commissioners as to rates of fare on its line.

Not much of public interest was done in the Legislature on Thursday, except in the Senate, where they had a long debate on the question of allowing women to vote on the issue of liquor licenses. Senator Howland of Bristol moved to substitute for the adverse report of the committee on liquor laws a bill to give women the right to vote. He opened the debate with a warm argument in favor of giving women what he said was theirs by a natural right, which had been unjustly taken away from them. Senator Slattery of Middlesex spoke on the other side and then came Senator Kimball of Suffolk with the most remarkable speech of the day, He said that the Republicans who voted for this bill but did not vote for the prohibitory law must be classed as the artful dodgers of the session; that they did not intend to pass a prohibitory law this year and that the cat ought to be let out of the bag before it starved to death; that they could have prohibition in ten days, if they wanted it, but the members were willing to vote for anything but that. He protested against the idea that the Republican party were in favor of prohibition. The Senate refused to admit the resolve, 18 to 19, as follows:

YEAS: Clark of Hampshire, Clark of Essex; Cook, Gleason of Plymouth, Howland, Keith of the Cape, Keith of Plymouth, Kingsley, Ladd, Hessinger, Palmer, Pike, Sleeper, Stevens, Towne, Tucker, Walker, Wheelock—18.

NAYS: Boardman, Crosby, Dwyer, Fletcher, Gleason of Worcester, Glines, Hathorne, Howard, Howe, Kimball, McAlpine, Perkins, Roads, Shea, Slattery, Southworth, Spellman, Sprague, Sullivan —19.

President Boardman's no vote was not necessary to reject the bill, and it was a tie vote without, and a tie does not carry.

On Friday Senator Howland attempted to get a reconsideration of the refusal to substitute his license suffrage bill, and the Senate stood 16 to 17. But the absentees of the day before were put on record, Senators Hartwell and Marble of Worcester in favor of the bill, and Senator Collins of Suffolk against it. With every man on record, the Senate stands 20 to 20 on the question. All the friends of the bill are Republicans, and the opponents are ten Republicans and ten Democrats.

Secretary Peirce has sent to the House the returns of women who registered and voted for school committee in 1887. In the whole state there were 3802 registered, or 417 less than in the year before, and 1912 voted, instead of 1911 in 1886. What a spectacle of indifference, compared with the 375,000 who might vote. By counties, the number registering and voting was as follows: Barnstable, 34 and 4; Berkshire, 31 and 4; Bristol, 286 and 80; Dukes, 5 and 5; Essex, 201 and 114; Franklin, 39 and 9; Hampden, 48 and 33; Hampshire, 71 and 6; Middlesex, 1304 and 635; Nantucket, 152 and 29; Norfolk, 214 and 111; Plymouth, 231 and 70; Suffolk, 856 and 731; Worcester, 311 and 79. The record of Palmer under the law is that in 1886 six women registered and three voted, and since then they have done absolutely nothing in the way of exercising their rights.

The House on Friday engrossed the poor debtor law after a long debate, without material amendment.

Neither branch had much of consequence on Monday, but the lack was fully made up on Tuesday, when the state house was crowded as it has not been before this winter. In the Senate they had Beverly, and in the House they had the question of allowing women to vote on the issue of liquor licenses. The latter measure was taken up at 3.25 in the afternoon, and it was at once voted to close debate at 4.45, if a vote was not sooner reached. As the matter came down from the Senate, the question was on accepting the adverse report of the committee. Mr. Milliken of Malden moved to substitute for that report a bill to allow women to vote. He made a speech of twenty minutes on the bill, beginning with a remark of Henry Clay that Kentucky raised tall trees, tall horses and tall men, but that tallest and best of all were her tall women. Mr. Milliken's chief point was that, as the opponents of women suffrage assert that women's sphere is the home, they should at least be consistent and give women a chance to defend their homes against their worst enemy. When he ended his twenty-minute speech, the House passed unanimously a motion of Mr. Symonds of Salem to limit all speeches to ten minutes. But nobody offered to speak after that, and the House proceeded at once to a roll call. There were 118 yeas to 85 nays and five pairs, so that more than a majority of the entire House has gone on record in favor of the bill. In general the Republicans voted for the measure and the Democrats against, but 38 Republicans were recorded against it and three Democrats for it. After the vote the bill was assigned to the first place in the orders of the day for next Tuesday, when it will be subject to further discussion. Mr. Grosvenor of Ludlow was one of the 38 Republicans recorded against the bill.

In the Senate on Tuesday the floor and galleries were packed till they could hold no more. The people of Beverly and of the Farms seemed to have turned out in mass to hear the arguments which have now been rehearsed to them twice a year for three years, once in committee room and once on the floor of the Legislature, and still they do not seem to tire of them. Each side spoke long and eloquently, and stirred the walls of the Senate chamber with eloquence which was loud if it was not convincing, but they talked too long for a vote, and the Senate adjourned with the bill as unfinished business.

Wednesday afternoon the Beverly debate was resumed in the Senate by a speech in favor of Beverly Farms by Senator Ladd of Worcester, chairman of the committee on towns. After an hour's debate the roll was called and the bill was ordered to a second reading by 18 to 13, and four pairs. Every Senator was put on record but President Boardman. The vote was as follows, including pairs:

YEAS: Clark of Hampshire, Collins, Fletcher, Hartwell, Howe, Howland, Keith of the Cape, Keith of Plymouth, Kimball, Kingsley, Ladd, Marble, Messinger, Palmer, Perkins, Shea, Sleeper, Southworth, Spellman, Towne, Tucker, Wheelock—22.

NAYS: Clark of Essex, Cook, Crosby, Gleason of Worcester, Glines, Hathorne, Howard, McAlpine, Pike, Roads, Slattery, Sprague, Stevens, Sullivan, Walker—17.

A bill was reported to the House to permit the formation of labor organizations. They may be incorporated with seven or more persons, the same as benevolent associations, for social or other improvement, and may pay benefits to their members. They are not to be permitted to do business unless they are approved by the commissioner of corporations.

Mr. Lyman of Belchertown explained to the House the bill to enable Mount Holyoke seminary and college to confer degrees, and it was engrossed without opposition.

LANDON.

All anxious fathers of crying babies should at once procure the celebrated remedy, Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup. Price 25 cents a bottle.

No dyspepsia or headache in the house where Laxador is kept. This valuable remedy drives off all diseases arising from impure blood. Price 25c.

Do not throw away your hard earned cash for every new cough syrup, when that standard remedy for coughs, Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is 25 cents.

"Hurrah!" said a little girl, "I'm not to be kept in because of that horrid neuralgia. My mamma has bought a bottle of Salvation Oil."

Nothing equals Ayer's Sarsaparilla for purifying the blood, and as a spring medicine.

As a toilet luxury, Ayer's Hair Vigor cannot be equaled. It is highly perfumed, and keeps the scalp clean and cool.

REV. C. F. BROOKS

says that his little girl is troubled with malaria very severely, and that since he gave her Sulphur Bitters, he never thinks of leaving New York for his summer resort without a few bottles, for they always cure his family, and are far superior to quinine. (2w49)

ACCIDENTS

and how to deal with them, and other valuable medical information, will be found in Dr. Kaufmann's great medical work; elegant colored plates. Send 3 2-cent stamps to pay postage to A. P. Ordway & Co., Boston, Mass., and receive a copy free. (2w49)

"A God-send is Ely's Cream Balm," writes Mrs. M. A. Jackson, of Portsmouth, N. H. "I had catarrh for three years! Two or three times a week my nose would bleed. I thought the sores would never heal. Your Balm has cured me."

I was a sufferer from catarrh for fifteen years, with distressing pain over my eyes. The disease worked down upon my lungs. I used Ely's Cream Balm with gratifying results. Am apparently cured. Z. C. Warren, Rutland, Vt. (2w49)

THE HOMLIEST MAN IN PALMER

as well as the handsomest, and others are invited to call on any druggist and get free a trial bottle of Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and lungs, a remedy that is selling entirely on its merits and is guaranteed to relieve and cure all chronic and acute Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis and Consumption. Large bottles 50 cents and $1.

SOME FOOLISH PEOPLE

allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They often say: "Oh, it will wear away," but in most cases it wears them away. Could they be induced to try the successful medicine called Kemp's Balsam, which is sold on a positive guarantee to cure, they would immediately see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. Price 50c. and $1. Trial size free. At all druggists'.

Advice to Mothers.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle. 1y23

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child she cried for Castoria,
When she was a Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

A Certainty.

Steele's Little Bile Pills are without an equal for stimulating the liver to healthy action, and creating a proper secretion of bile, thus removing from the system the germs of malaria, curing constipation, indigestion, and inducing a healthy circulation of the blood, without which no one can enjoy sound health. They are small, but effective; free from nauseating propensities and griping pains, and do not interfere in their action with the ordinary routine of daily life. Heavily sugar coated. To be had of LeGro & Lynde, for 25 cents per bottle.

PERSONAL.

Mr. N. H. Frohlichstein, of Mobile, Ala., writes: I take great pleasure in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, having used it for a severe attack of Bronchitis and Catarrh. It gave me instant relief and entirely cured me and I have not been afflicted since. I also beg to state that I had tried other remedies with no good result. Have also used Electric Bitters and Dr. King's New Life Pills, both of which I can recommend.

Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, is sold on a positive guarantee. Trial bottle free at LeGro & Lynde's Drug Store.
1y29

WONDERFUL CURES.

W. D. Hoyt & Co., wholesale and retail druggists of Rome, Ga., say: We have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery, Electric Bitters and Bucklen's Arnica Salve for four years. Have never handled remedies that sell as well, or give such universal satisfaction. There have been some wonderful cures effected by these medicines in this city. Several cases of pronounced Consumption have been entirely cured by use of a few bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery, taken in connection with Electric Bitters. We guarantee them always. Sold by LeGro & Lynde. 1y29

COMING! WAIT!! WAIT!!!

Great fire insurance sale, commencing Saturday, March 3d, in Caryl's block, Palmer. Special notice—No goods sold or no one allowed in store before Saturday, March 3, at 8 a. m. Over $47,000 worth of men's, boys' and children's clothing saved from the late New York fire must be closed out in ten days by order of the insurance companies. The appraisers for the insurance companies, after carefully examining this stock of clothing, concluded that the same was not so badly damaged as claimed by the assured clothing manufacturers, and failing to agree as to the actual loss, were forced to take the stock, turn it into money, and the goods must be sold at once in order to make a final settlement. All goods are appraised at forty cents on the dollar of manufacturers' cost. And this is all we want for them. The fire sale will enable the people of Palmer and vicinity to secure their clothing for almost nothing. We will tell you here of a few bargains. We will sell men's nice business suits, all to match for $3.65. This suit cost to manufacture $13.25, and if it does not suit you in every respect, or if you do not think it worth $13.25, bring it back at any time in four days and we will pay you $3.65. Elegant cheviot suits worth $15, must go for $4.95. Beautiful cassimere suits worth $17, marked $6.85; 1000 different kinds of diagonal, worsted and corkscrew suits, which cost to make about $20, we will sell for $9.75. Good working pants worth $2, are now marked at 75 cents. We have 60 different styles of cassimere pants at $1.20 that can't be bought elsewhere for less than $4. We have a large line of boys' suits, pleated black suits, suitable for the season, worth $5, but we will let them go at $1.75. $1500 men's overcoats, worth from $7.50 to $25, will be sold for from $3.85 to $9.80. Insurance Companies' salesrooms. Open evenings till 9 o'clock. CARYL'S BLOCK, Palmer. (2w49)

Have You Heard

What Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has done and is doing for thousands in the cure of colds, coughs, pneumonia, bronchitis, and even consumption? For this class of complaints Ayer's Cherry Pectoral stands far ahead of all other specifics.

George W. Dick, of Newton, Mass., says: "Two years ago I took a severe cold, which, being neglected, was followed by

A TERRIBLE COUGH.

I lost flesh rapidly, had night sweats, and was soon confined to my bed. A friend advised the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I began to take this medicine, and, before finishing the first bottle, was able to sit up. Four bottles effected a perfect cure."

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles $5.

THORN'S

Hop and Burdock Tonic

STANDS AT THE HEAD OF ALL

SARSAPARILLAS, BITTERS, TONICS,

And Similar Preparations.

It is prepared with the greatest care by I. B. Thorn, who has had twenty years of acutal experience in compounding Physicians' prescriptions, and is warranted not to contain a particle of aloes or any injurious drug.

It is composed of Sarsaparilla Root, Burdock Root, Prickly Ash Bark, Mandrake Root, Golden Seal Root, Dandelion Root and the best Northern grown Hops, the proportions of which when properly combined make the best preparation in existance for curing all blood diseases.

It is the Best Tonic and Invigorator, as Hundreds can Testify.

It cures Biliousness, Sick Headache, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, General Debility, Mental and Physical Exhaustion, and Nervous Prostration.

There is no other preparation like it, and no other that has had the sale in so short a time. Its merits have sold nearly Seventeen Thousand Bottles in the last two years.

SULPHUR BITTERS

THE BEST AND PUREST MEDICINE EVER MADE.

TRUTHS FOR THE SICK.

It will drive the Humor from your system, and make your skin clean and smooth. Those Pimples and Blotches which mar your beauty are caused by impure blood, and can be removed in a short time, if you are wise and use the great blood purifier, SULPHUR BITTERS.

What makes you tremble so? Your nerves are all unstrung, and need a gentle, soothing tonic to assist nature to repair the damage which your excesses have caused. Sulphur Bitters is NOT a cheap rum or poor whisky drink, to be taken by the glass, like other preparations, which stimulate only to destroy. Why suffer with Boils? Why rave with that terrible headache? Why lay and toss on that bed of pain with rheumatism?

DON'T GIVE UP!

If you have failed to receive any benefit from other medicines or doctors, do not despair. Use Sulphur Bitters. They will cure you when all others fail. No person can remain long sick who uses SULPHUR BITTERS.

The dose is small—only a teaspoonful. It is the best and cheapest medicine. Try it, and you will be satisfied. Get it of your druggist. Don't wait, get it at once. If you are suffering from Kidney Disease, and wish to live to old age, use Sulphur Bitters. They never fail to cure.

SULPHUR BITTERS.

SAVED HIS LEG!

Scrofula of the Bone Cured.

LITHONIA, GA., August 11, 1887.

THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Atlanta, Ga.:

Gentlemen—I have been afflicted with ulceration of the legs ever since I was a child, the disease undoubtedly being hereditary, as my mother suffered from scrofulous symptoms. As I advanced to manhood my affliction increased until the malady became harrassing and painful beyond the power of words to describe. My right leg became paricularly involved. the left leg being less painfully affected. Finally, about fourteen years ago, the ulcers on my right leg had eaten through the flesh into the bone. In order to save my life the doctors determined to amputate the leg below the knee. The operation was successfully performed by Dr. H. V. M. Miller of Atlanta, and Dr. W. P. Bond of Lithonia. The loss of my leg gave me only temporary relief. The poison was still in my system and soon began to show itself again. In a short time after large ulcers appeared on my left leg, covering it from the knee to the instep. Frequently while at work I could be tracked by the blood which oozed from the huge ulcers, and the sores and rottening holes were so offensive that my fellow-workmen could not stand the stench and would move away from me.

Last winter I was persuaded to try S. S. S. As a last resort I consented to do so, and about seven months ago I began taking the Specific. I soon began to feel the good effects of the medicine, the offensive running began to grow less and less and finally ceased, the ulcers healed, my flesh became firm and solid, and to-day, after using twenty-one bottles, I am as hale and stout a man of my age as there is in Georgia. I am seventy-one years of age, but feel now younger and stronger than I did when I was twenty-five. I weigh about 150 pounds. Nothing is to be seen of the terrible disease, or to remind me of the torture I suffered for so many years, except the scars of the perfectly healed ulcers.

I want the world to know of the almost miraculous cure effected on me by S. S. S., and I call upon those who wish to know the particulars directly from me to write, and I will consider it a pleasure as well a duty to answer their letters. I refer to Dr. W. P. Bond, of Lithonia, as to the truth of my statement.

Very gratefully yours,
B. DRAKE.

At "The Literary."

Folks in town, I reckon, thinks
They git all the fun they air
Runin' loose 'round!—but 'y jinks!
We got fun, and fun to spare,
Right out here amongst the ash
And oak timber ever'where!
Some folks else kin cut a dash
'Sides town-people, don't fergit!—
'Specially in winter-time,
When they's snow, and roads is fit.
In them circumstances I'm
Resignated to my lot—
Which puts me in mind o' what
'S called "The Literary."

Us folks in the country sees
Lots o' fun!—Take spellin'-school;
Er ole hoe-down jamborees;
Er rivivals; er ef you'll
Tackle taffy-pullin's you
Kin git fun, and quite a few!—
Same with huskin's. But all these Kind o' frolics they haint new
By a hundred year' er two,
Cipher on it as you please!
But I'll tell you what I jest
Think walks over all the rest—
Anyway it suits me best,—
That's "The Literary."

First they started it—" 'y gee!"
Thinks-says-I, "This settlement
'S gettin' too high-toned fer me!"
But when all begin to jine,
And I heerd Izory went,
I jest kind o' drapped in line
Like you've seen some sandy, thin,
Scrawny shoat put fer the crick
Down some pig-trail through the thick
Spice-bresh, where the whole drove's been
'Bout six weeks 'fore he gits in!
" 'Can't tell nothin'," I-says-ee,
" 'Bout it tel you go and see Their blame 'Literary!' "

Very first night I was there
I was 'p'inted to be what
They call "Critic"— so's a fair
And square jedgment could be got
On the pieces 'at was read,
And on the debate,—"Which air
Most destructive element,
Fire er worter?" Then they hed
Compositions on "Content,"
"Death," and "Botany;" and Tomps
He read one on "Dreemin' swamps,"
I p'nounced the boss, and said,—
"So fer 'at's the best thing read
In "the Literary!"

Then they sung some—tel I called
Order, and got back ag'in
In the critic's chair, and hauled
All o' the p'formers in.
Mandy Brizendine read one
I fergit; and Doc's was "Thought;"
And Sarepty's, hern was "None
Air denied 'at knocks;" and Daut—
Fayette Strawses little niece—
She got up and spoke a piece;
Then Izory she read hern—
"Best thing in the whole concern,"
I-says-ee; "now le' 's adjourn
"This-here 'Literary!' "

They was some contendin'—yit
We broke up in harmony.
Road outside as white as grit,
And as slick as slick could be!"
I'd fetched 'Zory in my sleigh,
And I had a heap to say
Drivin' back—in fact, I driv
'Way around the old north way,
Where the Daubenspeckses live.
'Zory allus—'fore that night—
Never 'peared to feel just right
In my company.—You see
On'y thing on earth saved me
Was that "Literary!"

—James Whitcomb Riley, in the February Century.

ONE WAY TO RESIST COLD.

It is said that when exposed to severe cold a feeling of warmth is created by repeatedly filling the lungs to their utmost in this manner: Throw the shoulders well back and hold the head well up. Inflate the lungs slowly (the garments being loose), the air entering entirely through the nose. When the lungs are completely filled, hold the breath for ten seconds or longer, and then expire it quickly through the mouth. It is important for all to practice this exercise many times each day, especially in the open air. If this habit ever becomes universal, lung diseases, and many others, will rarely be heard of. A permanent expansion of the chest of one, two, and even three inches, will eventually follow.

CLIMBING TO HEAVEN.—One day a demented negro boy, about 12 years of age, wandered away from his home in the country and reached Kosciusko. The Methodist steeple now being finished, 120 feet in height, first excited his wonder and he made a bee line for it. When first seen by the workmen he had climbed upward on the steeple to a dizzy height, near 100 feet from the earth, with a bucket on his arm. The men below yelled to him to come down. His answer: "I'm gwine to Heaven and kerry God some butter," somewhat surprised them. An Irishman, with commendable presence of mind, shouted to him that he had gone up wrong, "come down and go up the other side," which advice brought the would-be-angel to solid earth, where he was kept.—Kosciusko (Miss.) Messenger.

It takes the editor of the Milford Daily News to analyze whisky. He says: "A bushel of corn will make four gallons of whisky. Government tax on four gallons of whisky, $3.60. The whisky, made ripe and old by the new Jay Eye See rapid progress, sells rapidly for $4 per gallon, making $16 for four gallons. Of this $16, the farmer gets 25 cents; the government gets $3.60; the railroad gets $2; the manufacturer gets $4; the vender gets $6.25; the user gets the devil—while the producer and tax-payer foot the bill."

Cardinal Manning says that a starving man has a right to steal his neighbor's bread, Keep up, your eminence! The thirsty man has a right to steal his neighbor's whisky; the unmarried man has a right to steal his neighbor's wife; the nagless man has a right to steal his neighbor's horse. The neighbor seems cut out for a hard time in this world, according to his eminent eminence's views.—Life.

"Oh, by the way, Job," said Mrs. Shuttle, as she handed him his warm slippers, "you remember that you adandoned smoking with the New Year." "Yes, my dear." Worried Wife—"Oh, doctor; what has detained you? I sent for you at 12 o'clock; my husband is very low indeed." ### Wait Not.

When my empty hands are folded
  Upon my quiet breast,
And the weary eyes forever
  Are closed in dreamless rest,
My friends will bring white flowers
  And lay against my hair;
And deem death on my face has left
  An almost beauty there.

Will speak in tender accents,
  Recall with loving thought
Kind words my lips have uttered,
  Deeds of love my hands have wrought;
Will kiss my cold, pale forehead
  With tearful tenderness;
And hold my icy fingers
  In a lingering caress.

Oh, friends! keep not your kisses
  To give my cold, dead brow.
The way is dark and lonely;—
  Oh, let me feel them now!
The tenderness I shall not need,
  For which I long to-night,
When death shall fold about me
  His mantle, cold and white!

Dear friends, think of me gently;
  I am weary, warm and tried;
Forgive I plead, oh, friends forgive
  My foolishness and pride!
And speak the loving whispers
  E're cold and dead I lie;
Before my frozen lips may give
  No answering reply.

GLIMPSES OF THE SOUTH.

FAIRHAVEN, SHELBY IRON WORKS, ALA.

Mr. Editor: Thinking that perhaps an account of a visit, which to us has been a visit almost to wonderland, would be entertaining as well as instructive to your readers, we have concluded to write you a few letters concerning our trip to the Southern States.

Obliged because of circumstances beyond our control to cease entirely from the use of the pen, we are obliged to depend for our labor in this direction upon the hand of another. Because of our venerable appearance, or smoothness of speech, we have convinced a young man of susceptible sympathies that he ought to become, for the time at least, our second self. Therefore whatever there may seem of exaggeration or fancy in these lines may be charged to the somewhat erratic imagination of this tender youth, or to the poetic vibrations of the type-writer to whose music they are set.

An old traveler once described for us a transition which a native of the tropics undergoes between the early morn and noon day. One by one the thick mantles which at dawn protected his form from the damp and chilling air are removed, until at noon-day scarce a shred is left to hide him from the tropic sun. So the traveler who during the winter months leaves our northern clime for a journey to the southward will learn that one by one he must change the heavy wraps which keep away the snow and frost, for garments suited to the warmth of summer days.

It was mid-winter when we left that northern city famed for the manufacture of that material into which Lot's wife was turned. The day was cold and bleak, so cold indeed that a beaver coat and arctic shoes were none too warm to make one feel like starting out upon a journey like the one we had undertaken. But one by one the days are passing, first the Quaker City, then the nation's capitol, and then the soil of "Old Virginny" are marked off into hours of journeying until the line of snow is passed and we have entered on the borders of the father summerland. With the disappearance of the frost and chill of northern winter comes the rain and mud of that indefinite period which in every land lies along the way between the summer and the winter.

At Lynchburg, Virginia, a quaint old town of ante bellum days, a change of cars necessitated a delay of nearly half a day, and so while waiting for the coming of our means of transportation we climbed the hill which, lying to the westward of the river James, contains the business portion of the city. Here we saw that which to one born and bred in a northern land seems strange indeed. Abruptly from the river bank the hill extends until upon its brow we stand and see the river bending far away toward Richmond in the east. No Yankee who has never traveled in the South knows what mud is. We talk of "muddy weather" but mud is a noun, black mud, red mud, deep mud, sticky mud, as these terms describe the commodity through which we wade are unknown terms in the northern latitudes. The sidewalks too are queer. At each crossing of the street, instead of pavements, broad, and smooth to walk upon, great stones like sticks of wood are laid in place at travels of a yard or more, and quick of step and sure of foot is he who can make the transit from street to street without a baptism of something entirely different than cleansing water. Two or three of the business streets are paved, and all the rest are fairly flooded with this liquid abomination. Beside the curbing, the wagon to its hubs in mire, and the horses to their knees, a wagon load of coal is standing, and a darkey dips and tugs away in his efforts to get his feet and his basket out of the quagmire, both at once. "Rather muddy," we suggest, and darky, with a grin answers, "Boss, it am mighty muddy." We think so, and while we wander on we ponder on the capacity of even igorance to find a vocabulary equal to any emergency. It was "mighty muddy," and for three days or more we had an opportunity to enlarge upon the meaning of that one word. It seemed as though the very clouds were muddy. Not a ray of sunshine, but for five hundred miles one continual monotonous procession of different formations of "mighty mud." Thus late at night, mighty tired, and disgusted with the outlook, we reached the capitol of Georgia and went to bed. But what a transition awaited us on the morrow. With the first dawn of morning we were aroused by the rattle of the busy traffic on the street and waked with dumb amazement to find that we were in fairyland. Summer had come. Through the window came the radiant beams of sunlight, while just without, close by, upon the branch of a tree just budding to life, a robin sang its sweetest notes as though to ask us if we knew winter had disappeared.

Never shall we forget the enjoyment of that morning scene. A week had passed since we were shivering with the cold in the home land far away, and now we stood where 'neath our window sang the bird which had left us months ago, while budding trees and sunbeams greeted us with May-day gentleness and love. We could scarcely wait till the great gong in the hall told us that the first meal of the day was ready, so anxious were we to go forth for the enjoyment the scene so strange and beautiful to us in winter time. We had traveled late into the night the day before, and for a hundred miles before we reached the city we had passed our time in company with one who charmed us by his conversation and his knowledge of the land through which we were now traveling. A Southern gentleman, to the manner born, son of one who in his day was owner of two hundred slaves or more, this man had all the courtly manners which tradition gives to those entertainers of "ante bellum" days. Nothing that he could tell me concerning the transitions of these later days seemed to be withheld. The discernment of judgment and the lack of prejudice surprised me when I found it where I thought to find the bitterness of pride when beaten in its dearest schemes. My companion charmed me by his frank and genial manner, and when, just before our parting at the station, he invited me to go with him upon the morrow for a visit to the different points of interest in the city, I at once consented, with perhaps somewhat of selfishness in my answer to his request. It was yet early in the morning when by his side in a carriage of generous dimension I started upon our tour of investigation. It is useless to undertake to go over what we saw and said that day, for surely we have stores of memories that would far exceed any space we can use. Suffice it that the point of interest chief in importance to our mind was a set of stately buildings two miles from the city to the southward. Here, grouped upon the campus, stand the buildings of Clark University, which by the way in date of organization, and in name, antedates by many years that later promise which is being brought to realization in one of Massachusetts' fairest cities. Here is an institution founded by a Christian church, for the education of the colored race. Many of us doubt the possibility of making men and women of those who are to-day examples of our selfishness, and yet he who stood with us that day within the college hall, whose father had been owner of two hundred slaves, this man, on the road back to Atlanta, told us that could all men see a full-grown negro thick of lip and black of skin talking with ease and fluency the language of æsthetic Greece, could they listen while those negro boys and girls were explaining their translations from the English to the Greek, or giving with delicacy of perception, or gentleness of touch, their execution of some difficult selection of music, upon a grand piano, could those he said, who have never know the negro except in the relationship of master to servant, or boss to laborer, see these things, they would have a marvelous revelation of possibilities along this line, of which they have never dreamed. Indeed, though we have known the better side of the possibility of the negroes we were surprised and gratified to see their proficiency and skill in different departments of labor thought. Not alone did we hear them decline Greek verbs, and execute fine music, but upon the green we saw great wagons, strong and durable, for which there was ready market and a great demand, so we were told. We saw in the basement of a building where the professors held their sway, a printing office complete in every department. We were shown the university catalogue for the present, and a paper called the "Elevator," of such typographical adornment and finish as would do honor to our more pretentious northern college class. We saw these among other things and were told that from beginning to end they were the work of students in this school. Certainly we have seen much of the negro since our arrival here that has changed, unfavorably, our estimate of his make-up, yet when brought in contact with him amid such surroundings as these, we certainly see room to prophesy much that is grand and noble when the brutality and degradation of our "peculiar institution" have been left far behind with coming generations.

A night ride of nearly two hundred miles brought us at dawn to Birmingham, Alabama. Who has not heard of Birmingham? Birmingham has had a boom! Birmingham needs another boom, or we might say bomb, to lift it out of the pit of humiliation and darkness. We were fascinated with Atlanta. Its beautiful avenues, its fine business blocks and public buildings, its busy air of teaming industry and commerce, all were the best evidences of a city filled with vitality and life. But Birmingham! as we saw it while upon the train just at the opening of day. The blaze of over 50 ovens lighted the horizon with a lurid flame which gave picturesqueness and animation to the thing itself. But that was all. With the coming of daylight every trace of beauty in the city disappeared. To be sure, when we took the "dummy" car and rode out four miles to the lake we saw some beautiful surroundings and some possibilities for an artist's hand. But in the city we found nothing but the dead level and monotony of a western prairie city, a shanty upon one corner, a block upon another, and a vacant lot between "for sale," and streets over which the very name of pavement never echoed. The scriptures tell us of a condition of the soul where the second state is worse than first, and if moral conditions can be reckoned in the material world we should be ready to more than affirm that Birminghan as she is in the boom, is surely no better off than before her bubble was blown up. It is a safe plan in business, and a rule of successful business men, that inflation beyond natural proportions is an evil to be dreaded. How men can understand that the booming of a city out of all natural proportions until twenty-five or fifty years of growth has been discounted by the process of inflation, how men can come to believe that the raising of prices until land in a city of thirty thousand inhabitants is held as dear or dearer than land, relatively in the same position, in a city of a hundred thousand inhabitants how men can come to believe that such prices as these will build up and firmly establish a prosperous city, is something that can be understood only by a process of circumlocution which is entirely beyond the power of the ordinary mind to grasp. Birmingham is sure of a leading position among the cities of Alabama, but her citizens will come to see, and very soon if they are wise, that cities are like individuals, they must grow, and they never can be made full size to order.

Certainly so far as any business prospects are concerned we had anything but a delightful experience in Birmingham. Yet our visit there was not without its variety of interest. We northern people have a tradition that there is in the negro race an element of melody and of music peculiar to it, and unique in its expression. From the moment of our coming to where so many negroes may be found, at every turn we have looked for these peculiar expressions of the negro character, and we found it at Birmingham. Tired of looking at the piles of brick and mortar, the stone and mud, the evidences of haste and waste, we turned our footsteps toward that portion of the city where the negro population by instinct seems to gather. But we are searching for adventure and we must find it. Walking along with aimless steps before a row of uncouth buildings given over to the traffic of this dark-skinned population, we are attracted by a sound which proceeds from a doorway opening from the walk. Curious to know the meaning of the sounds which are rich and melodious with a tender eloquence and simplicity, we turn our steps toward the open door from whence the sounds proceed. The sight which greeted our eyes is difficult of comprehension to one who has never witnessed something like the same. The room some one hundred feet in length and thirty feet in width, a counter made of rough unpainted boards running the whole length of one side of the room, along the other side piles of empty barrels, jugs, bottles, and every form of hollow thing that can be made the receptacle for liquids, all these piled promiscuously together as though thrown with careless hands. Between the counter and the pile of barrels, bottles and the like, a space of fifteen feet, or more in width, and extending lengthwise from the open door to the bare wall at the other end. Above the counter, ranged tier upon tier, barrels twenty-two in number, and in each one a faucet from which a vile poison could be drawn. At the further end of the open aisle, before the counter, stood a keyed organ, much the worse for wear. At the organ sat a negro six feet tall and two hundred pounds or more in weight, a a type of negro life in form, in feature, and in color, seldom seen even in a land where negroes are as common as in these southern states. From the organ to the door at which we stand the open space is filled with other negroes of every form, and size, and color, from the perfect specimen of physical manhood to the meanest outline of a cripple, from the giant to the dwarf, from those whose skins are black as night to those whom a novice would find it difficult to distinguish from many white men whom he meets. These are massed together until no vacant space is left, while along the counter stands a row, changing in its make-up, which showers upon the counter a continual stream of "nickels" to be exchanged for every form of liquid poison which the hand of Jewish greed can manufacture for the appetites of brutal men. This is a description of a "barrel shop," for the distribution of the "ardent," peculiar to this section and unknown in northern towns or cities. Its proprietor, one Abe Spizer, is a "Fagan," with all of a Fagan's duplicity and meanness. Just as we reach the door the music of the organ starts up with a doleful sound and then the negro, with his hands upon the keys, bursts forth into song. We have heard the famed singers of the world. We have sat enraptured as if by a magic spell under the influence of voices trained to harmony in notes and sweetness of expression, yet we never have in our life listened to a voice which to us contained such volume and such melody. Surely our ears are not trained to great accuracy of criticism in music, yet for us there was such depth, and power, and compass in this voice as we have never heard before. What to do we hardly knew. Here we were before the door with three-score negroes filling the hall and not a white man to be seen except the hook nosed Jew to gather in the "nickels" as they fall upon the counter. Yet we were bound to hear more of that voice, so with sublime heroism which did not hesitate at the sight of meanness nor at the smell of filth, we pushed our way across to where the organ stood. No sooner had we by our actions spoken our desire to hear the music than the sleek proprietor came to our side and offered us the best the house could boast of. An empty whiskey barrel standing on its head afforded us a seat, and the pile of jugs and bottles made a foot-rest. Thus surrounded by that motley crowd of poverty and ignorance we listened for two hours or more to the singing of the negro who was sitting on the organ stool. From a niche in the corner was produced a violin, old and creeky in its notes, yet between this and the organ and the negro's voice we enjoyed a season of musical feasting such as seldom if ever comes to us. The singer was as simple and innocent as a child. He was nothing more than a tool by which the Jew who owned the barrel shop drew the "shekels" from the laborers who patronized his place.

Of course we knew that the shop was run for gold, and the Jew would sell his shop, his "nigger," and himself, if thus he could increase the treasure in his till. So when we climbed down from the barrel we were quite conscious that we would be expected to contribute to the "nickels" that were raining on the counter. Having somewhat of conscientious scruples against investing our spare capital in the commodity in the barrels ranged along the wall we told the proprietor that we had no money to buy his whisky, but that we had enjoyed the music and were more than willing to pay for what we had enjoyed. Such conscious scruples were no doubt novel and perhaps incomprehensible to "mine host," and when we followed this desertation with some coins his astonishment was beyond measure. At once he inquired who we were, where we lived, and what our occupation was, and we in our simplest manner answered that we were from the north and that our business was preachers. Startled perhaps by the somewhat novel position into which our acts had placed us, the tender conscience of Abe Spizer was disturbed and he began to tell us how he had his building crowded from morning until evening every day, and how for two years there had never been a row within the room. His apology for his line of business was no doubt very slim, but as a testimony, of the marvellous power which music has upon the lives of even those whose thoughts and purposes are low and mean, the answer was significant. We left the building with somewhat of admiration, mingled with much regret, that such a man as Spizer was able to make that element of melody and song which should contribute to the noblest views and aspirations of humanity, a means of poisoning humanity with his vile beverages. And even now we carry thoughts of the influence of that strange harmony which out chaos and debauchery brought genial spirits, mixed with shouts of merriment. Between the mud on the highways and whisky in the barrel shop, we had had enough of Birmingham, and so we bade "good bye" without regret to that which had in it only suggestions to us of man's cupidity and man's degradation. Late that night, owing to the ability of one who, though of northern birth, has learned with ease the hospitality for which our southern people are so noted, to make railroad connections where there are none, we arrived safe at our destination late at night, from whence we date our letter.

Perhaps the reader may infer what is written here that our opinion of Birmingham is not flattering. However this may be, there is even in these evidences of what men do to gather wealth, the other evidence of that tremendous activity and grand enthusiasm which out of misfortune is building in our country day by day larger success, and which has no better example than in these efforts in these cities of the Southern states to build anew upon the ruins of an old and extinct social system, a grander and a higher civilization. Let us hope therefore that not the last word is said regarding Birmingham and its boom, but instead hope that future days may see a city here worthy this noble state of Alabama, and worthy also the people who are striving for its welfare. F. W. BETTS.

OUT OF STAMPS.

"Give me five 2-cent stamps," I said, as I presented myself at the general delivery of the post-office in a small Wyoming town. The postmaster laid aside a large jack-knife and a pine stick and said:

"Hey?"

"Two-cent stamps—five of 'em."

"We ain't had a two-cent stamp in the house for a month," he replied.

"Give me one's, then."

"Sold the last one a week ago."

"Any thing that will stick, then; five-cent, one-cent, anything."

"We never keep nothin' but one's and two's since I've been runnin' this office."

"Got any postal cards?"

"No; sold the last one to Hank Reed last night."

"Your stock hardly seems as complete as it might be."

"No; the layout is all run down. I 'low I'll have to order some post-office truck 'fore long. I got three kinds plug terbacker, some big hats, 44 and 45 cattridges, spurs and jinglers on 'em, an' all that kind of stuff, if you should want anything of that kind. An' say, hold on, I can fix you on this mail business, too! I got a slough of one cent wrappers—sell you a dozen of 'em for a short bit, an' you can write on the wrong side of 'em and sorter fold 'em up, an' they'll go all right, I reckon."

I told him that I didn't want to write so badly as I did, and started out, when he called me back, and added:

"Say, Bill Somers is circ'latin' a pertition 'round town to have me removed and himself app'inted to this 'ere office; but don't you sign it—don't you have nothin' to do with it. The pertition goes on to say I don't 'tend to the bus'ness of the office properly, an' it's a durned lie, sir, that's what it is! If it said I was offensive partisan, I wouldn't a cared, 'cause I do git perty zealous at territorial conventions sometimes; but when it says I don't do my duty by the office it hits my bus'ness standin', an' I am going to fight it!"

Near Danbury, in North Carolina, stands a log house built by its present occupants forty-five years ago. When he first built the fire on the new hearth he vowed it should never go out, and it has not. Meantime, the owner has not slept from home a single night; has never tasted food from any other table but his own; has never used a candle or other light in his dwelling, yet he has married three times, been a father of fourteen children, and became a great-grandfather.

March!

Oh! this is the month of the year
  When nature says to the snow:
"It is time that you disappear;
  You must take yourself off, you know,
Just get yourself ready and go;
  Pack up your drifts and March."

She says to the icicles, "Come,
  Have you fallen into line?
Then hark for the sound of my drum,
  And watch till I give you a sign;
When, bright little soldiers of mine,
  Shoulder your arms and March."

But the winter wind and the sleet
  That never to April belong,
She chases and hunts through the street,
  She hurries and drives them along;
And with clarion voice and strong
  She orders them to March!

Then she quickens the violet's heart,
  And says to the daffodil, "Dear,
Are you getting ready to start?
  Let me whisper in your ear
That the spring-time is almost here,
  It is now on the March!"

LETTER FROM CALIFORNIA.

Comfort and Sunshine.

OAKLAND, CAL., Feb. 22, 1888.

That California is a wonderfully large and beautiful state is better appreciated when one travels from one end to the other. By rail from the extreme southern portion to Sacramento is 704 miles, from Sacramento to the extreme northern line is nearly 400 miles more, making 1100 miles of continuous railroad north and south, all in one great state. Los Angeles to San Francisco is nearly a twenty-four hours' ride. The Fernando tunnel, over a mile long, the Tehachapi mountain country, and that wonderful piece of engineering, "the loop," where the road is made to turn snake-like and climb up and over itself, are passed in the night. A rock rolled against our train and tore off the steps of one end of our car, but did no material damage.

The portion of the Mojave desert crossed is mountainous, and no one on the train would care to exchange places with the Chinese workmen living there in tents. Most of the night and the morning hours are passed in the great San Joaquin valley, which is 75 miles wide and hundreds of miles long. This great valley contains the enormous wheat fields for which California is famous. Here wheat is grown to perfection; none better is produced in the country. The most of the product is shipped to Great Britain by steamer. I am told that the crop per acre is gradually growing less year after year. The valley is so hot in summer nothing else will grow without irrigation. At Merced, irrigation by wholesale has been inaugurated, and a reservoir covering a number of hundred acres, and a distributing canal 27 miles long, was built, and the supply is expected to be sufficient to irrigate 500,000 acres of land, which will cause that section to blossom like more favored localities. The turning on of the water was made the occasion of a great ceremony, presided over by the governor of the state and other dignitaries.

Oakland is a prosperous city of 50,000 people, and, as everybody knows, is the favorite surburban home of many San Francisco business men. The city is the nicest place I have yet found in California. From a disinterested point of view I should consider it a far more desirable dwelling place than Los Angeles, Pasadena, or any other part of southern California. The nights are a great deal warmer, and that deathly chill in the air, so discernable in the southern part after sunset, is lacking here. Pasadena to-day is the highest-cost place in the country to live in, and there is mighty little comfort to be had there at any price. Horse manure is dumped into the streets and alongside thereof to grade with, and for a health-resort there is too much dampness, and in point of drainage and acknowledgment of ordinary health laws, Los Angeles is as far behind Pasadena as it is larger. I have seen overflow from a cesspool in front of a leading hotel in Pasadena that smelled so badly that one would need to cover the nostrils in passing. The beef used all through southern California is the tough Spanish or Mexican variety, and is hardly fit to eat, providing one has the strength to cut it.

Living in Oakland is more like the East. Better accommodations, better food, better climate, there are fewer real estate sharps, the streets are nicely graded and macadamized, and there is a good system of cable cars. Communication with San Francisco (which is worth crossing the Continent to see), across the bay, four miles, by large and swift ferryboats, is sure and frequent. The advantages of Oakland as a dwelling place are many, and need to be seen to be appreciated. It has probably the only free railroad in the world. When the Central Pacific secured the right to run trains through Seventh street, it was stipulated that no fare should be charged, so that anyone can ride some five miles through the city on a steam railroad train without paying anything. A half-dozen different stations are included in this distance. Of course, the travel to San Francisco, notwithstanding the free travel between stations in Oakland city, is enormous, and that's where the profit comes in.

I went out to the Presidio to-day, the government reservation near the Golden Gate, to a military review. The national and state troops, with all their splendor, made a grand display; better than for many years, so it was said. The governor reviewed the troops, and 70,000 people were spectators. Uncle Sam has a fine place for permanent quarters for his defenders, and the climate here is in full sympathy with military training, for it can be comfortably performed out doors every day in the year.

San Francisco and her toboggan slides, over which millions of people are transported in the admirable cable cars, will, for lack of space, have to be written about later. A. L. H.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, MARCH 9, 1888.

New Jersey has a new high license and local option law.

---

Emperor William of Germany is dangerously ill, and apparently must soon go the way of all the earth.

---

The Boston Journal states "upon the most reliable authority" that Gov. Ames will accept a third nomination.

---

A bill has been prepared by the Democratic members of the ways and means committee reducing the internal revenue taxes about $24,500,000 yearly, most of the reduction being on tobacco, and the balance coming from the repeal of the special taxes on liquor dealers.

---

Acting upon a decision of the U. S. supreme court in a Kansas case, wherein it was asserted that that the people cannot barter away the morals and health of the public, it is said the Prohibitionists of the country contemplate an attack upon the constitutionality of all license laws.

---

A Medium who five years ago predicted that Oliver Ames would be governor now goes one better with the prophecy that he will become president. The governor ought to give that medium one of his very best shovels—and advise him to use it diligently rather than spend his time in evolving such predictions.

---

The C. B. & Q. Railroad seems to be gaining a victory over the striking engineers, its train service being practically as complete now as it was before the strike. There has been some talk of a general strike of the brotherhood throughout the country to force the C. B. & Q. to terms, but there is no probability that such a foolhardy and unlawful conspiracy will be undertaken.

---

Of 23 towns in this part of the state which held their annual meeting on Monday, eight voted in favor of license and fifteen against it. Seven towns which were no-license last year have now changed over to license, while the 739 majority of a year ago against license has given place to a majority of 342 the other way. These changes indicate that many voters are governed more by whim than conviction on this question. There is need of more conscience in this vote.

Claus Spreckles, the sugar king of the Pacific slope, has come East with the avowed purpose of building a big refinery for the purpose of fighting the sugar trust. Spreckles has monopolized everything in his line on the western slope long enough to become enormously rich, but the inclination of the sugar trust to encroach on his territory of course has nothing to do with his charitable desire to save the people of the East from the extortions of the trust.

Our legislators manifest a singular determination to push through the Beverly division bill without discussion,—or the Senate has done so, at least. The subject is to be aired in the House next Tuesday, and if there are sound and weighty reasons for the division they should be brought to light at that time. As yet the only argument for it appears to be the desire of a group of wealthy citizens to have a town created where they can live practically without taxation. The Beverly Times draws this pleasant picture of the members of this Legislature who visited the proposed new town on the 22d ult.:—

"It is a fact that a large delegation from the Massachusetts Legislature paid a visit to Beverly Farms and spent the day—how? We can only judge by their condition as they passed through the old town in barges en route for the railroad station. In front of the residence of one honored citizen they stopped, and gave three cheers and cat calls. As they passed the house of another citizen they took off their hats and kissed their hands to his wife who sat at the window. Young ladies walking on the street were insulted in a like manner. Is it any wonder that old Beverly is indignant when she learns that such are the men who will vote to sever her territory?"

A SAD TRAGEDY.

Springfield was visited, Wednesday afternoon, by the worst horror the city has ever experienced. The office of the Daily Union, at the corner of Main and Worthington streets, was burned out, and seven of its employes, five men and two women, met a terrible death, two others being seriously and perhaps fatally injured. The Union moved into these quarters only three months ago. Its press and mailing rooms were in the basement, the counting room on the first floor, and the editorial and composing rooms on the fifth floor. About 4 p. m. smoke was discovered coming up an old, unused elevator well at the rear of the building, and almost before the thirty occupants of the upper floor knew there was a fire, the rooms were filled with a smoke so dense they could neither see nor breathe, and escape by the stairs, near the shaft, was cut off. Most of the editors and employes escaped by the rear windows to the roof of the adjoining building, but those who rushed to the front of the building found themselves hemmed in, with no outlet but the windows, forty feet from the ground. The elevator, in that part of the building, strangely failed to work at the critical moment, and they fled to the windows, and as the flames came nearer some of them crawled out and stood on a sign, hanging to the window sills with their hands. The fire department responded promptly, but it seemed an age before it reached the windows in the fifth story. A ladder was put to the fourth story, and the sight of rescue so near seemed to madden the suffering group at the windows, who dropped in succession to the sidewalk below. Six fell in this way, some of them forced off and some madly leaping, and the crowd groaned and turned their heads away as they whirled through the air. Foreman Goulding of the composing room, and Miss Gertie Thompson, a proof-reader, perished in the flames. The fire spread with terrible rapidity, and the tragedy was over in fifteen minutes, the fire being confined mainly to the upper story. The total loss is perhaps $50,000; covered by insurance. The Union will for the present be issued from the Republican office, but will return to its quarters as soon as they can be repaired. A relief fund has been started for the benefit of the sufferers by the disaster, nearly $1500 being subscribed the first day.

LOCAL NOTICES.

Get a pair of common sense shoes at Eager's.

Don't forget the great Fire Insurance Sale in Caryl's block, Palmer, which will last only a few more days.

Ballots printed for any one and every one, and no confidences betrayed. Accurate work and at very short notice.

PALMER AND VICINITY.

One case of scarlet fever on Dublin street.

Sears & Cook are out with a handsome new delivery wagon.

C. G. Shaw has closed up his flour and grain business on Main street.

The warrant for the annual town meeting will be found in another column.

Rev. W. H. Dearborn of Hartford, Ct., will preach at St. Paul's Universalist church next Sunday.

A. M. Bond and George A. Smith have been drawn as jurors to attend the next term of the superior court.

Mrs. E. L. Wallace, the vocalist, will remove to Brattleboro, Vt., next week, where she will remain permanently.

The total receipts from the two presentations of the cantata "Ruth," last week amounted to about $200.

The Woman's Relief Corps of this village has invited the Springfield and Warren corps to visit them this evening.

Charles Powers of Brimfield contemplates erecting two new tenement houses on Dewey's hill the coming spring.

C. Benjamin of Wales has opened a fish market on South Main street, in the building formerly occupied by F. C. Hatch.

Palmer Lodge, I. O. O. F., is increasing its numerical strength rapidly, and is now one of the most flourishing in the state.

New telephones are being placed in the offices of J. F. Holbrook in this village, and and the Boston Duck Co. at Bondsville.

W. A. Perry entertained a private party in Commercial block last evening. A supper and dance were the features of the evening.

The insurance sale of clothing still continues in the store in Caryl's block, large quantities of goods having been sold the past week.

Next Wednesday, at the district court room, from 8 to 10 p. m., is the last chance to get your name on the voters' list before town meeting.

An interesting letter from Rev. F. W. Betts, descriptive of Southern scenes, will be found on the first page, also one from our California correspondent.

Business at J. H. Smith & Co's. shoddy factory, which has been suspended for several weeks on account of the high water, was resumed Monday morning.

Haskell Allen, the famous hunter of this section, reports having captured about fifty foxes since Jan. 1, besides quite a number of other less valuable animals.

The high school building committee met last Saturday and again on Tuesday afternoon, but nothing was done regarding the awarding of the contract for the erection of the building.

A careful count has clearly demonstrated the awful fact that there is at least one hundred widows in this village and its immediate environments. Think of it, ye men of Palmer. And leap year, too!

John Fuller, living in the north part of town, died Tuesday, after a comparatively brief illness, at the age of 74. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon at his late residence, many from this village attending.

Another union meeting of the four Democratic clubs of the town will be held at Hibernian Hall this evening. Campaign issues will be discussed at length, and a ticket for the annual town meeting decided upon.

At the district court last Saturday some minor matters were transacted and this civil entry made: Daniel Eagan of Brimfield vs. Joseph St. George of Brimfield, for an action of tort; Gardner for plaintiff, Taft & Kenefick for defendant.

The third farmers' institute of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society will be held at the Weeks House hall next Tuesday at 10.30 a. m. The subject for discussion will be: "How to Make Farming Pay." A large attendance is expected.

The young people of the Baptist society furnished an hour's pleasant entertainment and presented some very pretty tableaux at the "winter carnival" Tuesday evening, while the ladies showed an attractive fancy table. The net receipts of the evening were about $25.

The cantata "Ruth" was repeated at the rink Wednesday evening, all children under 15 years being admitted free, and the house was filled, many adults also attending. The children should be grateful to those who worked hard to give them an evening's entertainment free of charge.

The choir of St. Paul's Universalist church has organized as follows for the ensuing year: Tenor, M. E. Howard of North Brookfield; soprano, Miss O. M. VanWagner of Springfield; alto, Mrs. H. E. Huntley; baritone, George W. Ely; organist, Mrs. W. A. Weld of Palmer.

The board of selectmen have been in session in this village nearly every day this week, getting the annual report of the town ready for publication. The board is desirous of having an office established in this village where they can transact the business of the town more conveniently.

A new street has been laid out by the selectmen on Dewey's hill, from the head of school street east toward the carpet mill road past the house of William Rhodes. A new street has also been laid out from Park street up the hill near the house of Frank Merriam.

The following pupils in the Whiting district school have not been absent during the past term: Lula Moore and Herbert Thompson. Lula Moore, Lena Bartlett, Etta Bickford, Sadie Whiting, Jessie Whiting, Mary Laboute, Lugene Bartlett, Percy Bickford, Freddie Laboute, and James Riley, have not been tardy.

Mrs. Mary A. Livermore delivered the last lecture in the high school course at the Second Congregational church Friday evening. There was a fair audience, and the net receipts of the course, which will be added to the treasury of the Palmer High School Improvement Association, amount to about $25.

The Patterson Club met at the residence of the Misses Snow on Maple street Tuesday evening, and was highly entertained. The evening's programme consisted of piano solos by Miss Lena Brown and Mrs. W. C. Greene, vocal solos by Mrs. H. E. Huntley and Miss Cora Brown, and a reading by W. W. Leach.

S. R. Blodgett, the florist, has the plans and specifications in readiness for the construction of a fine residence on Dewey's hill, the dimensions of which will be 48x30 feet, and two stories high. The material used in construction upon the outside and inside will be whitewood, and it is said that the structure will be one of the finest in this section.

A number of Palmer people went to Springfield Wednesday evening to witness the destructive work of the Union block fire. During the attempts of the firemen to raise a ladder to the fifth story, where the terrified inmates were crying for help, one prominent resident of the city, who saw that their efforts were practically of no avail, was heard to remark: "Send for the Palmer fire department to quench those flames and rescue the perishing," he having learned of the local company's efficient work at the North Wilbraham fire.

The town historical committee held a special meeting Monday afternoon and further perfected the work preparatory to publishing the town history, for which the town has already made a small appropriation. E. B. Gates, one of the active members of the committee, reported that he had made a complete map of the town of Palmer, showing all the original land grants. He has also compiled a genealogy of all the families that lived in Palmer during the first one hundred years of its existence, which will be of great value to present and future generations. He was given a vote of thanks by the committee for his untiring efforts in compiling the work.

The coming town report will show these figures: Orders drawn by the selectmen for bridges, $1655; railings, $235; highways, $3792; sewers, $248; paupers, $6143: contingencies, $3277; prosecuting committee, $1000. The school board has paid for: Teacher's salaries, $10,401; text books and supplies, $1073; transporting pupils to high school, $899; fuel, $725; care of houses, $657; contingencies, $472; repairs, $362; salaries of school committee, $600; total, $15,186. They recommend these appropriations for next year: Salaries of teachers, $10,800; fuel, $800; care of houses, $700; contingencies, $700; repairs, $1000, salary of committee, $600; total, $16,600. There is now $1132 in the treasury.

Personal.

Mrs. J. Masterson has returned from a visit to Fitchburg.

Mrs. W. W. Leach has been spending the week at Somerville.

D. W. Taft of the State House, Boston, spent Saturday in town.

H. W. Munger, the merchant tailor, has been quite ill this week.

Miss Hattie Littleton of New York made a brief stop in town Tuesday.

Mrs. H. Reid of Ware has been visiting at the Converse House this week.

G. L. Hitchcock, of Keene, N. H., formerly of this place, was in town this week.

Freight Conductor Hanley of the New London Northern railroad, is somewhat ill.

Miss E. Weeks of Ware has been visiting relatives at the Weeks House this week.

W. H. Hellyar of Boston spent Sunday here as the guest of James F. Fenton of the Converse House.

Fred Cady of Hampden, formerly of this place, will succeed J. G. Tuttle as clerk in A. E. Park's grocery store.

F. G. Leach of Springfield, formerly of this place, spent Wednesday in town among his friends and acquaintances.

Charles Bannister, recently employed by C. T. Brainard, has accepted a clerkship in Smith & Co's. store on Main street.

A Lawn Tennis Club.

The younger element of the village has now definitely determined to form a lawn tennis club for next season's sport. Excellent grounds have already been leased of Engineer Chilson of the Ware River Railroad, located on Knox avenue, between the residences of W. C. Hitchcock and Cyrus Knox. The grounds are to be ploughed soon and finely graded, making one of the best courts in this section of the state. A meeting will be held next week, at which time the club will be organized and a board of officers chosen. A paper has been circulated this week among those who have expressed an intention of joining the club, and also among others less enthusiastic, with remarkably good results. The club will undoubtedly have a large membership, and start off at the opening of the season, May 30th, very auspiciously. A regular lawn tennis club will be a novel organization for Palmer, and the game promises to become one that will be very popular.

Condition of the Roads.

Road Commissioner Loomis has been unusually busy during the last two weeks locating and repairing the roads temporarily until warmer weather arrives, when all that was recently done to them will be removed and replaced by permanent work. Most of the roads in town that were damaged by the freshet have been made passable, but this has been done under great disadvantages, as in many instances large quantities of dirt are needed where the roads have been washed badly, and as the ground is frozen so hard it makes it rather difficult to obtain dirt without great expense. The selectmen state that the roads were never in better condition than before the flood, as they have made a careful examination of them and know whereof they speak. As near as it can now be estimated it will take an expenditure of $4000 to properly repair them and build the new iron bridges, which will make the tax-payers groan a trifle. The total expenditure upon all the roads in town the past year has not exceeded the appropriation, for which the present road commissioner is deserving of much credit.

Town Officers.

The Democratic clubs in town are reported to have agreed upon a ticket for selectmen, composed of D. F. Holden, Joseph Kerrigan and H. T. Bishop, and it is also reported that they propose to run H. G. Loomis for town clerk and treasurer, apparantly feeling that they must put up a Republican in order to stand any chance of defeating Mr. Shaw, the present clerk and treasurer, who has served faithfully these many years, and has given universal satisfaction so far as we can learn. The Democrats are meeting two or three times a week, and hope by thorough organization and faithful work to put their ticket through successfully. Outside these clubs there seems to be but little interest as yet in the approaching election of town officers. It is hoped that Capt. Clark will not insist upon retiring from further service, as he could undoubtedly be reëlected with the rest of the old board. The terms of Dr. Smith and Dr. Ruggles on the school board expire this spring, but both will probably be candidates for reëlection.

Probate Court Matters.

At a session of the probate court held in Springfield Wednesday, the following business was transacted for this section of the county: Administration granted on the estates of—Jennie P. Rand, late of Monson, Nehemiah W. Rand administrator; Isaac H. Robbins, late of Monson, George H. Newton administrator; Eliza J. Lyon, late of Wales, Julius M. Lyon administrator; Laura D. Alden, late of Monson, Ira G. Potter administrator. Wills proved of—Louisa H. Colton, late of Wilbraham, Jane E. Hancock executrix; Walter Hitchcock, late of Hampden, Ira G. Potter, executor; Aaron B. Gallup, late of Palmer, Wilbur J. McElwain executor; Emily J. Smith, late of Palmer, John W. Smith executor; Nathan M. Goodale, late of Brimfield, Sarah H. Goodale executrix; Albert Fuller, late of Ludlow Albert E. Fullere xecutor. Frank E. Morris was appointed guardian of Esther M. Robbins of Monson, minor, and an inventory was filed in the estate of Abegail W. Atchinson, late of Ludlow, real $3500, personal, $100.

BONDSVILLE.

One new member was added to the M. E. church Sunday.

The W. C. T. U. met with Mrs. George Aldrich Wednesday afternoon.

The young people of the M. E. Sunday-school will present the latest operetta in about two weeks.

About twenty-five of the friends of Master Leon and Miss Mabel Ryther gave them a surprise party Saturday evening. They spent a very pleasant time, and left a pair of cuff buttons and a shopping bag as tokens of their esteem.

Rumor has it that the scholars going to the high school at Palmer next term will be carried to Thorndike and there take the train. It could be done cheaper, and it certainly would be more pleasant for the scholars.

LUDLOW.

Austin F. Nash is settling the estate of N. A. Harris.

Edward E. Fuller is expecting to tear down his barn and build greater the coming season.

Dea. G. C. Clark had meat taken from his sled in his own yard last week by hands unauthorized.

Potato culture was the topic discussed by the Harvest Club at A. L. Bennett's last Wednesday evening.

Three persons united with the Congregational church last Sabbath on profession of faith, making over 40 who have thus joined since Mr. Dickey's pastorate of less than 5 years, and there is now quite a religious interest with the young of his church.

At the annual meeting of the First Parish last Monday, Dea. Henry S. Jones was chosen moderator; C. P. Jones clerk, treasurer, and collector; James O. Kendall, Frank D. Sikes, Cyril A. Southworth, Jr., parish committee. The treasurer's report shows a balance of $2 in favor of the parish. New singing-books are to be introduced into the church the coming year.

BRIMFIELD.

Sanford Booth has been drawn as a juror for the next term of the superior court.

Miner Miller has bought a laundry at Putnam, Ct, and is to remove there soon.

The town treasurer's books show the expenditures of the town for the past year to have been as follows: For repairs of highways, $1031.85; for specific repairs on Palmer road, $631.85; for bridges, $354.22; for snow paths, $11.36; for schools, $1857.34; for school-house repairs, $75.57; for paupers, $1826.63; for officers' salaries, $668.43; for miscellaneous expenses and town debt, $4813.24. Total, $11,270 28.

Quite a number of real estate sales are reported. Fred T. Parker has sold his place to a Mr. Bemis of Rowe; Charles F. Crawford has sold his Lee farm to a party in Wales; Lucius Agard has sold his farm to Charles F. Crawford; Peter W. Moore his farm to Lucius Agard; William K. Howard his farm to Peter W. Moore; Samuel S. Livermore his farm to John W. S. Witherell and George C. Phimpton. Other parties are looking at farms and places.

WARREN.

Miss Anna King of Nashua is spending a few days in town.

Seven persons united with the Methodist church last Sunday.

J. W. Chadsey slipped on the ice and sprained his ankle last Friday.

Mrs. Kingman and daughter left for their home in Minneapolis last Tuesday.

The high school closed to-day. All the schools will commence March 26th.

Mr. Foster has the contract for building A. L. Converse's house on Main street.

The Ladies' Literary Society met with Miss Jennie Ramsdell Tuesday afternoon.

Rev. Mr. Clark and A. L. Converse attended the installation at North Brookfield last Wednesday.

The woman's board will meet next Thursday at the chapel. Rev. Mr. Blanchard will address the meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Morgan and daughter, from Hartford, are spending a few days with their friends in town.

William Lally, who was injured by jumping from the cars, has been taken to the Tewksbury almshouse.

Mr. W. E. Patrick, who has for several years had charge of the milk which is sent to Boston, has resigned.

Miss Mary Burbank and Miss Mary S. Hitchcock join a party of friends Monday for a trip to Washington.

There will be an entertainment at the ladies' parlor of the Congregational church this evening. Cake and ice cream will be served.

The social committee of the Christian Endeavor Society held a reception at the house of Mrs. William Powers Tuesday evening.

The Loyal Legion gave a concert at the town hall last Sunday evening, which was listened to by a full house, and they received much praise for their singing and speaking.

Mrs. Hanscom of Lowell, who was to give an address before the Christian Endeavor Society Monday evening, was detained by sickness, and will come some time in the future.

THREE RIVERS.

John F. Twiss has added two new horses to his livery stable.

Mrs. Abbie Upham of Norwich, Mass., is visiting her sister, Mrs. M. A. Squier.

Ed. Tetrault, clerk in Trudeau & Rivers's dry goods department, has returned from a week's vacation.

Mrs. A. W. Green of this place started for Oakland, Cal., Wednesday, where she will join A. L. Hills and party.

The second of the series of lectures will be given in the Baptist church next Sunday evening. Subject: "Christ as a teacher and moral reform."

The W. C. T. U. of this village and Palmer will hold a flag festival next Friday evening at the Union church. Good music may expected. Cake and ice cream will be served.

If the person who took the watch from the Baptist church one night last week will return it, he will save the annoyance of a visit from an officer.

The "Poetical Wedding" entertainment at the Baptist church last week was a great success, the little folks carrying out their parts very creditably. By request it will be repeated at a later date.

Miss Jennie Kendrick, who has been learing to telegraph at the New London Northern station, has accepted a situation at Stafford Springs, Ct., as manager and operator for the Postal Telegraph, Cable, and United Lines Telegraph Company. She took charge March 1st.

The young men's Bible-class is to give a series of lectures. The first one will be next Tuesday evening at the Union church, by Rev. Clarion H. Kimball of Holyoke. All who heard Mr. Kimball lecture on the "Battle of Gettysburg," last season, will be glad to hear him again.

The schools closed Friday for a short vacation. The following are the names of scholars who were perfect in deportment: First primary—Alexander Lapointe, Albert Laramie, Arthur Laramie, Moise Mulleur. Second primary—John D. Horan, William J. Morin. Third primary—Nora Lane, Nellie Casey. First intermediate—Jennie Connor, Henry O'Connor. Second intermediate—A. Perry Haynes, Walter G. Russell, Samuel Switchell. Grammar—Inez A. Hunt, Philip C. Storey, Lizzie A. Twiss, Lucy B. Twiss.

WEST WARREN.

Daniel Sheehan, the veteran watchman for the Warren cotton mills, is confined to his bed with rheumatism.

W. M. Fisherdick, station agent at Bondsville, and G. H. Perkins, station agent at East Brookfield, were both in town Sunday.

A rumor was started that Crossman's Hall, where the Good Templars' fair was held, was unsafe, but it stood a hard test Saturday night all right.

The Good Templars' fair closed last Saturday night after a very successful run, and the lodge will net about $110. The drawing for the prizes came off without any interruption, though there was considerable quaking amongst those most interested, and resulted as follows: Felix Labrie, West Warren, marble-top table; John Lester, West Warren, child's chair; Mrs. E. T. Hall, West Warren, mirror; John Weir, West Warren, silver watch; Miss Agnes Marshall, West Warren, gold watch; Mrs. R. S. Crawford, West Warren, easy chair; Mrs. N. W. Thompson, West Warren, barrel of flour; Phil. B. Hall, West Warren, Turkish rug; Mrs. M. P. Marks, Ware, French clock; John Caldwell, West Warren, hanging lamp; Miss Martha Proctor, West Warren, bed lounge; W. J. Cox, Southboro, parlor suite; M. B. Burredge, Spencer, parlor stove; A. M. Chandler, Warren, oil painting; Mrs. Isabella McFarland, West Warren, box of cigars; Romeo Curtis, West Warren, meerschaum pipe.

The selectmen and constables have again come to the conclusion that "something must be done," and as a consequence the few liquor dealers are very wary and anxious as to who will answer to the call of "next." The fun began a little over a week ago, and Collette's drug store has been raided twice in a week. The first time the officers caught their man napping, and as they failed Friday night to find anything, they asked A. P. Benway to open his millinery store in the same block, and on a table the officers found two glasses and a bottle with a little Cognac brandy in it, and in a shed they found thirty gallons of whisky, about five gallons of gin and half a dozen of Cognac brandy. At Joseph Tooher's "Mountain House," Saturday night, the officers had a regular bonanza. They had an audience of about twenty men and three or four women, and on a second visit they found over forty men and seven or eight women. Tooher's wife patted Constable Collins on the cheek with her closed fist, and "Jack" says it wasn't a love-pat either, but as they came away with a lot of whisky and beer he feels satisfied.

THORNDIKE.

Michael Moriarty is very ill at his home.

James Reily has accepted a position with John Molloy as barber.

The public schools closed on Friday for a vacation of three weeks.

A. M. Bond has been drawn as juror for the next term of superior court.

John Sullivan, who has been in the meat business, has sold out and will go out of the business. A good opening for some live man.

There is some talk of having a grand ball Easter Monday night, with music by the Marlboro orchestra, whch is spoken of so highly.

A fire started in the picker room of No. 1 mill this morning, but was soon extinguished. The damage was about $150, done to the cotton by water.

Elmer F. Dickson was in town this week en route for Gaspe Basin, Canada, where he is to fill the position as consul, having been appointed a short time ago by President Cleveland.

A sociable was held at the Congregational church Tuesday evening which was well attended and much enjoyed. The amusements consisted of singing, speaking, dialogues, pantomines, etc.

A horse attached to Clark & Hastings's meat cart became frightened and ran off the bank leading from Pine avenue on Saturday, demolishing the cart and spilling the contents. Fortunately no one was hurt.

The attention of the town authorities is called to the condition of the road near the Catholic church in this place. Large pools of water gather in front of the entrance to the church, making it almost impossible for a lady to walk in that neighborhood. The town authorities should remove the difficulty before another winter sets in.

Arrangements will probably be made to have the season of ball playing here open with a game on Fast Day between the regular team and a good picked nine. A meeting will be held at Lawton's Hall next Monday evening, at 7 o'clock, to form an association in this village for the purpose of assisting in retaining the local team for the coming year. As it is predicted that the coming season will eclipse any of the past in this village, all citizens should be present and give the boys a good send off, as there will be arrangements made with good clubs to play here, and such cannot be done without some assistance.

The meeting of the Democratic club, which was held at Lawton's Hall Thursday evening of last week, was largely attended. Delegates from all the clubs were present and expressed their views regarding the several offices of the town. The meeting promised to be an interesting and profitable one until the preferences for selectmen were called for, then came the fun. Mr. Dillon had his friends who wanted him as one of the selectmen; Mr. Kerigan was wanted by his friends, and after much discussion it was voted to withdraw both men from the field, as it would be an impossibility to elect both of them. Since then Mr. Dillon has withdrawn, and it seems as though his opponent, Mr. Kerigan, should do the same. Then let the caucus nominate a man, and this will bring the party together. It is said that if the different clubs do not stand by their agreement of Thursday, which is to pull both men out, there will be a row in camp.

MONSON.

Charles Hathaway is confined to his house by illness.

Prof. Dustan, of the academy, spends his vacation at his home in Weston.

Measles are very prevalent, and the physicians report a large number of cases.

The Bible-class of the Universalist church met with M. W. J. Ricketts last evening.

George H. Flynt, assistant teacher at the academy, goes to Lincoln during vacation.

Miss Ella Bills gave a very pleasant drive whist party to a few of her friends, last evening.

The winter term of the academy closed Tuesday. The spring term commences March 21st.

Officers raided the saloon under Curley's block last Saturday night, but failed to find any liquors.

Dennis Nelligan has rented a store in Davis block, and will open a stock of dry and fancy goods.

There will be a sociable and chicken-pie supper at the Methodist church next Wednesday evening.

William King contemplates building a cottage on his Main street lot south of his dwelling house.

Mrs. Alfred Wallace has received a payment of part of the insurance on the life of her late husband.

Rufus L. Aldrich cut his foot quite severely while chopping wood for Bliss & Moulton last Friday.

Miss Gertrude Hall, perceptress at the academy, is spending her vacation at her home in Dover, N. H.

G. H. Newton sells the personal property of the estate of Isaac H. Robbins on Saturday of next week at 10 o'clock a. m.

The horse hitched to Pendergast's delivery wagon had a lively run up Washington street last Saturday, and was stopped at the depot, but not until the oyster bucket had emptied its contents.

About these days the candidates for official town honors are beaming with smiles toward their constituents, and greeting the voters with genial expressions which they hope may be advantageous on election day.

The third lecture, which was given by Amos Andrews, on "State Charities," at the academy Tuesday evening, was very largely attended. Dr. G. E. Fuller will deliver the next lecture March 23d. Subject: "Reminiscences of the late Civil War."

Hi Henry's minstrels gave a fair performance at Central Hall Monday evening. The hall was packed to the doors, and their was barely standing room, but many came away disappointed, as the entertainment was not as good as when the company was here two years ago.

The highway just over the Fay bridge on the Palmer road is a disgrace to any town. Every spring the high water washes it out and makes it impassable for some time, and Monson people think it is high time the town of Palmer put it in proper shape, and unless it is done soon the county commissioners will be called upon to look the matter over.

The students that attended Hi Henry's concert contrary to the rules as laid down by the principal of the academy, have been suspended from school for misdemeanor, and must apologize before being reinstated. The trustees of the academy who were present at the entertainment seemed to have enjoyed themselves, and will continue in their present capacity.

The young people of St. Patrick's church are to give an entertainment in Central Hall St. Patrick's evening, Saturday, the 17th, consisting of the popular drama "Fidelity," and the farce "Irish Assurance and Yankee Modesty." The choir will also give a concert under the direction of Miss Mary Cantwell. A good deal of work has been spent on the evening's programme, and an enjoyable time is promised.

At the annual meeting of the Monson free library and reading-room association Monday evening, this board of officers was elected: President, Dr. G. E. Fuller; vice-president, A. A. Gage; secretary, F. E. Morris; treasurer, S. F. Cushman; auditor, E. F. Morris. B. A. Day was re-elected a director for five years. Rev. F. S. Hatch, Prof. Dana Dustan, and Charles G. King were elected members of the corporation. The report of the librarian for the year ending March 1, showed the number of volumes in the library to be 3813. There have been added during the year 187 volumes, of which 141 were purchased, and the others presented by different persons. The circulation for the year was 9027; the average daily about 29.15, and the number of persons drawing books was 733. The number of newspapers and magazines on file in the reading-room is 20, and are the same as last year.

WARE AND VICINITY.

The electric light company expects to have the street lights in operation next Monday night.

Fire was discovered in one of the picker rooms of the Otis Company's mills Saturday morning, but was extinguished before great damage was done. It probably caught from the friction of some substance in the cotton.

Hon. Elijah A. Morse of Canton, ex-senator and member of the governor's council, will give a free temperance lecture at the town hall on Tuesday evening, March 20th. The committee who has charge of the arrangements has engaged the Ware Cornet Band to furnish music.

The Trinity Episcopal society has purchased the Hartwell property, corner of Park and Pleasant streets, where their new church will be located. The price for the lot was about $3700. Rev. C. W. Duffield, E. H. Gilbert, Dr. E. H. Guild, C. H. Lee and C. A. Julia have been elected a building committee, and it is expected the church will be erected the coming season.

The Young Men's Library Association recieved on Tuesday the present of a very handsome tall clock from the Otis Company, through their treasurer, Mr. George F. Fabyan of Boston. The works are of English make, enclosed in a richly carved oak case. The clock has the Westminister and Cambridge chimes, which play at the quarters, and a very deep-toned hour gong. It stands facing the entrance of the library, and adds greatly to the charms of the already attractive rooms.

The Ware Center Farmers' Club met at their rooms Monday evening to talk over the matter of forming a grange. A large number of the farmers were present and much interested in the question. A. C. Stoddard of North Brookfield, one of the deputies of the state grange, was present with them and spoke on the subject. There were twelve who pledged themselves to join as charter members, and a few others who said that they would join after they saw the thing well started.

Mr. Middlecrib's cure for Rheumatism. R. J. Burdette

The selectmen's report is in the hands of the printer, and from it we are allowed to publish the following facts: The year was commenced with a debt of about $7000 for the expenses of last year; this has been paid, and there is now about $8000 in the treasury, making some $15,000 that has been raised by taxation more than has been expended. The expenditures have in nearly all cases been kept much below the appropriations. Some of the expenditures have been: For salaries, $2365.06; cemeteries, $592.42; police, $1854; contingent, $2373.50; street lights, $1370.70; interest, $2475.79; town hall debt, $4000; board of health, $313.25; water supply, $273.78; town hall, $2333.46—but $535.81 of this was for new construction, leaving the expense of running the town hall and repairs at $1797.65, while the receipts, aside from the appropriation, have been $1933.46.

Card.—We do sincerely thank our neighbors and friends who so kindly aided us in our sad bereavement in the death of our loved one. Also for the many kind words of sympathy sent us.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Stone.

Bondsville, March 7, 1887.

LEGISLATIVE DOINGS.

From our Special Correspondent.

Boston, March 7, 1888.

Most important of Thursday's action was that on the liquor question. The Senate assigned to the first place in the orders for March 7 the bill to change the standard of intoxicating liquors, offered by Senator Gleason of Plymouth. It makes the law read that "ale, porter, strong beer, lager beer, all wines, all malt liquors, and any beverage containing more than one per cent of alcohol, by volume, at 60 degrees Fahrenheit, as well as distilled spirits, shall be deemed to be intoxicating liquor within the meaning of this chapter." It reduces the standard of alcohol from three to one per cent.

In the House a liquor bill was reported unanimously from the liquor committee that no license of the first five classes (all except druggists') shall be issued to be exercised in any dwelling house, but this shall not prevent the issue of licenses to be exercised in stores and shops which have no interior connection with a dwelling tenement. Any license otherwise issued is to be void. Again, no license can be issued to be exercised in a room or shop which has interior connection with a dwelling or tenement, and opening such connection shall make the license void.

The Senate on Thursday amended the Beverly Farms bill and engrossed it without further debate by vote of 20 to 17.

Members of the Legislature are beginning to think that salaries have been advanced enough for the present, and they are disposed to challenge every bill which is presented from the public service committee. On the other hand, that committee says that it is perfectly ready to give the people all the facts in every case, and that they are by no means in favor of indiscriminate advances of salaries. On Thursday a bill was reported to make the salary of the secretary of state $4000 a year, instead of $3000, and on Friday they reported another bill to raise the salary of the attorney general from $4000 to $5000. At the same time they reported adversely on the petition of the assistant inspector of gas and gas meters that his annual stipend might be advanced. I wonder if there has been in recent years a general advance in private incomes all over the state, so that these advances are necessary in order to even up things and to do justice to men who are otherwise overworked or underpaid?

On Friday the Senate put through all its stages, under a suspension of the rules, the House bill to give inferior courts jurisdiction of cases of tort arising from injuries received by defective highways.

A resolve from the finance committee on Friday appropriates $9000 for determining town boundaries by triangulation in connection with the state survey.

On Monday there was no session of the Legislature, for it was town meeting day, when the local fences have to be looked after. It has always been the custom, as far as I know, for the Legislature to adjourn over that day, and often, also, it adjourns over the day of most town meetings in April.

But on Tuesday they came back and pitched into work with renewed vigor. Twenty committee hearings were on the list for that day, or more than for any other day of the session. One of them was the hearing of the education committee on the question of private or parochial schools. One of the speakers was President Eliot of Harvard University, who opposed any legislation which would tend intensify the present differences between Protestants and Catholics. It may be all right to some, he said, in those communities where the Protestants are in a majority, but he believed the consequences would be very undesirable in places where the Catholics are in a majority.

The same committee is also giving much attention to the plan of the state board of education for improving by better superintendence the condition of the country schools.

An adverse report has been made by the labor committee on repealing the law to make Labor Day a legal holiday. The same committee also reported in the Senate Tuesday afternoon a bill to provide for better ventilation and for more cleanliness in factories, workshops and schoolhouses.

It lays down the regulations and puts their enforcement in the hands of the building inspectors.

Tuesday afternoon a bill came into the House to allow Worcester county to borrow $75,000 for enlarging the jail and house of correction at Fitchburg, and another to allow the city of Worcester to issue $250,000 in 4 per cent bonds for the purpose of improving its public park system.

A great crowd gathered in the House Tuesday to hear the arguments on the bill to allow women to vote on the issue of liquor licenses. They were much the same arguments as on the previous stage of the bill, and the vote was much the same. There were 109 yeas to 95 nays and 7 pairs, against 118 yeas to 95 nays and 5 pairs last. Messrs. Call of Springfield and Ware of Boston were the only ones to change sides.

Wednesday afternoon the Senate debated the question of biennials in its three-fold form, and by a division of the subject they reached the following votes. In favor of biennial election of state officers, the vote was thus:

YEAS: Clark of Hampshire, Cook, Fletcher, Gleason of Worcester, Gleason of Plymouth, Glines, Hartwell, Hathaway, Keith of Plymouth, Keith of the Cape, Kingsley, Ladd, Marble, McAlpine, Messenger, Palmer, Pike, Sleeper, Southworth, Spellman, Sprague, Stevens, Towne, Walker—24.

NAYS:—Clark of Essex, Collins, Crosby, Dwyer, Howard, Roads, Shea, Sullivan—8.

Yea pairs, Tucker and Kimball, with Slattery and Perkins, nay.

Then they voted, 20 to 13, in favor of biennial elections of members of the Legislature, and then, 15 to 18, defeated biennial legislative sessions, as follows:

YEAS: Clark of Hampshire, Cook, Fletcher, Gleason of Worcester, Glines, Keith of the Cape, Kingsley, Ladd, Marble, Messenger, Pipe, Spellman, Stevens, Towne, Walker—15.

NAYS: Clark of Essex, Collins, Crosby, Dwyer, Gleason of Plymouth, Hartwell, Hathorne, Howard, Howland, Keith of Plymouth, McAlpine, Palmer, Roads, Shea, Sleeper, Southworth, Sprague, Sullivan—18.

The same pairs were announced as above.

After a hot debate the House assigned the license suffrage bill to March 15. The Beverly Farms debate has been assigned to next Tuesday. LANDON.

TOWN WARRANT.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—HAMPDEN, SS. To George W. Ely, Constable of the Town of Palmer, Greeting:

In the name of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, you are hereby directed to notify and warn all the inhabitants of the Town of Palmer qualified to vote in elections and town affairs to meet at the Town House in said Palmer, on MONDAY, the nineteenth day of March current, at 10 o'clock a. m., to act on the following articles, viz:

ARTICLE 1. To choose a Moderator to preside at said meeting.

ART. 2. To determine the number of Selectmen, Overseers of the Poor, Assessors, School Committee, and Constables the Town will elect for the ensuing year.

ART. 3. To act upon the reports of the Selectmen, School Committee and other Town Officers.

ART. 4. To determine the compensation of the Collector of Taxes for the ensuing year.

ART. 5. To see if the town will allow a discount upon the taxes that may be assessed for the ensuing year.

ART. 6. To determine the manner of collecting the taxes that may be assessed for the ensuing year, and state the terms and conditions of the same.

ART. 7. To elect all necessary Town Officers for the ensuing year.

ART. 8. To raise and appropriate such sums of money as may be necessary to defray the expenses of the town for the ensuing year.

ART. 9. To see if the town will authorize its Treasurer to borrow money in anticipation of the taxes for the current year, the same to be paid from said taxes.

ART. 10. To determine the manner of repairing the highways and bridges for the ensuing year.

ART. 11. To see if the town will continue to hire the rooms now occupied for a lockup and tramp room.

ART. 12. To vote by ballot, which shall be yes or no, in answer to the question, "Shall licenses be granted for the sale of intoxicating liquors in this town?"

ART. 13. To see what action the town will take in regard to choosing a Board of Health.

ART. 14. To see if the town will accept the list of jurors as revised by the Selectmen.

ART. 22. To see if the town will vote to pay the members of the fire department the amount of the certificates of service which have been issued to them by the board of engineers.

ART. 23. To see if the town will vote to pay the steamer company one hundred and fifty dollars, or any other sum, for services for the coming year.

ART. 24. To see if the town will instruct the assessors to make a new valuation of the property of the town and have the valuation printed for general distribution.

ART. 25. To see if the town will make an appropriation in addition to that made last year for putting the history of the town into manuscript and authorize the town history committee to procure the same to be properly done.

ART. 26. To see if the town will vote to raise and appropriate a sum of money for necessary aid to soldiers and sailors and their families, and the families of the slain, and entrust the same to the Merrick Post of the Grand Army of the Republic, according to the provisions of chapter 189 of the Acts of the year 1885.

ART. 27. To see if the town will vote to raise and appropriate a sum of money to extend the Central street sewer in the Depot village from Park street to near the head of Central street.

ART. 28. To see if the town will vote to raise and appropriate a sum of money to construct a branch of the Central street sewer in the Depot village, along Pleasant street to near the Congregational church.

ART. 29. To see if the town will vote to raise and appropriate a sum of money to drain Walnut street, near Converse avenue in the Depot village, and the yard about the school house in the Depot village.

ART. 30. To see if the town will vote to raise and appropriate a sum of money to repair the street in the Depot village, which leads northerly from Pine street past the house of George Lyman.

ART. 31. To see what action the town will take regarding the following bridges: The one across the Ware river near house of Jeremiah Dutton; the one across the Quaboag river at Blanchardville; and the two bridges across the Quaboag river near the house formerly occupied by M. C. Fenton, the last three being the same which were washed away by the late freshet.

ART. 32. To see if the town will accept and allow a road as laid out by the Selectmen in the Depot village and described as follows: Beginning on the easterly side of Park street, near the intersection of the carpet mill road, and in line of C. E. Dewey's land; thence running in line of said Dewey's land N. 35 E. 14 rods and 12 feet to a point 46 feet southeasterly from a stake and stones at the southwest corner of S. A. Blodgett's land. The proposed street is on the westerly side of the line described, and is 50 feet wide at Park street, narrowing to 46 feet at Blodgett's corner.

ART. 33. To see if the town will accept and allow a road as laid out by the Selectmen in the Depot village and described as follows: Beginning on the northerly side of School street and extending said street, easterly in the same course 8 rods to a stake and stones; thence S. 3½ E., 24½ rods to the north west corner of land of William Rhodes. The above described street is on the southerly and westerly side of the described, and is 50 feet wide.

ART. 34. To see what action the town will take toward fencing the cemetery at Palmer Center.

ART. 35. To see if the town will allow individuals to empty their water closets and sink drains into the sewers of the town, and if so, fix the charges therefor.

ART. 36. To see if the town will raise and appropriate an additional sum not exceeding one thousand dollars for the erection of the new high school building.

The polls will be open at 10 o'clock a. m., and close at 2 o'clock p. m. The names of Selectmen, Overseers of Poor, Assessors, School Committee, and Constables, who are voted for, must be all on one ballot. Town Clerk and Treasurer on a separate ballot.

And you are hereby directed to serve this warrant by posting up attested copies thereof at the different public places designated by the vote of the town, seven days at least, before the holding of said meeting, and cause this warrant to be printed in the PALMER JOURNAL, at least two issues before the holding of said meeting.

Hereof fail not, and make due return of this warrant, with your doings thereon, to the Town Clerk, on or before the holding of said meeting.

Given under our hands this eighth day of March, A. D. 1888.

NOW OPEN!

Great fire insurance sale commenced Saturday, March 3d, in Caryl's block, Palmer. Special notice—Over $47,000 worth of men's, boys' and children's clothing saved from the late New York fire must be closed out in ten days by order of the insurance companies. The appraisers for the insurance companies, after carefully examining this stock of clothing, concluded that the same was not so badly damaged as claimed by the assured clothing manufacturers, and failing to agree as to the actual loss, were forced to take the stock, turn it into money, and the goods must be sold at once in order to make a final settlement. All goods are appraised at forty cents on the dollar of manufacturers' cost. And this is all we want for them. The fire sale will enable the people of Palmer and vicinity to secure their clothing for almost nothing. We will tell you here of a few bargains. We will sell men's nice business suits, all to match for $3.65. This suit cost to manufacture $13.25, and if it does not suit you in every respect, or if you do not think it worth $13.25, bring it back at any time in four days and we will pay you $3.65. Elegant cheviot suits worth $15, must go for $4.95. Beautiful cassimere suits worth $17, marked $6.85; 1000 different kinds of diagonal, worsted and corkscrew suits, which cost to make about $20, we will sell for $9.75. Good working pants worth $2, are now marked at 75 cents. We have 60 different styles of cassimere pants at $1.20 that can't be bought elsewhere for less than $4. We have a large line of boys' suits, pleated black suits, suitable for the season, worth $5, but we will let them go at $1.75. $1500 men's overcoats, worth from $7.50 to $25, will be sold for from $3.85 to $9.80. Insurance Companies' salesrooms. Open evenings till 9 o'clock. CARYL'S BLOCK, Palmer. (2w49)

Very Wonderful

Are the effects produced by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Sores, Scabs, Glandular Swellings, Boils, Carbuncles, and all kinds of Humors disappear, as if by magic, by the use of this

STANDARD BLOOD-PURIFIER.

F. C. James, of Albany, Greene Co., Tenn., writes: "Ayer's Sarsaparilla saved the life of my only child. When three years old, her head was covered with Scrofulous Sores. She became almost helpless. Skillful physicians did all they could to relieve her, but failed. At last I purchased a bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, gave it to her according to directions, and she immediately began to improve. Encouraged by the result, I continued to give her this medicine until the cure was complete."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles $5.

Why Pay One Dollar?

When you can buy the Best Blood Purifier and Nerve Tonic for Fifty Cents.

THORN'S

Hop and Burdock Tonic

STANDS AT THE HEAD OF ALL

SARSAPARILLAS, BITTERS, TONICS,

And Similar Preparations.

It is prepared with the greatest care by I. B. Thorn, who has had twenty years of acutal experience in compounding Physicians' prescriptions, and is warranted not to contain a particle of aloes or any injurious drug.

It is composed of Sarsaparilla Root, Burdock Root, Prickly Ash Bark, Mandrake Root, Golden Seal Root, Dandelion Root and the best Northern grown Hops, the proportions of which when properly combined make the best preparation in existance for curing all blood diseases.

It is the Best Tonic and Invigorator, as Hundreds can Testify.

It cures Biliousness, Sick Headache, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, General Debility, Mental and Physical Exhaustion, and Nervous Prostration.

There is no other preparation like it, and no other that has had the sale in so short a time. Its merits have sold nearly Seventeen Thousand Bottles in the last two years.

THORNS'

Hop and Burdock Tonic

Is a Medicine, and Not a Drink,

And can be obtained of all Druggists and Country Merchants throughout the Country. Be sure and get the genuine and not accept the cheap trash that floods the market at double the price.

SULPHUR BITTERS

THE BEST AND PUREST MEDICINE EVER MADE.

TRUTHS FOR THE SICK.

It will drive the Humor from your system, and make your skin clean and smooth. Those Pimples and Blotches which mar your beauty are caused by impure blood, and can be removed in a short time, if you are wise and use the great blood purifier, SULPHUR BITTERS.

DON'T GIVE UP! What makes you tremble so? Your nerves are all unstrung, and need a gentle, soothing tonic to assist nature to repair the damage which your excesses have caused. Sulphur Bitters is NOT a cheap rum or poor whisky drink, to be taken by the glass, like other preparations, which stimulate only to destroy. Why suffer with Boils? Why rave with that terrible headache? Why lay and toss on that bed of pain with rheumatism?

If you have failed to receive any benefit from other medicines or doctors, do not despair. Use Sulphur Bitters. They will cure you when all others fail. No person can remain long sick who uses SULPHUR BITTERS.

The dose is small—only a teaspoonful. It is the best and cheapest medicine. Try it, and you will be satisfied. Get it of your druggist. Don't wait, get it at once. If you are suffering from Kidney Disease, and wish to live to old age, use Sulphur Bitters. They never fail to cure. SULPHUR BITTERS.

My dear Maria:
It is my desia
That you retia
From the fia,
For the flame is highia
Then I requia,
And coals are dear to every bia;
Especially in the Great Western summer resort, and the costly product of nature, and the barons, is going to be more costly still.

When next year's here
You need not fere,
Though coal be dere,
And mercury far down appere,
And diamonds blackest grace your ere,
For uncle's nere—
And winter will bring better chere.
The gas wells will then be in full operation, and the glistening bits of carbon redeemable without fear of our freezing to death for lack of fuel.

Two old sports accustomed to catch the granger at poker, are playing against one another. "I call you; what you got?" "Four aces." "What's yer outside card? I've got four aces myself!"—San Francisco Chronicle.

Mistress—Did you put the coal on the stove, Bridget?

New importation—I did, mum; but it will be sum toime before it gits hot, fur ther fire's out.—Tid Bits.

"What would you do with a man who does not keep his sidewalk clear of ice at this season of the year?" Cremate him, and spread his ashes where they would do the most good.—Boston Gazette.

Julian Hawthorne's new story is called "The Fatal Letter." It is supposed she discovered it in her husband's coat-pocket six weeks after she had placed it in his hands to mail.—Norristown Herald.

A clergyman on a sultry afternoon paused in his sermon and said: "I saw an advertisement for 500 sleepers for a railroad. I think I could supply at least fifty, and recommend them good and sound."—Stray.

One day Ernest had been seriously lectured by his mother, and finally was sent to the yard to find a switch, with which he was to be punished. He returned soon and said: "I couldn't find any switch, mamma, but here's a stone you can throw at me."—Harper's Magazine.

Mrs. Cassidy—Why don't you come down and see me, Mrs. McGinnis?

Mrs. McGinnis—And it's you that's talkin', Mrs. Cassidy; and not a sight did I see of ye since last Aister! Sure, if I lived as near to you as you do to me I'd be droppin' in every week.—Puck.

Railroad employe to superintendent—There has been an accident to the gravel train, sir, and one of our men is killed.

Superintendent—H'm, that's bad. Has the body been identified?

Employe—Yes, sir. It is the Count Garibaldi Spaghetti del Torso—Epoch.

St. Louis swain (returning from the opera)—Well, Miss Shawsgarden, did you enjoy the opera?

Miss Shawsgarden—Oh, very much, indeed; but I think, Mr. Swain, that charging you 15 cents a pint for peanuts was simply outrageous!—New York Sun.

Higgins—For goodness' sake, Wiggins, why do you wobble around the sidewalk so? Go home, you're flustrated!

Wiggins (indignantly)—I'm not! But I can't manage these new baggy trousers in a head wind, you know, and have to tack to get the wind on my beam.—Life.

Indignant passenger on surburban train (to man deeply absorbed in book and occupying whole seat)—My dear sir, don't you see this aisle is full of ladies standing up?

Man in seat (equally indignant)—My dear sir, haven't you any more politeness than to disturb a man when he's busy reading "The Gentleman's Own Book of Decorum."—Chicago Tribune.

The Fitness of Things.—Bereaved widow (to the undertaker)—The horses must be gentle, sir. I am very timid when in a carriage.

Burt was twelve years old. He came home from Sunday-school one day, and said he had taught a class of little boys.

"What possessed you to do such a thing?" asked his mother.

"O, I got along first rate. They began to giggle, and I told them if they didn't quit it I would lick every last one of them when Sunday-school was out. The superintendent said it was the stillest class there was."—Detroit Free Press.

Merchant to collector—John, are the Slimkinses going to receive to-day?

Collector—I saw their card in the papers to that effect.

Merchant—Well, take our bill for September and go up. You haven't been able to get in the last twenty-five or thirty times you called, but you can get there to-day. I tell you, John, society is a great blessing if you only look at it right.—Washington Critic.

An awful punishment.—They were cooing in the cold on the platform of a Sixth avenue elevated this morning, and as the train reached Eighth street a cold blast of wind caused her to snuggle up closer to her companion. "Ugh!" she chattered, "how bleak it is at this station; how awfully bleak." "Yes, dear," he said, with love-lit eyes, "but the next station will be Bleeker!" She silently took the tiny circlet of gold from her finger, and, with a mad shriek, sent it hurling into the street below. When they took her off she was stark, staring, raving mad.—New York Graphic.

BROTHER GARDNER ON HARD TIMES.

"As I was walking out in the back yard," began Brother Gardner, "Mister Darius Green, the white man, came along, and there was a powerful sad look on his face as he leaned over the fence and said:

"'Misser Gardner, this sufferin' has got to come to a cease.'

"'Has yer got the shakes and chills?' I axed.

"'Wuss dan dat, Misser Gardner. Ize working all de long week for ten shillin' a day, an' whar de money goes I can't tell. De ole woman wants new clothes, de chillin wants dis an' dat, de rent runs behin', an' I'ze gittin' desprit.'

"'Sho! now let's make some figgers on de fence,' I tole him. 'Now, den, you chew 'terbacker?'

"'Yes, I chew about ten cents worf a day.'

"'Dat's seventy cents a week. An' you drink lager?'

"'Well, of course, I drink a glass now and den—maybe fifteen glasses a week.'

"'Dat's seventy-five cents moah, sah. What d'ye do on Sundays?'

"'Oh, go up to de beer garden.'

"'An' you spen' a dollar at least?'

"'I guess so—maybe two of 'em.'

"'Say twelve shillin's, an' dat makes two dollars an' ninety-five cents per week. I reckon you throws away at least free dollars ebery week, sah.'

"'Frow it away?'

"'Yes, sah. Dat money would pay your rent an' buy your flour.'

"'But a fellar must have some comfort.'

"'De same, sah. De greatest comfort in de world am to see de rent paid up, de table loaded down, an' de ole woman able to go to church. You frow away free dollars ebery week, sah. an' den you go roun' cussin' the times, de wedder, an' de man who has saved his money.'

"Gem'lem, dat white man called me an ole black fool an' a dog stealer, but dat didn't alter de case a bit. He is frowin' away one-third of his weekly wages, an' den blowin' 'round dat he's gettin' desperit an' am ready to head a riot. Doan' let me heah eny member o' dis club spinnin' dat yarn, 'case if he does dar's gwine to be a committee of investigashun, an' dat committee won't whitewash wof a cent."

THEY WENT OUT.

"I think the rooms are exactly what we want, don't you, my dear?" said a gentleman to his wife after they had looked at a suite of five rooms in a fashionable house.

"Yes, indeed," replied the wife with great enthusiasm, "they are just what I want."

"Then we'll take them?"

"Oh, yes, do; I'm so tired of dragging around looking at apartments."

"I'm sure you'll like them," said the landlady, blandly, "and I'll make it as pleasant as possible for you."

"Oh, thank you!"

"Yes; they are really very desirable and it isn't everybody I'd let them to, but—I suppose you'll call it mere flattery—the moment you asked to look at them I hoped you'd take the rooms. I—I—really I was so pleased with your appearance and I'm delighted that the rooms please you."

"Our references are satisfactory?"

"O, perfectly. I hope the terms are quite satisfactory to you?"

"Quite—very reasonable, indeed."

"Ah, I think so myself. I've been getting sixty-five for the rooms and they have rented for seventy, but to you, I———"

"You're very kind I'm sure," murmurs the lady, "O George, what a sunny, cosy corner for the baby's crib!"

"The—baby's—crib?" gasps the landlady.

"Yes, indeed: we have the dearest, sweetest, cunningest, loveliest little darling, only six months old and———"

The landlady's bell rings sharply, a white-capped maid appears.

"Sally," says her offended and insulted mistress, "show these persons out!"

"Why, madam, we—we—"

"Show them out, Sally! A baby indeed!" Thank Heaven I found out in time! How could I have been so deceived and imposed upon? Good-day, sir; Sally, show them out!"

A NEW GAME.

The game of "bean bags" has recently become popular in Washington. The game is played differently from the old game under that name. An inclined board in which a square hole has been cut is placed at one end of the parlor or hall, and the players stand at any prescribed distance—the greater the distance the more difficult the game. Each player throws ten bean-bags toward the hole, and every one that falls through the hole counts ten for the player The highest possible score is 120, the last twenty being gained by throwing a bag twice as large as the usual ones used in the game through the hole; that is, a player can score 100 by using the ordinary bags, but to win the game the large bag must be thrown successfully, and this counts twenty. The boards may be polished or plain, as the owner chooses, two feet wide and three feet long; the highest part placed nine or ten inches from the floor. The hole should be five inches square, and the smaller bags a little larger, and they should contain one half pint of beans; the large bag, or Jumbo, as it is called, a pint of beans. Sometimes prizes are given to those making the highest and lowest scores in the game. The charm of the game is in the fact that it can be played by all.—Domestic Monthly.

THE ONLY COLOR LINE.—Uncle Sam—"What's the matter now?"

Frontier Citizen—"I stole a farm from the fellow who was on it, and drove him off, and now he is coming back with a lot of his relatives to kill me."

"Well, you ought to be killed."

"But the fellow I stole the farm from is an Indian."

"Oh! Well, I'll order out the army."—Omaha World.

The Art Review has this interesting and instructive paragraph: "A bibliopegist is a bibliophile with a special regard for bookbindings. A bibliotaph is a book miser. A bibliopole is a book-seller for bibliophiles. A biblioklept is a stealer of valuable books. Mr. Lenox, who would not let Prescott see his Mexican manuscripts, was a bibliotaph, and Sam Pepys was a biblioklept. Bibliolatry is the worship of books."

Make No Mistake.

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion and preparation curative power superior to any other article of the kind before the people. Be sure to get Hood's.

"In one store the clerk tried to induce me to buy their own instead of Hood's Sarsaparilla. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was, I had taken it, was perfectly satisfied with it, and did not want any other."—Mrs. Ella A. Goff, 61 Terrace street, Boston, Mass.

"My wife suffered from sick headache and neuralgia. After taking Hood's Sarsaparilla she was much relieved."—W. R. Babb, Wilmington, Ohio.

My Ain Countrie.

I am far frae my hame, an' I'm weary, aftenwhiles,
For the lang'd-for-hame-bringing, an' my Father's welcome smiles.
I'll ne'er be fu' content, until my een do see
The gowden gates of heav'n, an' my ain countrie.
The earth is fleck'd with flowers, mony-tinted, fresh, and gay;
The birdies warble blithely, for my father made them sae;
But these sights; an' these soun's will as naething be to me
When I hear the angels singing in my ain countrie.

I've this gude word to promise that some gladsome day the King
To his ain royal palace his banished hame will bring;
Wi' e'en an' wi' heart running owre we shall see
"The King in his beauty," an' our own countrie.
My sins hae been mony, an' my sorrows hae been sair;
But there they'll never vex me, nor be remembered mair;
For his bluid hath made me white, an' his hand shall dry me e'e,
When he brings me hame at last to my ain countrie.

Like a bairn to his mither, a birdie to its nest,
I wad fain be ganging noo unto my Saviour's breast,
For he gathers in his bosom witless, worthless, lambs like me,
An' "he carries them himsel' " to his ain countrie.
He's faithfu' that hath promised, he will surely come again,
He'll keep his tryst wi' me, at what hour I dinna ken;
But he bids me still to wait, an' ready aye to be,
To gang at ony moment to my ain countrie.

So I'm watching aye, an' singing o' my hame as I wait,
For the sounding o' his footfa' this side the gowden gate.
God gie him grace to ilk and wha listens noo to me,
That we may a' gang in gladness to our ain countrie.
The earth is fleck'd wi' flowers, mony-tinted, fresh, and gay;
The birdies warble blithely, for my Father made them sae;
But these sichts an' these soun's will as naething be to me
When I hear the angels singing in my ain countrie.

GLIMPSES OF THE SOUTH.

SHELBY IRON WORKS, Ala.

In traveling, whenever one's mind is quickened by contact with that which is new and surprising, the slightest circumstance will often suggest lines of thought reaching across the years into scenes and circumstances widely different from those which are presented to the mind and eye. From Washington southward, at different points along the line of travel we noted in the different villages at intervals buildings just on the eve of completion, or in the first stages of construction. Among these we noted a form of architecture with which the New Englander becomes quite familiar as he travels through our different manufacturing villages and cities. Great brick structures five or six stories in height, without architectural adornment or endeavor to beautify them in external appearances. Great rows of windows at stated intervals, rising tier above tier from the basement to the roof, of massive proportions, or solidity of structure, all indicated to the eye the increase of an industry which has been sadly neglected in these southern states.

The other day, while wandering in and out among the different yards and buildings which comprise the ground of operation for the business over which the one with whom we pass our time is manager, we wandered into a yard and building piled knee-deep with refuse which has gathered during a quarter of a century of activity of iron manufacturing. Among the rubbish in the farther corner of the ancient shed which marks the catch-all for odds and ends of every form of iron, we were pointed out some pieces with the observation, "These have a history." Inquisitive to know the meaning of this observation, we questioned on until we learned the following story.

Those who are acquainted with the naval history of our war will remember the terrible resistance which the Confederate gunboats made to the progress of Admiral Farragut in his operations on our southern coast. Among the vessels with which he came in contact none gave him greater trouble than the gunboat Tennessee. With the opening of the war, and the supreme necessity which greeted the managers of the Confederate government to bring into requisition all the resources of the South in their combat with the North, the different manufacturing establishments which were able to produce that which was necessary for the defense of the seceding states were made tributary. At that time the village in which we are now stopping contained the best equipment for the manufacturing of certain forms of iron plate of any in the state of Alabama. Thus it came to pass that the furnace which was built for making iron for industrial purposes, was turned to means of molding plates for rebel gunboats. And thus it also came to pass that this rebel gunboat Tennessee carried for its protection against the balls of Farragut's cannon plates made within a hundred yards of where we are now standing. The pieces which our entertainer shows us, piled against the wall, are remnants cut while shaping the great iron plates which were to shield armed vessels in the midst of war.

These two sights, the cotton mills so often looming up beside the railroad as we traveled south, giving employment to many busy hands, prophesying a day of new and larger prosperity for the south, and those other sights of plated iron lying in the old shed there beyond the mill, mark two points of history which, to the thinking mind, though separated but a space of a quarter of a century, yet mark a movement in the political order of our government which seems marvelous to one who comes directly into contact with these different conditions. When, on the 31st of March, 1865, General Wilson, with his raiding cavalry, galloped into the village where the village of Shelby Iron Works now stands, to completely annihilate those agencies for war from which the gunboat plates were molded, a new day was marked upon the page of southern history. What we see amid our present surroundings of remarkable revolution in purpose and methods, give somewhat of a hint of the remarkable revolution which is going on throughout these southern states. Where, in 1864, a single furnace stood, bearing forth its molten lava to be made the agency for protecting or destroying the lives of men in war, to-day two furnaces are standing, each giving of its contents for the purpose of merchandise and commerce.

In going about from place to place, one cannot help feeling, while noting the inferiority of the negro race, that there is something better to come of this peculiar relationship of the black man to the white, for so far as anything that we can see or hear of present things, the old South of thirty years ago has passed away and out of sight for ever, and so it is all along the line. While many things in the way of a quiet hint or word suggest to us that there are conditions which still contain elements of the old social and political life; while we often feel that only a few of the people in this section take what seems to be the broader view of present circumstances, yet it must be said that any candid mind will see everywhere a marvelous change in those conditions which not many years ago were objects of ceaseless agitations in northern minds. Certainly in all our journeying we have never found a site which gave better promise than Atlanta. Certainly we have seen, all along the line of journeying through which we have passed, continual reminders that the to-morrow of this section is to be followed by prosperity and success. We firmly believe that those who voice the southern heart, and those who speak with southern minds, have passed beyond even a desire to bring back again the peculiar institution. We pride ourselves that we can see in the thoughts of all those who spoke to us of matters such as these, a firm and sincere desire to lay aside, as far as possible, thoughts which only bring pangs of regret and bitterness of heart, and instead, only a striving after what to-morrow will bring to them: prosperity and growth.

No one who has not come to this section and passed a little time at least amid such surroundings as he will find, can understand the deep, wide gulf which separates the two races who are existing side by side. To us of northern birth it seems impossible to reconcile ourselves to that haughty superiority which the better element of the southern people has persisted in holding over the negro race. Yet contact with the conditions as they are, convinces us that this separation between the races, and this assumed superiority of the white men over the blacks, is a matter which cannot be at present changed by law, or individual effort. In theory it is a beautiful thing to talk of the equality of the races. In theory, and in fact no doubt, it is true that in the system of God the negro and the white man are created equal. But upon the other hand in the sight of all those relationships which enter into the social and the political life, the negro of to-day, in this locality at least, is unfitted by education, or lack of education, and by habit, to mingle with polite, or we may say even virtuous society.

We have thought we could never bring ourselves to look upon the negro as beneath us, yet he who comes in contact with him in his daily life, he who sees his moral degradation, his lack of those common virtues which go to make up what we call "common decency," cannot fail to read anew his lessons in social science. Of course we are in a situation to see only the better side of the business relationship between the negro and his employer, but this we do see so far as we are able to discern, that while there is of course a tendency to get his labor cheap, yet there is upon the employer an increasing, earnest, and constant desire for his welfare. Here we think we find a promise of something which is better. Certainly we do not believe that legal enactments will bridge this chasm which exists between the races, but along the lines of industrial operations there is a continual loosening of the bonds, and a continual reorganization of society, and this is where it must begin. The negro and the white man cannot come into contact, man and man, even if one be hired to the other, without a continual loosening of the distance which divides the two.

The cotton mills and iron furnaces, these as types of the marvelous increase in industrial operations, call for the continual increase in skilled labor, and so we find, what we had not expected to find, that everywhere there is a continual filtering of the colored laborers into those professions or occupations which we designate as requiring skilled laborers or mechanics, and here we also note an improvement in the negro. Thus it is that along this line there is unseen, perhaps unknown, to those who are directly in contact with this race, a continual lifting of his mind into a higher level. Certainly generations must pass before anything like a radical movement of this kind can take place. It will only be when by a process which is as long and thorough and comprehensive as that which underlaid our system of human slavery, that will find such a result. It does seem almost ridiculous to one who even touches upon the practical side of this question to think of how our northern statesmen hope by the passing of certain laws and amendments to obliterate the evils of of this social system, which are planted in the very nature of these social customs and usages which for centuries have held the South, and for which the North to some extent may be held accountable. We may advance these results perhaps, by agitation and discussion, but they will come only by a process of growth, the extent of which no man could measure. And to undertake to fill the gulf between the races except by this process of development and growth is prepostrous.

The waves of the ocean find their level through the agency of nature, and foolish is the man who thinks to see some other agency step in and overthrow this power of the universe. There are oceans of humanity made of ripples, and mighty torrents, and foolish is he who supposes that he is powerful enough to overcome these laws of social gravitation and cohesion which hold in firm embrace the movement of humanity. Thus while studying for the outcome of this social problem we find our consolation, not in political parties any more than, incidentally, in educational bills for the appropriation of great sums of money, but we do find it in that reorganization of the industrial system in the South, which finds its expression in cotton mills, in iron furnaces, in cotton seed oil refineries, and in all that vast network of commercial life which is being woven from end to end of the cotton belt. Not political ideas, not even good advice, is what southern people need from northern minds. What they do need is brains and money, they can grasp the situation and can understand and prophesy business success. In coming years such men as these, coming here to develop such industries which are waiting for the hand of Yankee ingenuity, will work out this problem.

The South, humiliated and impoverished, unable to pay those who fought for it, obliged to pay those who fought for Union success; forced to meet increased taxation which contributed to their defeat; the South in this position has been unable to do itself justice for 20 years or more. To-day those who are left of the aristocracy of slavery days, even though they comprehended the situation and know the needs of the present hour, are unable, because of lack of means, to do what they feel must be done. Thus it is that rich opportunities are waiting everywhere in these southern states for such men as will enter, heart and hand, upon the work of building up a new and prosperous industrial life.

THE LEGEND OF THE TWO SACKS.

There is an ancient legend that tells of an old man who was in the habit of traveling from place to place with a sack hanging behind him and another in front of him.

What do you think the sacks were for? I will tell you.

In the one behind he tossed all the kind deeds of his friends, where they were quickly hid from view; and he soon forgot all about them.

In the one hanging around his neck under his chin, he popped all the sins the people he knew committed; and these he was in the habit of turning over and looking at as he walked along day by day.

One day, to his surprise, he met a man wearing, just like himself, a sack in front and one behind. He went to him and began feeling his sack.

"What have you there, my friend?" he asked, giving the sack in front a good poke.

"Stop; don't do that!" cried the other, "you'll spoil my good things."

"What things?" asked number one.

"Why, my good deeds," answered number two. "I keep them all in front of me, where I can always see them, and take them out and air them. See, here is the half crown I put in the plate Sunday, and the shawl I gave the poor beggar girl, and the mittens I gave to the cripple boy, and the penny I gave to the organ-grinder, and there is even the benevolent smile I bestowed on the crossing sweeper at my door, and—"

"And what is in the sack behind you?" asked the first traveler, who thought his companion's good deeds would never come to an end.

"Tut, tut," said number two, "there is nothing I care to look at in there. That sack holds what I call my little mistakes."

"It seems to me that your sack of mistakes is fuller than the other," said number one.

Number two frowned. He had never thought of that. Although he had put what he called his "mistakes" out of sight, everyone else could see them still. An angry reply was on his lips, when happily, a third traveler, also carrying two sacks, as they were, overtook them. The first two men at once pounced on the stranger.

"What cargo do you cary in your sack?" cried one.

"Let's see your goods," said the other.

"With all my heart," quoth the stranger; "for I have a goodly assortment, and I like to show them. This sack," said he, pointing to the one hanging in front of him, "is full of the good deeds of others."

"Your sack looks nearly touching the ground. It must be a pretty heavy weight to carry," observed number one.

"There you are mistaken," replied the stranger; "the weight is only such as sails are to a ship, or wings to an eagle. It helps me onward."

"Well, your sack behind can be of but little use to you," said number two, "for it appears to be empty, and I see it has a hole in the bottom of it."

"I made the hole on purpose," said the stranger, "for all the evil I hear of people I put in there, and it falls through and is lost. So you see I have no weight to draw me down backwards."

Grown Up Land.

Good morrow, fair maid with lashes brown,
Can you tell me the way to Womanhood Town?

Oh, this way and that way—never stop!
'Tis picking up stitches that grandma will drop.
'Tis kissing the baby's troubles away.
'Tis learning that cross words will never pay,
'Tis helping mother, 'tis sewing up rents,
'Tis reading and playing, 'tis saving the cents,
'Tis loving and smiling, forgetting to frown,
Oh that is the way to Womanhood Town!

Just wait, my brave lad—one moment I pray.
Manhood Town lies where—can you tell the way?

Oh, by toiling and trying we reach the land—
A bit with the head, a bit with the hand—
'Tis by climbing up the steep hill Work,
'Tis by keeping out of the wide street Shirk,
'Tis by always taking the weak one's part,
'Tis by giving mother a happy heart,
'Tis by keeping bad thoughts and actions down.
Oh, that is the way to manhood town!

And the lad and the maid ran hand in hand
To their fair estates in the Grown up Land.

A LOST LOCOMOTIVE.

"In the construction of the Kansas Pacific and Atchinson, Topeka and Santa Fe railroads," said H. L. Carter, a railroad contractor, of St. Joseph, the other day, "one difficulty of frequent occurrence was met with, which as far as my experience goes, is unique in railroad history. I refer to the trouble arising from quicksands. From western Kansas to the mountains, quicksands are to be found in nearly every stream, no matter how small, and to successfully bridge them required an expenditure out of all proportion to the size of stream to be crossed. We tried pile driving, but the longest piles disappeared without touching the bottom. Then filling with earth and stone was attempted, and met with equally poor success, as the quicksand was apparently capable of swallowing the entire Rocky mountains. The only means of crossing was found to be to build short truss bridges across them. This was very expensive, but was the only thing to be done. As an instance of the practically bottomless nature of the quicksands I may cite the case of an engine that ran off the track at River Bend, about ninety miles from Denver, on the Kansas Pacific. The engine, a large freight, fell into a quicksand, and in twenty minutes had entirely disappeared. Within two days the company sent out a gang of men and a wrecking train to raise the engine. To their surprise they could not find a trace of it. Careful search was made, magnetized rods were sunk to the depth of sixty-five feet, but no engine could be found. It had sunk beyond human ken, and from that day to this has never been discovered. Cattle and horses are frequently lost, the only animal that is safe being a mule; the only animal that never gets caught. No greater instance of the same intelligence of this much maligned quadruped can be cited than the skill and care with which it avoids all unsound bottom. As its hoofs are much smaller and narrower than those of a horse, it would mire down in places where a horse could safely pass. Recognizing this fact, whenever a mule feels the ground giving away under its feet it draws back instantly and cannot be induced to advance a step, although a whole drove of horses may have immediately preceded. Those who think a mule is stupid are much mistaken."—Wichita Beacon.

POINTS IN ROAD-MAKING.

The importance of good road-making is not sufficiently realized in most country towns, and there is a deal of ignorance on the whole subject. A contributor to the Philadelphia Press makes this suggestion: It would be well if not only the agricultural colleges took up instruction on this subject, but that all other colleges and schools of any importance throughout the country should do the same. In the meanwhile path-makers in every district ought to be taught how to mend the roads in spring and autumn.

The usual way they do this is to scrape up the soft earth that has been washed into the sides of the roads, together with the grass and weeds grown there, and then pile this soft mass on any low places in the road or shovel up the loosest dirt near by for the same purpose. The result is mud holes all the year round. Instead of taking dirt from these places they should use pure gravel or such earth as contains a large proportion of it. If the road be quite sandy, and gravel cannot be had, then a moderate dressing of clay ought to be spread over it, but if the road be clay, then spread sand or gravel. In a short time the soils mix, and make a harder and better road than either alone.

In traveling in England, where all the main roads are excellent macadams, I noticed that wherever a hole appeared, even when quite small or shallow, broken stone was immediately filled in and a very heavy roller passed over the spot, so as to make it as hard and compact at once as the other parts of the road. This broken stone was piled in small heaps at short distances all along one side of the roads, ready for use when needed.

Another fault in roads over hills is the want of ridges made sufficiently high and near each other to turn the rain water into the ditches and thus prevent washouts. And then the ridges are often constructed straight across the road, whereas they should be made at quite an oblique angle, so that the front and hind wheels of all vehicles can pass over them one after the other. If both wheels strike the ridge at the same time going down hill, they jar the vehicle roughly, and in coming up hill it is much harder for the team to draw the load over the ridge when it turns straight across the road than if obliquely. It must not be forgotten to make every other ridge turn the water to a different side of the road; if not, the rain will gully one ditch much deeper than the other—often to a dangerous depth.

THE DRUMMER'S BEST GIRL.

He hurried up to the office as soon as he entered the hotel, and without waiting to register, inquired eagerly:

"Any letter for me?"

The clerk sorted over a package with the negligent attention that comes of practice, then flipped one—a very small one—on the counter.

The traveling man took it with a curious smile that twisted his pleasant looking face into a mask of expectancy.

He smiled more as he read it. Then, oblivious of other travelers who jostled him, he laid it tenderly against his lips and actually kissed it.

A loud guffaw startled him.

"Now, look here, old fellow," said a loud voice, "that won't do, you know. Too spooney for any thing. Confess, now, your wife didn't write that letter."

"No, she didn't," said the traveling man, with an amazed look, as if he would like to change the subject. "That letter is from my best girl."

The admission was so unexpected that the trio of friends who had caught him said no more until after they had eaten a good dinner and were seated together in a chum's room.

Then they began to badger him.

"It's no use, you've got to read it to us, Dick," said one of them; "we want to know all about your best girl."

"So you shall," said Dick with great coolness; "I will give you the letter and you can read it yourselves. There it is," and he laid it open on the table.

"I guess not," said the one who had been loudest in demanding it; "we like to chaff a little, but I hope we are gentlemen. The young lady would hardly care to have her letter read by this crowd," and he looked reproachfully at his friend.

"But I insist upon it," was the answer. "There is nothing in it to be ashamed of—except the spelling; that is a little shaky, I'll admit, but she won't care in the least. read it Hardy and judge for yourself."

Thus urged, Hardy took up the letter shamefacedly enough and read it. There were only a few words. First he laughed, then swallowed suspiciously, and as he finished it threw it on the table again and rubbed the back of his hand across his eyes as if troubled with dimness of vision.

"Pshaw," he said, "if I had a love letter like that——" and then he was silent.

"Fair play!" cried one of the others, with an uneasy laugh.

"I'll read it to you, boys," said their friend, seeing they made no move to take it, "and I think you'll agree with me that it's a model love letter."

And this is what he read:

Mi owen Deer Pa Pa—I sa mi Pairs every nite annd Wen I kis yure Picture I ASK god to bless you Good bi Pa Pa yure best gurl. DOLLY.

For a moment or two the company remained silent, while the little letter passed from hand to hand, and you would have said that every one had hay fever by the snuffling that was heard. Then Hardy jumped to his feet:

"Three cheers for Dolly and three cheers more for Dick's best girl."

They were given with a will.

A HIGHLY CULTURED BOSTON BOY.

A young girl was crossing the Public Garden the other morning upon the main path which crosses the bridge. She was accompanied by a magnificent mastiff, who strode along beside her in the most companionable sort of way, looking up into her face occasionally as if to remark casually that it was a very fine morning, or to ask if there was anything he could do for her. The two crossed the bridge together, and finally came to the Charles street gate. Here the young girl, evidently not wishing to have the care of the dog in the busy streets, turned to him and said:

"There, that is far enough now, Marco. You need not go with me any farther, but turn about and go back home."

She did not take her hands out of her muff to point the way, and she spoke as she would to a small brother, in a pleasant, conversational voice.

Marco looked at her with his large eyes, then looking across the common wagged his tail slowly as though he were thinking how very pleasant it would be to go the rest of the way. Finally he turned back to her again, and with a movement of his head and eyes, asked as plainly as though the words had come from his mouth:

"Please let me go a little farther, it is such a fine morning!"

"No, dear; I'm going shopping, you know," answered the girl, explaining the difficulty, as if Marco were human; "there will be crowds of people and I shall not know what to do with you. But go along now, that's a good fellow, and I'll be back very soon."

Without another word Marco turned and walked back across the gardens. He did not slink away, as some dogs do when sent back, but marched leisurely along with his head in the air, stopped a moment on the bridge to watch the children skating below, then trotted on toward Commonwealth avenue. The Athenian watched him until he had disappeared beyond the gates, then resumed his own way, wondering whether Darwin loved dogs or not.—Boston Advertiser.

Hot rooms, hot offices, hot churches, hot steam cars and hot public halls are, according to high medical authority, responsible for one-half the colds, pneumonia and lung difficulties generally. Rushing from these over-heated places into a frigid atmosphere is always dangerous and often fatal.

A glass of hot lemonade, with half a teaspoonful of sweet spirits of nitre, will break up the hardest cold in a few hours. It should be taken on retiring at night, and care should be taken not to renew the cold the next day.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, MARCH 16, 1888.

Henry Bergh of New York, the distinguished friend of dumb animals and children, is dead. He has done a noble work, and his death is a loss to humanity.

Col. M. P. Walker of Belchertown enjoys public life well enough so that he is one of the willin' Barkises who are ready to step into the congressional shoes which Mr. Whiting is about to discard.

The engineers on connecting roads who have refused to move cars or freight from the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, have run against a snag in a decision of the United States circuit court at Omaha, last Friday, that when freight or cars are proffered in the usual course of traffic they must take them. The decision also restrains the brotherhood from combining for the purpose of organizing or advising a strike. The engineers will be likely to find the United States courts a great deal harder to buck against than the railroads.

Emperor William of Germany died at Berlin last Friday, at the age of 91 years, full of honor and glory. For 27 years he was king of Prussia, and during that period, aided by the sagacity and statesmanship of Bismarck and the strategy of Von Roon and Von Moltke, Prussia not only came to the front among European nations, but the German empire was reconstructed, and for 17 years the veteran monarch has been the beloved ruler of the foremost empire on the continent. The crown prince, Frederick William, succeeds to the throne, being proclaimed Frederick III. He is an invalid himself, and it can be but a short time, apparently, before his son, Prince William, must follow him on the throne.

OUR BLIZZARD.

The month of March has surely distinguished itself this year. Never before, within the recollection of the present generation, has this part of the country experienced such a storm as that which began at a late hour Sunday night and continued with increasing fury for nearly 48 hours. Only the bitter cold was lacking which would have made it a blizzard fit for Dakota. The snow began falling quite gently during the night, Sunday. As Monday advanced, snow and wind both increased, and it became apparent that it was a storm of uncommon power, and as night came on traffic and locomotion of all kinds came to a standstill. Throughout New England the storm king had his relentless clutches on everything. Railway and highway were equally blocked, and more than a Sunday stillness settled down upon all this country. Nothing like it was ever known in this section in the history of railroads and telegraphs.

Boston and her suburbs escaped the severe features of the visitation, but New York was literally snowed under. Telegraph wires were down in every direction, and for 36 hours the only communication between New York and Boston was a few words sent via London, through 6000 miles of cable. During the afternoon trains all over New England, as well as in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, the District of Columbia, West Virginia and British Dominion became stalled, and some of them were fairly buried out of sight, while passengers were obliged to spend from one to two days in the snowbound cars. From all this region it is the same story: railroads and highways buried out of sight, villages and cities entirely isolated from the rest of the world for one or more days, and a number of lives lost through the severity of the storm. Along the cost the sea was very heavy, and the waves were breaking over Minot's ledge light-house Tuesday morning for the first time since the old light-house was destroyed in 1851. The railroads are now being released from their blockade rapidly, but it will be two or three days yet before trains are running regularly. The New York, New Haven and Hartford road is badly blocked, and no train has been through to New York yet, but it is hoped to get it open by to-morrow.

The Springfield Tragedy.

Naturally enough, Springfield has been stirred as never before by last week's awful fire, which hurried eight souls into eternity (all who jumped or fell from the windows having since died), and the extent and variety of comment and criticism which has followed would be amusing if the subject were not such a serious one. The owner of the block, ex-Mayor Wight, who is responsible for building such a fire trap, and Inspector Buxton, who allowed it to be occupied without proper fire-escapes, are censured with about equal severity. It is admitted that all the victims might have escaped through the rear windows to the roof of the adjoining block if they had kept cool and acted promptly. But it is not in the nature of things for everybody to keep cool at such times, and there is where the need of proper escapes comes in. The only stairway was cut off, from the first, by the smoke and fire coming up the adjacent unused elevator shaft, and the frightened employes instinctively ran for the elevator in the front part of the building, their usual place of egress. Before they realized that their rings for the elevator were fruitless the dense smoke drove them to the windows. Apparently no effort was made to break the door and raise the elevator themselves, which might have been done with ease. But the fact remains that this was by no means a proper fire escape.

Edward Atkinson, our best authority on these matters, says the whole building was "an excellent sample of combustible architecture." He suggests that if there had been a skylight over the elevator shaft, the heat would have broken the glass, and the flame and smoke would have undoubtedly gone through it, instead of being spread through the upper floor by the close roof, and the inmates would have had ample time to escape. If a canvas chute, suspended from a flexible ladder, such as was exhibited hereabouts a few years ago, had been kept ready for use by one of the windows, it would have afforded safe and rapid escape for all the occupants of the floor, while it is probably equally true that if the fire department had been provided with a canvas jumping cover all who jumped from the windows might have escaped uninjured. An official inquiry into the cause of and responsibility for the disastrous fire was begun to-day.

Sears & Cook had the courage to get out Tuesday and take orders and deliver them. This ought to be appreciated by all, as they were the only ones that did it.

PALMER AND VICINITY.

The insurance sale of clothing will continue until the 24th, in Caryl's Block.

D. F. Holden has placed two new signs upon the front of his office in Clark & Hastings's block.

Fred Sistare began his new duties in the clothing store of Babbitt & Norris at Springfield yesterday.

Prof. Shipman of Tufts' College will address the Universalists at St. Paul's church Easter Sunday.

The farmers' institute which was to have been held at the Weeks House Tuesday has been indefinitely postponed.

George B. Kenerson, who has been confined to his house on Park street for several weeks, is now recovering.

Snow shovels have been in great demand this week, and the hardware dealers have consequently reaped a harvest.

Rev. Richard H. Eddy, D. D., of Melrose, will supply the pulpit of St. Paul's Universalist church next Sunday.

Rev. A. W. Weeks of the Second Baptist church conducted services at the state primary school last Sunday morning.

Rev. J. Quinn of South Coventry, Conn., will preach at the Lenten services in St. Thomas's church next Thursday evening at 7.30 o'clock.

A private party was held at the residence of the Misses Brown on Foster avenue Wednesday evening. Quite a large number participated.

The citizens have been discussing the need of providing the business blocks in town with fire escapes since the recent fire at Springfield.

John M. Henry of Springfield, who pitched for the Palmers several times last season, has signed with the Philadelphias to play center field.

The meeting which was to have been held this week to consider the formation of a lawn tennis club has been postponed on account of the storm.

M. J. Dillon has contracted to do the masonry work upon two new tenement houses to be erected at Monson the coming spring by J. A. Swett.

The temporary bridge over the Quaboag river, recently built by the New London Northern road, has been badly weakened this week by the storm.

The glass roof of S. R. Blodgett's hothouse, which was very heavily loaded with snow, was broken in Monday night, doing about $25 worth of damage.

Fred Cady of Hampden has assumed his clerkship in A. E. Park's grocery store. J. G. Tuttle left Monday to begin his new duties at Manchester, N. H.

The Junior Endeavor Society of the Second Congregational church will be entertained at the residence of J. S. Holden on West Main street this evening.

The county commissioners have issued a ticket-of-leave from the house of correction to John O'Neil of this place, who was serving a sentence for vagrancy.

Palmer has been practically isolated this week so far as communication with other places is concerned. The mails and daily papers have been greatly missed.

J. H. Woolrich's appearance on Main street Tuesday afternoon with snow-shoes on attracted considerable attention, it being a new and novel sight to many.

Rev. Pleasant Hunter of Newtonville, formerly of this place, will deliver a lecture soon before the Christian Endeavor Society at the Second Congregational church.

D. F. Holden's agency has disposed of the late William Sherman's place below the agricultural park to Rev. A. W. Weeks of the Second Baptist church for about $1500.

W. M. Fullerton of Waltham, son of Rev. B. M. Fullerton, formerly of Palmer, starts May 5th for an extended trip abroad with Mr. Longfellow, a brother of the poet.

All the hotels have been filled to their utmost capacity this week, and the proprietors have been unable to accommodate many of their transient in any desirable manner.

G. M. Atkins & Co. of this place have been awarded the contract to build the piers and abutments for the new bridge to be constructed over the Westfield river at Salmon Falls.

Passenger train No. 53 on the Boston & Albany Railroad, due in Palmer at 4.32 p. m., was delayed an hour at Indian Orchard last Saturday afternoon by an accident to the locomotive.

It is presumed that private matters of a very important nature were under discussion at the Democratic club's meeting last Friday evening, as no reporters were allowed in the room.

The private party by the Woman's Relief Corps, which was to have been held in the Weeks House hall Wednesday evening, but which was postponed on acconnt of the storm, will be held next Monday evening.

Harry Willard, for some time past night operator in the local telephone exchange, has discontinued his duties to accept a position with the Thomson-Houston Electric Company. His successor has not as yet been appointed.

The roads in the rural districts leading into town are blockaded with snow to such an extent that it will be doubtful whether or not they will be broken out in time to allow all the citizens to attend town meeting next Monday.

For ten months ending March 1st, 1887, under license, there were 161 cases of drunkeness before the district court. For 10 months ending March 1st, 1888, under no license, there were only 53 cases, a falling off of nearly 68 per cent.

Chief Engineer Kenerson of the Palmer fire department ordered the snow removed from the hydrants on the different streets of the village Tuesday, so as to have them in readiness in case fire should break out in the midst of the storm.

All traveling in town Tuesday was done on horseback. Horses, men, sleds and shovels were brought out Wednesday to clear the roads. Twelve men on horseback, Indian file, followed by two 4-horse sleds, came down from Thorndike Wednesday.

C. L. Gardner went to Ware Monday morning and F. F. Marcy at noon. Yesterday afternoon they, with F. A. Warren of North Wilbraham and A. A. Marston of Springfield, started with two horses and came to Thresher's bridge, about 3 miles, then walked down the track to Forest Lake, where they met men breaking out roads and got a ride home.

It is understood that the Wright Wire Cloth Co. will move its machinery and business to Worcester in the latter part of the summer or early in the fall. They have already leased a building there and released a part of it, making their running expenses much lower than at present, besides giving them a more convenient workshop, all on one floor. They also claim that they will have better shipping facilities from that city than from Palmer.

The four Democratic clubs of the town held a union meeting in Hibernian Hall last Friday evening. There was a very good attendance of delegates, and a good deal of enthusiasm prevailed, but it was utterly impossible, after ventilating their views for several hours, to decide upon any candidates for town officers. The delegates were not united, and consequently no definite action was taken upon any point brought up for consideration.

Frank Cushing of Brockton has leased the large room at the Palmer Wire Manufacturing Company, formerly used for galvanizing purposes, and will put in several machines for the manufacture of all kinds of wire nails. The wire used will be made at the mill, and the machinery will have a capacity of turning out about a ton and a half of finished nails per day, which will be shipped to the wholesale hardware dealers in different parts of the country. The new industry will require the employment of only a small number of hands. Mr. Cushing expects to have the machinery set up and in operation soon after April 1.

It seems to be one of the cardinal beliefs that the standard of admission to the high school must be low, otherwise the pupils never would be "so small." The teachers find themselves constantly beset with questions and remarks implying this belief. People even undertake to suggest that a high-school supported by such material must necessarily be something of a farce. Nothing could be further from the fact than the assumption that our pupils are too young. Out of an enrollment of a little over seventy, 63 give their ages as 15 or above, showing the average age of the scholars to be considerably higher than the average in the high schools of the state.

Personal.

Miss Jennie Eager is visiting friends in Rockville, Ct.

Fred Winter of Boston has been spending the week in town.

W. D. Lord started for a brief trip to Keene, N. H., to-day.

J. S. Clark spent last Sunday with friends at Keene, N. H.

Mrs. H. T. Clark of Springfield has been visiting in town this week.

Bert Brooks of West Warren remained in town over Sunday as the guest of J. G. Tuttle.

Mrs. E. Macaulay and daughters of West Springfield have been guests of Mrs. R. L. Goddard this week.

Mrs. C. S. Robinson of Newton Upper Falls spent Sunday in this place as the guest of George Robinson on Pleasant street.

Town Matters.

The members of the Democratic clubs will be on hand early next Monday morning, for it is the early bird which catches the worm.

A thought for thoughtful voters: Liquor dealers have dollars at stake; Christian men have sons at stake. Which are of the most value?

Will Palmer remain in the no-license column another year? We hope so. Some writer well says: "Sow license, reap saloons; sow saloons, reap drunkards; sow drunkards, reap murders."

The Republicans will hold a caucus at the town house this evening to try their hand at nominating a list of town officers. The Democrats have also called a caucus for the same time and place.

The town will, of course, postpone action on the business articles of the warrant until a later day, as in the past few years, when there will be opportunity for their consideration undisturbed by the bustle of voting.

The snow storm has overshadowed all other topics of conversation this week, and has so absorbed the attention of people that comparatively little has been said or done about local political affairs. But voters who go to the town house next Monday will find that enough interest has been developed to furnish more than one ticket for their consideration. The names of D. F. Holden and Joseph Kerigan will very likely be found on the successful ticket for selectmen. Capt. Clark will not allow the use of his name for another term, and the Democrats talk of running H. T. Bishop in his place, while the Repulicans' choice may fall upon R. L. Bond of Bondsville. T. J. Moran of Thorndike and M. J. Dillon of this village will also be candidates. It was voted last year to divide the offices of selectmen and overseers of the poor—a wise thing to do—but we hear no names mentioned for ovsrseers yet, except that of Mr. Kerigan. The Democrats are talking a change in the board of assessors, but have not arrived at the point of naming their candidates. Mrs. Proctor's removal to Lowell will necessitate the election of three members of the school board. An excellent suggestion for this place is the name of W. A. Breckenridge, whose long experience in school matters would be found of practical value in the board. Besides Dr. Ruggles and Dr. Smith, the names of Mrs. Cheney and Dr. Davis of Three Rivers, and Dr. Flynn and H. C. Strong of this place, are also mentioned as possible candidates.

The Great Snow Storm.

TRAVEL IMPEDED ON THE RAILROADS AND BUSINESS SUSPENDED.

The snow storm which began early Monday morning is generally conceded by all to be the worst storm ever seen in the annals of this town. It came down thick and fast and continued for a period of 36 hours, drifting the highways and blockading travel upon all the railroads centering here. The depth is estimated at two feet and a half upon a level, while there are huge drifts in many places in town which will measure from fifteen to twenty feet high. Many whose duties were imperative were obliged to go about the village early Tuesday morning on horseback.

Business was quite generally suspended here for a time, and nearly every one was engaged in shoveling out the mammoth drifts. Business men and others in town were in some instances unable to reach their homes after completing their labors Monday night. Some made persistent attempts to get through the drifts and were successful after a comparatively long time, while others that made the attempt to beat their way through the blinding storm were obliged to return from whence they came, consequently many remained within their places of employment that night and returned to their houses Tuesday morning. Several persons who started out to reach their homes that night but gave up the attempt and remained at the houses of neighbors, were reported the next morning as being buried in the snow drifts. One case worthy of mention was that of Frank R. Lawton, employed in the clothing store of C. K. Gamwell, who started to reach his home on Park street. He traveled until he became exhausted and chilled, and managed to find shelter in the house of Stillman Ellis. His wife became greatly alarmed because of no knowledge of his whereabouts, and men were sent out with shovels to dig him out of the drifts where it was supposed he had been buried while returning from his work. Daniel Mulvihill had a similar experience, and Cyrus Knox was found exhausted lying in a drift near his home.

A man by the name of Sullivan, living at Thorndike, who left the Nassowanno House at a late hour the second night of the storm to go to his home, did not reach there according to authoritative reports, and fears are entertained that he perished in the storm.

Main street in this village was a sight worth witnessing early in the week, and the attempts of pedestrians to make their way through the drifts were somewhat ludicrous. The efforts made early Tuesday morning to break out the roads were practically of no avail whatever, as the wind filled them up again as fast as they could be cleared. The roofs of many buildings in town were loaded so heavily with snow that they became weakened, and every precautionary means was used to keep them from caving in. Many occupants of dwellings were in great fear during the second night of the storm, and hardly dared to remain under cover, for fear of endangering their lives. No accidents were reported of that nature, however, but about ten o'clock the residents of Park street were startled by a crash. Investigation revealed the fact that the roof of the skating rink, owned by Survetus Leach, had caved in, resulting in demolishing the structure, the dimensions of which are something like 120 feet long by 50 feet wide. The building is almost a total wreck, as well as most of the contents, with the exception of the piano, which happened to be undamaged.

The lines of the Western Union, Rapid Transit, United Lines and New England telegraph and telephone companies were broken down Monday afternoon, or crossed in every conceivable way, so that communication with Boston, New York and other points of importance could not be obtained. Communication with Worcester, Springfield, Stafford and Brattleboro could be had a part of the time, and then every thing would be entirely cut off, leaving no way of communicating with the outside world, or receiving tidings of the condition of the blockaded trains and the passangers on board. The special wire from the broker's office in Strong's block to the New York stock exchange was the last to give out.

Tuesday morning the operators at the different officer in town tried persistently to work their lines, but in every instance they were unsuccessful. This caused much uneasiness among anxious friends of passengers on the stalled trains. Crowds had gathered at the union passenger station, eager to get the news which seemed an age in arriving. Finally at 9.30 the first dispatch came. It was sent by Conductor Sanders, in charge of passenger train No. 15, on the New London Northern road, which had remained stalled in a huge drift at Stafford Springs all night. The message read as follows:

> "I am still here and can't go further unless a plow goes over the road. Can get no communication from the south. Have not been able to get engines coaled up, for it is the worst storm I ever saw. Tell them that we are comfortable."

Several attempts were made by the snowbound train to reach Palmer Tuesday, but the drifts were too deep. Another attempt was made Wednesday, and after working all day in the drifts it got through to Palmer, and was the first regular train to arrive or leave here since 2.05 p. m., Monday. Its success in was due to the couraegeous and persistent attempts of engineers Jack Hathaway and C. L. Moulton. The locomotives came through without the assistance of a snow-plow, and when it arrived it was greeted with three ringing cheers by the crowd that had assembled at the station. The train passed through drifts in many places which were above the tops of the cars. It contained a comparatively small number of passengers, all of whom spoke in the highest praise of the two determined engineers. The train was composed of one passenger car and locomotives "Haven" and "Stafford." The passengers had been comfortable during their imprisonment, being but a short distance from Stafford Springs, where provisions of all kinds could be obtained. Lodgings were at a premium, although many found comfortable shelter. Conductor Sanders also deserves great credit for looking so carefully after the passengers under his care. People were eager to see the first snow-bound train approach the station, and apparently considered it as novel a sight as was the case when the first locomotive and train of cars ran over a railroad. The road south of Stafford Springs to New London is now possible, and Downer's train was the second over the road, arriving yesterday afternoon. The boat train made its regular trip to New London last evening, and trains are now running on time.

Four locomotives, preceded by a snowplow, had been working their way gradually along from Brattleboro to Palmer since Monday, and by working night and day managed to arrive here at 9.10 yesterday morning. They brought the first news of the situation of Conductor Hastings's train, which was left derailed near Amherst, the cars having jumped the rails while attempting to force a passage through a drift. The train was side-tracked afterward, and the passengers walked to the Amherst House, where they were properly cared for by its proprietor. Others that could not be accommodated there were taken in by private residents, where they were also comfortable and well provided for. An extra freight was stalled just ahead of Hastings's train, but both have now arrived. Snow is reported to be in the vicinity of twenty feet deep in places, both on the northern and southern divisions of the line, nevertheless; but this road was one of the first in New England to get its snow-bound trains running again on schedule time. The situation of the trains on this road the first of the week could only be learned at intervals, as the wires constantly gave out and left an anxious crowd waiting at the station. The 1.29 New York express, which left here but fifteen minutes late Monday afternoon, ran two miles beyond North Wilbraham, where it became stalled in a snow bank and had to remain. Conductor Wise knew that a freight was ahead, and hoped to secure a locomotive at Indian Orchard to help his train out. Fortunately, the cars had Baker heaters, not dependent on the locomotive, so he decided to start out in search of relief. The engine was started for Indian Orchard, but after plowing its way through huge drifts it became stalled a short distance from the station, so that it could neither move forward nor back. Conductor Wise at once started back on foot through the storm to the passengers and train which had been intrusted to his care, but was unable to reach them, and spent the night in the Indian Orchard station in an exhausted condition. Quite a number of persons intending to take the train for Springfield were also there, where they remained over night. In the meantime, Conductor Chapin of the accommodation train, which was stalled in the rear of the express, and which left Palmer a few minutes late, set out for North Wilbraham. As it happened, his locomotive had taken in water at that station, and the fire in the boiler did not have to be drawn during the night. The cars of this train were entirely dependent upon the locomotive for heat. Tuesday morning came and Conductor Wise started back to his train. George E. Morton, a servant in the dining car, volunteered to look for relief, and started for Ludlow, a distance of four miles through forest and snow banks, the latter some of the way being higher than his head. He reached Beckwith's grocery store after a time and filed an enormous order for provisions. Sixteen of the villagers were loaded down with fuel and food, and, preceeded by Morton, returned to the train. In the meantime provisions had been gathered at North Wilbraham for relief, and about twenty Wilbrahamites volunteered to make the trip, and with baskets of food, fuel, and shovels to dig their way through the drifts, oftentimes waist deep, reached the stalled trains in good season. Both the passengers on the express and accommodation were then well provided for, considering their situation, but heat was wanted on the former considerably more than food. The coal in the Baker heaters had been all burned out and one infant passenger had become ill. As soon as the provisionists arrived they had no sooner emptied their bags and baskets than they were on their way back after fuel. As soon as they could be reloaded with bags and baskets of coal they started back to the trains, but this time they had added twenty more men to the supply force. Superintendent Sackett of Springfield was informed of the situation and started out a relief train preceded by the plow, "Pathfinder" which cut its way along until it came in sight of the station at Indian Orchard, which was at midnight Tuesday. In many places the drifts were higher than the tops of cars, and beyond Indian Orchard the freight train could hardly be seen, as it was completely buried in the snow. The gang of workmen gradually neared the stalled trains about Wednesday noon, and in a short time had the passengers on the express train transferred. At 1.30 the train had started for Springfield, and at 4.10 the gang of shovelers got into the relief car bound for Palmer, drawn by three locomotives and preceded by the big snow plow. This was followed by the four locomotives and passenger car sent out from this place that morning with a gang of shovelers. The union station was lined with people anxious to learn something in regard to the blockaded trains. Section Master McQuaid turned his men loose in the restaurant, and they were not long in getting a square meal. The gang boarded the train and resumed work at the Blanchardville cut, getting through that in a short time, but finding the snow deeper as they proceeded toward Worcester. The tracks were reported clear early yesterday morning from Boston to Springfield, and at 8.05 a. m. the first regular train on the Boston & Albany road that had run since Monday at 9.43. made its appearance and brought the first daily newspapers and mail that had been seen here since Monday forenoon. This train became stalled in a drift just the other side of the bridge, in the Boston & Albany yard, and had to be run back and side-tracked, to await the arrival of a snow plow to precede it. The first through train from Boston arrived here at 1 o'clock yesterday.

The Ware River road seems to be the last upon the list to get out of trouble. Conductor Sedgwick's train, which has been at Coldbrook since the storm began, has worked its way along slowly. The shovelers have worked diligently on that road, but the drifts are mammoth ones, and are not so easily removed as imagined. The track is not yet clear, and probably will not be in condition for the regular running of trains this week.

Rev. T. J. Sullivan was snowed in at Willimantic, Conn., from Monday till yesterday noon.

Quite a number of Palmer people were caught out of town in the snow storm, and obliged to remain away for several days.

M. Sisk, the mail carrier for the state primary school, missed his first trip in 20 years on account of the weather Monday night.

The "oldest inhabitant" has to concede the fact that the recent storm was the worst one ever seen in this section, and the stories of '49 are at a discount.

There was a slight fire in the store-room attached to bakery at the state primary school Monday night, but it was discovered and extinguished with only about $150 loss.

One business man who came down street horseback, Tuesday morning, for provisions for his family, secured a large basket of eggs, meat, etc., and started for home. The horse made a plunge in the snow, and his rider took one also, going in almost out of sight, while eggs were minus.

The greatest sufferers by the storm were the babies, for the milkmen were unable to make their rounds, and the little ones refused to be comforted. C. T. Brainerd was the only milkman that managed to reach the village Tuesday morning, and when he did arrive he only had milk enough to supply a limited number of customers. The hotels ran short of that sort of fluid, also, as well as certain kinds of provisions, which the blockaded streets prevented the proprietors from getting. Some families in town ran short of fuel, and were obliged to remain in their homes without fires until the roads were broken out, so that they could reach the business part of the village and order small supplies.

THREE RIVERS.

New boilers are being put in at the school house.

Our first mail arrived Thursday forenoon by Superintendent Newell's team.

Alfred Hunt is learning to telegraph at the New London Northern station.

Mrs. C. H. Davis of South Willington, Ct, is visiting her father, Amos Olds.

Mrs. Arthur Barton and child were snowbound at Belchertown, not arriving home until Thursday afternoon.

On account of the severe storm the W. C. T. U. society will not hold their sociable this evening, and have postponed it until next Friday evening.

John Lehan was struck by a snow slide from the roof of the Palmer mill Wednesday forenoon, knocking him insensible, bnt not seriously injuring him.

The third of a series of lectures at the Baptist church will be delivered next Sunday afternoon at 2.30. Subject: "The Bible, and how to use it." Following the lecture there will be a reading, "No books like the Bible," by Mrs. Hodgeney.

WARREN.

Oscar Hale, baggage master, is at his home in Brimfield, sick with the mumps.

Dea. M. K. Whipple and wife left Monday for Florida, and expect to be gone two weeks.

Wilson Fairbank and wife have returned from the Bermudas, and are spending the week here with his father.

The engine and cars which went through Wednesday afternoon were objects of curiosity, none having been seen since Monday.

Fairbank & Tyler have been fitting up the fourth story of their Quaboag Block for an Odd Fellows' Hall, which will be dedicated Wednesday evening, March 21st, by the state grand officers to the principles of benevolence and charity and for the use of Arcturus Lodge No. 187, I. O. O. F. The hall is 35 by 52 feet, ante room 12 by 22 feet, with regalia, coat and toilet rooms, kitchen, etc., all furnished in whitewood, cherry stained. The lodge has spent about $1000 in furnishing their new quarters, which has been done under the supervision of H. S. Howes. Meekins & Packard of Springfield furnished the draperies, Rice & Co. of Warren the carpets, S. C. Small & Co. the furniture. Good taste has been shown both in fitting up and furnishing said quarters, which will rank among the best arranged outside of the city.

THORNDIKE.

A social dance will be held at Union Hall this evening.

Democratic caucus at the town house this evening at 7.45.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Kennedy and family started Monday for Syracuse, N. Y., where they are to make their home.

The base ball meeting which was to have been held at Lawton's Hall, Monday evening, had to be postponed on account of the severe snow storm.

Frank Mayett, who has been in the employ of H. T. Bishop 10 or 12 years, is soon to go into the meat business in the place recently vacated by Mr. Sullivan.

A correspondent writes: As town meeting draws near, candidates for selectmen are being talked of in earnest. The Democratic club of this place will try and have this end of the town represented by a young Democrat in the person of Thomas J. Moran, who is chairman of the Democratic town committee, and a young man of good promise. Should he be nominated at the caucus this evening, he would no doubt be elected and do his share on the board. Although young he is willing to learn. The tax payers and real estate owners need not fear that he will do anything unwise and unjust toward them or any citizen of this town. The young Democrats of this town should give him their full support, as the young citizens should have a representative. The Democratic party as a whole should come together on Monday next and vote the straight ticket, for by so doing they can accomplish more in the end. The Democrats of the place will give Mr. Moran their support, and if he is defeated will take it in good part, but they say if the ship goes down they are to go down with it.

John Flynt is building an addition to his barn.

Rev. Mr. Emerson preached in the Butler district school house Sunday afternoon.

The Young Ladies Working Club met with Mrs. F. W. Bancroft Monday afternoon.

Bliss & Moulton have their steam saw mill in place on their wood lot, and have commenced sawing.

There will be a sociable at the Congregational church to-night. Supper will be served from 6 to 8 o'clock.

The auction sale of the personal property of J. H. Robbins is adjourned to Saturday, the 24th, at 10 o'clock a. m.

Presiding Elder Eaton of the Springfield district, will occupy the pulpit of the Methodist church on Sunday morning.

Muir, Mitchell and Russell will commence shipping stone from Arba Squier's Granite Hill quarry as soon the going will permit.

Arrangements are being made for the presentation here of the cantata "Ruth," which has been presented so acceptably in Palmer.

The Windsor Club postponed their whist tournament Tuesday evening, on account of the unfavorable weather, to next Tuesday evening.

The registrars will be in session at the selectmen's room, to add names to the voters' list, March 15th, 22d and 28th. Registration will close March 28th at 10 o'clock p. m.

The inclement weather necessitated the postponement of the sociable and chicken pie supper at the Methodist church Wednesday evening, and it will be held next Wednesday evening.

The popular drama "Fidelity," and the farce "Irish Assurance and Yankee Modesty," will be presented by the young people of St. Patrick's church at Central Hall tomorrow evening.

Rev. G. B. Smyth of Granby, a returned missionary from China, gave a talk on the manners and customs of the Chinese, at the Methodist church last Sunday, at both morning and evening services.

The extra weight of snow caused the roof of the dye house at Fay, Peck & Co's. straw shop to fall in Wednesday afternoon, and the four men at work there had a very narrow escape with their lives, but fortunately no one was injured. A new roof will be put on at once.

W. M. Tucker supplied all his milk customers from a four horse sled Tuesday morning and was one of the first to break out a track on Main street. E. A. Keep, with his ox team, supplied most of his milk customers, and A. M. Guilford took a limited supply into town on foot, for the most needy of his patrons.

One of the unique figures among the guests which the city is entertaining against their will is William N. Flynt, of Monson, who celebrated his 70th birthday yesterday. Mr. Flynt came to town on the first train Monday, and has been confident ever since that he would be able to reach home within the next hour or two. He went out toward Indian Orchard with the workmen Tuesday morning, and came back on the same train a little later. When it started out again he went along, under the impression that it would run through to Palmer, but when it returned in the afternoon, with him as the only passenger, the crowd cheered him lustily, he meanwhile waving a loaf of bread by way of acknowledgment and to show that he was adequately provisioned. Yesterday morning he telephoned to his house that he would surely be home during the day to attend the birthday party that had been under consideration for a good while, and directed his men to get out the ox teams and break a road to Palmer, so that there would be no difficulty in getting to Monson after leaving the Boston and Albany railroad. But the party had to go on without the figure-head, who contented himself with the gift of a silver-headed umbrella that was sent to him here in Springfield from a friend in Albany before the blockade.—Springfield Republican of Thursday.

The Most Severe Storm For Years.

The storm in Monson, which began here about midnight Sunday night, has been the worst ever experienced for at least 29 years. When the snow began falling the streets were clear of snow, but on Wednesday only the principal streets were even passable, and a single track has been broken out through the center of these streets, while great mountains of snow were thrown up on the sides of the sidewalks that had been shoveled out for pedestrians. During the little more than 24 hours the storm prevailed, the snow fell to a depth of from 3 to 3½ feet on a level, and drifts from 10 to 15 feet high were very common. No grocery man, and only a few milk dealers made their rounds. Monday night the stores all closed, and the town was apparently deserted. Many of the workmen in the large factories and straw shops were obliged to stay in the village with friends, their homes in some cases being only a mile or less away. Tuesday morning the people turned out and opened up the sidewalks, but none of the mills or straw shops run, the operatives being unable to reach their places of employment, and all business was at a standstill. The mills and straw shops resumed operations Wednesday morning, but no mails had been received, and only one train had been over the road, this being the 5.15 p. m. train that had been stalled at Stafford since Monday. A gang of shovelers and a snow plow cleared the road Thursday at 12.10, and trains are now running regularly. The warm weather of yesterday settled the snow considerably, and most of the highways were passable, but many of the country roads were not broken out. The first mail which reached here after Monday morning was brought in Wednesday by Postmaster Farrington and Sam Stevens, who made the trip to Palmer Wednesday afternoon, and again Thursnay forenoon, this time bringing the first papers which had been received since Monday. Monson people can stand it, but they don't admire being shut out from the outside world for three days at a time.

WARE AND VICINITY.

Some of the physicians made their calls on horseback the first of the week, and one of them is credited with a fall in a snow drift.

F. Bombard advertised to sell a lot of valuable horses at auction yesterday, but on account of the storm the auction has been indefinitely postponed.

Here is richness. A New York envelope manufacturing firm has issued a circular to stationers in which it says:—

> Do not use goverment stamped envelopes, as it encourages that monopoly, and is injuring the trade of every stationer, printer and dealer in envelopes in the country; on the other hand, exert all your influence to discourage their use and thus assist the effort that is now being made to have them entirely abolished.

As the above firm is a member of the envelope combination recently formed for the purpose of freezing out small manufacturers and advancing prices for the benefit of the "combine," the disinterested (?) coolness of this effort to destroy the government "monopoly" is quite edifying.

Thomas J. Potter, vice president and general manager of the Union Pacific Railroad, died at Washington last Friday. Twenty-five years ago he began as a lineman on an Iowa railroad at $45 a month, and at the time of his death he was receiving a salary of $40,000 a year. His life is a luminous example of what brains and hard-working energy may accomplish for a man in this country.

LEGISLATIVE DOINGS.

From our Special Correspondent.

Boston, March 14, 1888.

On Thursday the Legislature took prompt action to prevent a repetition of the horror which occurred in the Springfield Union office Wednesday. In the Senate an order of Senator Howe of Middlesex was adopted regarding the better efficiency of fire escapes, and in the House the rule was suspeneded to admit the order of Mr. Barrett of Melrose in regard to a better supervison of the construction and alterations of buildings on the part of the building inspectors, as the district police in that capacity are termed.

The Senate spent most of the afternoon on the bill of Senator Gleason of Plymouth to make one per cent in volume of alcohol the standard for intoxicating drink, instead of three per cent, as under the present law. Senators Gleason, Howland of Bristol, Pike of Essex, Gleason of Worcester and Palmer of Middlesex spoke in favor of the bill, and Senators Sullivan, Kimball and Dwyer of Suffolk and Howe of Middlesex spoke against it, beside brief remarks by by other senators. By 20 to 12 the Senate voted in favor of the bill.

On two separate matters the committee on towns has reported adversely on any general legislation regarding the division of towns.

The House is arranging for its annual dinner.

Miles Standish (though he persistently fails to have a town in the state named after him, witness the latest attempt this month in South Scituate where, though Standish was one of the five names which might be chosen, yet Norwell was selected by 215 out of 221 votes) will probably have a monument erected to his memory, for the committee on expenditures has reported a resolve appropriating $6000 to the Standish Monument Association for the completion of the Standish monument.

Friday's chief feature was the hearing before the insurance committee on the petition of the order of the Iron Hall for leave to pay benefits to its members other than sick or accident benefits. Ex Gov. Robinson was senior counsel for the order, but the forenoon was given to Insurance Commissioner Merrill, who made a most scathing attack upon the order as a speculative scheme, and ridiculed sharply the mathematics of Supreme Justice Somerby of the supreme sitting of the order. He figured out that if the order took in no new members for seven years, on its own statements, it would have only $5,000,000 to meet $13,000,000 of obligations, and on a liberal calculation of new membership, it would have only $25,000,000 with which to meet $63,000,000 of obligations. It has only two sources of revenue, from lapsed policies and from new members. The former makes the plan just like tontine insurance, which the state has stamped out as unjust and dishonest. The latter makes the plan just like that of Mrs. Howe's bank. Those who are in it early may make something, if they get out soon enough, but those who are in at the final crash must lose all they put in.

A remarkable vote occurred in the Senate Monday on the tenement liquor bill, so called. In the main it is the same bill as that which passed the House last year, but was defeated in the Senate by Republican votes, and votes, too, which nearly cost those who cast them their reëlection. But the counsel for the opposing sides had agreed to a measure somewhat changed from last year's, and on a roll call it had the vote of every senator present. Those absent were Messrs. Clark of Hampshire, Clark of Essex, Dwyer, Hartwell, Marble, Palmer, Shea, Towne and Tucker.

An adverse report was made in the Senate Monday by the labor committee on punishing those who require work on legal holidays in factories, workshops and mercantile establishments, and those who fail to observe the law for Labor day as a holiday. Senator Howard of Bristol and Representatives Mellen of Worcester and Keene of Holyoke dissent from both reports.

The public health committee reported a bill on Monday whose object is to deter from suicide those who in a fit of unbalanced reason may attempt death by poison. Any one, according to the bill, who sells poison without a physician's prescription, must keep a record of the person to whom and the object for which the poison is sold. The label of the bottle or box must be in black letters on a red ground, and the antidote must be given with the poison. Giving a false answer, or failing to comply with the law is punishable by $50 penalty.

On Tuesday the state house committee reported a bill for buying the reservoir lot just back of the state house, on which to erect accommodations for the state offices. It also provides for making Temple street a direct line with Mount Vernon street, which now comes down the hill east of the state house. Further, it looks out for the property rights involved. These three points are the substance of a very long bill. But nothing is said about what sort of building shall be put up after the land is secured. It is said that a bill yet to be reported will provide for a reference of the matter to a commission. But that formality has already been gone through with, and plans have been obtained at large expense. Last year's Legislature, however, being very thin skinned as to public criticism, and fearing to take up so heavy a problem, brought all the plans to absolutely nothing in its haste to get home early. Legislators prefer to shirk the state house question rather than meet it. They have done so for three years, and I suppose they will do so this year. Of course, the matter can wait one year well enough, and it will be so for years to come, I expect.

Senator Howard of Bristol on Tuesday presented a substitute bill to prevent employes from working in factories or mercantile establishments, which will be debated to-morrow.

The committee on election laws reported a pretty radical bill Wednesday, applying to elections in towns. Its object is to prevent the state of the vote from being known, so that political managers may have a chance to rally around and bring in their absent voters. The bill prohibits any election officer from giving out any information regarding the number of ballots which have been cast, the number of voters present, the number of votes given for any person, the name of any person who has voted, the name of any person which has been voted upon, or any other fact tending to show the state of the polls. The committee is unanimous, and the bill is based on an order of Mr. Russell of Maynard, who stated to the committee that at a town meeting he had seen persons in the room go and look at the official check list and then go out and bring men who had not voted.

Ought to pass has been reported on the bill to raise the salary of the secretary of the state, but with an amendment to make it the figures $3500, instead of $4000.

Two or three speeches on the Beverly Farms debate were made Tuesday, after the House had passed unanimously a motion to close debate at 4.30 Wednesday afternoon, but on Wednesday so many members were absent, snow-bound, that the motion was reconsidered and defeated. Debate was then resumed and continued all of Wednesday afternoon without a vote.

"Behold the world rests." Headache and neuralgia have been cured by Salvation Oil, the great and infallible pain-remedy. Price 25 cents.

I have had catarrh for twenty years, and used all kinds of remedies without relief. Mr. Smith, druggist, of Little Falls, recommended Ely's Cream Balm. The effect of the first application was magical, it allayed the inflammation and the next morning my head was as clear as a bell. One bottle has done me so much good that I am convinced its use will effect a permanent cure. It is soothing, pleasant and easy to apply, and I strongly urge its use by all sufferers.—Geo. Terry, Little Falls, N. Y.

HOW UNPLEASANT

it is to see a beautiful child's face disfigured with vile humors, bursting through the skin in pimples, blotches, and sores, and sadder still, when the young and innocent are laughed at and twitted in all such cases. Parents should give them that good and pure remedy, Sulphur Bitters, which will search and drive out of the blood every particle of humor.—Health Gazette. (2w51)

THE HOMLIEST MAN IN PALMER

as well as the handsomest, and others are invited to call on any druggist and get free a trial bottle of Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and lungs, a remedy that is selling entirely on its merits and is guaranteed to relieve and cure all chronic and acute Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis and Consumption. Large bottles 50 cents and $1.

SOME FOOLISH PEOPLE

allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They often say: "Oh, it will wear away," but in most cases it wears them away. Could they be induced to try the successful medicine called Kemp's Balsam, which is sold on a positive guarantee to cure, they would immediately see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. Price 50c. and $1. Trial size free. At all druggists'.

Advice to Mothers.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle. 1y23

WE ARE SNOWED IN,

and will continue our great sale of $47,000 worth of men's, boys, and children's clothing, saved from the late New York fire, until Saturday, March 24th, at Caryl's Block, Main street, Palmer, Mass. The appraisers for the insurance companies, after carefully examining this stock clothing, concluded that the same was not so badly damaged as claimed by the assured clothing manufacturers, and failing to agree as to the actual loss, were forced to take the stock, turn it into money, and the goods must be sold at once in order to make a final settlement. All goods are appraised at forty cents on the dollar of manufacturers' cost. And this is all we want of them. The fire sale will enable the people of Palmer and vicinity to secure their clothing for almost nothing. We will tell you here of a few bargains. We will sell men's nice business suits, all to match, for $3.65. This suit cost to manufacture $13.25, and if it does not suit you in every respect, or if you do not think it worth $13.25, bring it back at any time in four days and we will pay you $3.65. Elegant cheviot suits worth $15, must go for $4.95. Beautiful cassimere suits worth $17, marked $6 85; 1000 different kinds of diagonal, worsted, and corkscrew suits, which cost to make about $20, we will sell for $9.75. Good working pants worth $2, are now marked at 75 cents. We have 60 different styles of cassimere pants at $1.20 that can't be bought elsewhere for less than $4. We have a large line of boys' suits, pleated black suits, suitable for the season, worth $5, but we will let them go at $1.75. 1500 men's overcoats, worth from $7.50 to $25, will be sold for from $3.85 to $9.80. Insurance Company's salesroom. Open evenings till 9 o'clock.

TOWN WARRANT.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—Hampden, ss. To George W. Ely, Constable of the Town of Palmer, Greeting:

In the name of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, you are hereby directed to notify and warn all the inhabitants of the Town of Palmer qualified to vote in elections and town affairs to meet at the Town House in said Palmer, on MONDAY, the nineteenth day of March current, at 10 o'clock a. m., to act on the following articles, viz:

Article 1. To choose a Moderator to preside at said meeting.

Art. 2. To determine the number of Selectmen, Overseers of the Poor, Assessors, School Committee, and Constables the Town will elect for the ensuing year.

Art. 3. To act upon the reports of the Selectmen, School Committee and other Town Officers.

Art. 4. To determine the compensation of the Collector of Taxes for the ensuing year.

Art. 5. To see if the town will allow a discount upon the taxes that may be assessed for the ensuing year.

Art. 6. To determine the manner of collecting the taxes that may be assessed for the ensuing year, and state the terms and conditions of the same.

Art. 7. To elect all necessary Town Officers for the ensuing year.

Art. 8. To raise and appropriate such sums of money as may be necessary to defray the expenses of the town for the ensuing year.

Art. 9. To see if the town will authorize its Treasurer to borrow money in anticipation of the taxes for the current year, the same to be paid from said taxes.

Art. 10. To determine the manner of repairing the highways and bridges for the ensuing year.

Art. 11. To see if the town will continue to hire the rooms now occupied for a lockup and tramp room.

Art. 12. To vote by ballot, which shall be yes or no, in answer to the question, "Shall licenses be granted for the sale of intoxicating liquors in this town?"

Art. 13. To see what action the town will take in regard to choosing a Board of Health.

Art. 14. To see if the town will accept the list of jurors as revised by the Selectmen.

Art. 15. To hear reports of committees, and act thereon.

Art. 16. To choose committees and give them instructions.

Art. 17. To see if the town will make an appropriation for the benefit of the Young Men's Library Association.

Art. 18. To see if the town will raise money to convey pupils to and from the public schools.

Art. 19. To see if the town will vote to accept the provisions of chapter 264 of the acts of the year eighteen hundred and eighty-six, the same being an act to provide for precinct voting in towns.

Art. 20. To see if the town will make an appropriation for the celebration of Memorial Day.

Art. 21. To see if the town will vote to raise and appropriate money to suppress the illegal sale of intoxicating liquor.

Art. 22. To see if the town will vote to pay the members of the fire department the amount of the certificates of service which have been issued to them by the board of engineers.

Art. 23. To see if the town will vote to pay the steamer company one hundred and fifty dollars, or any other sum, for services for the coming year.

Art. 24. To see if the town will instruct the assessors to make a new valuation of the property of the town and have the valuation printed for general distribution.

Art. 25. To see if the town will make an appropriation in addition to that made last year for putting the history of the town into manuscript and authorize the town history committee to procure the same to be properly done.

Art. 26. To see if the town will vote to raise and appropriate a sum of money for necessary aid to soldiers and sailors and their families, and the families of the slain, and entrust the same to the Merrick Post of the Grand Army of the Republic, according to the provisions of chapter 189 of the Acts of the year 1885.

Art. 27. To see if the town will vote to raise and appropriate a sum of money to extend the Central street sewer in the Depot village from Park street to near the head of Central street.

Art. 28. To see if the town will vote to raise and appropriate a sum of money to construct a branch of the Central street sewer in the Depot village, along Pleasant street to near the Congregational church.

Art. 29. To see if the town will vote to raise and appropriate a sum of money to drain Walnut street, near Converse avenue in the Depot village, and the yard about the school house in the Depot village.

Art. 30. To see if the town will vote to raise and appropriate a sum of money to repair the street in the Depot village, which leads northerly from Pine street past the house of George Lyman.

Art. 31. To see what action the town will take regarding the following bridges: The one across the Ware river near house of Jeremiah Dutton; the one across the Quaboag river at Blanchardville; and the two bridges across the Quaboag river near the house formerly occupied by M. C. Fenton, the last three being the same which were washed away by the late freshet.

Art. 32. To see if the town will accept and allow a road as laid out by the Selectmen in the Depot village and described as follows: Beginning on the easterly side of Park street, near the intersection of the carpet mill road, and in line of C. E. Dewey's land; thence running in line of said Dewey's land N. 35 E. 14 rods and 12 feet to a point 46 feet southeasterly from a stake and stones at the southwest corner of S. A. Blodgett's land. The proposed street is on the westerly side of the line described, and is 50 feet wide at Park street, narrowing to 46 feet at Blodgett's corner.

Art. 33. To see if the town will accept and allow a road as laid out by the Selectmen in the Depot village and described as follows: Beginning on the northerly side of School street and extending said street, easterly in the same course 8 rods to a stake and stones; thence S. 3½ E., 24½ rods to the north west corner of land of William Rhodes. The above described street is on the southerly and westerly side of the described, and is 50 feet wide.

Art. 34. To see what action the town will take toward fencing the cemetery at Palmer Center.

Art. 35. To see if the town will allow individuals to empty their water closets and sink drains into the sewers of the town, and if so, fix the charges therefor.

Art. 36. To see if the town will raise and appropriate an additional sum not exceeding one thousand dollars for the erection of the new high school building.

The polls will be open at 10 o'clock a. m., and close at 2 o'clock p. m. The names of Selectmen, Overseers of Poor, Assessors, School Committee, and Constables, who are voted for, must be all on one ballot. Town Clerk and Treasurer on a separate ballot.

And you are hereby directed to serve this warrant by posting up attested copies thereof at the different public places designated by the vote of the town, seven days at least, before the holding of said meeting, and cause this warrant to be printed in the Palmer Journal, at least two issues before the holding of said meeting.

Hereof fail not, and make due return of this warrant, with your doings thereon, to the Town Clerk, on or before the holding of said meeting.

Given under our hands this eighth day of March, A. D. 1888.

They have without question some of the most remarkable bargains ever shown, especially in their CLOTHING DEPARTMEMT. No FIRE INSURANCE SALE, or any kind of a Sale can meet their extremely low figures, as any judge of clothing who has recently seen our stock will verify.

WE ARE BOUND TO SELL OUR GOODS, MAKE OR BREAK.

It is break at the present time, and is the greatest opportunity which has ever been offered the public for purchasing goods at much less than the cost of the raw material.

We have the finest stock of
WASH DRESS GOODS
ever shown in town, having received the heaviest stock of these goods ever purchased by us.

Have you seen our
5c., 10c. & 25c. COUNTERS?
We have over one thousand different articles at the above prices, and are positive we can meet every want in this line.

OUR NEW SPRING WOOL DRESS GOODS

will be on sale Saturday morning, March 17, and if you want to see a beautiful line of these goods, we shall be pleased to show you, and you will find our price on same as low, if not lower, than you will obtain elsewhere.

OUR SPRING NECKWEAR

has arrived, and we consider it, as you undoubtedly will, a remarkably handsome line.

We are still making to order many SPRING SUITS, having the best $20.00 assortment of woolens ever shown by us.

REMEMBER-- A Harper's Bazar Pattern given away with every dollar's worth of goods purchased.

Respectfully Yours, S. H. HELLYAR & CO.

Never Despair

Until you have tried what Ayer's Pills can do for you. It is the Liver that renders your view of life so gloomy. Depend upon it, a box of Ayer's purely vegtable, sugar coated, Cathartic Pills would materially change your feelings, and still make LIFE WORTH LIVING.

Lucius Alexander, Marblehead, Mass., says: "I was severely afflicted with Dyspepsia and Enlargement of the Liver, most of the time being unable to retain any solid food on my stomach. Three boxes of Ayer's Pills cured me."

"Ayer's Pills are a sure cure for Liver Complaint. Nothing seemed to help me until I finally began to take Ayer's Pills."—E. S. Fulton, Hanover, N. H.

Ayer's Pills,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles $5.

Why Pay One Dollar?

When you can buy the best Blood Purifier and Nerve Tonic for Fifty Cents.

THORN'S

Hop and Burdock Tonic

STANDS AT THE HEAD OF ALL

SARSAPARILLAS, BITTERS, TONICS,

And Similar Preparations.

It is prepared with the greatest care by I. B. Thorn, who has had twenty years of actual experience in compounding Physicians' prescriptions, and is warranted not to contain a particle of aloes or other drug.

It is composed of Sarsaparilla Root, Burdock Root, Prickly Ash Bark, Mandrake Root, Golden Seal Root, Dandelion Root, and the best Northern Grown Hops, the proportion of which when properly combined make the best preparation in existance for curing all blood diseases.

It is the Best Tonic and Invigorator, as Hundreds can Testify.

It cures Biliousness, Sick Headache, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, General Debility, Mental and Physical Exhaustion, and Nervous Prostration.

There is no other preparation like it, and no other that has had the sale in so short a time. Its merits have sold nearly Seventeen Thousand Bottles in the last two years.

SULPHUR BITTERS.

The Great Germa Remeedy.

For those deathly bilious spells depend on SULPHUR BITTERS. It will cure you.

SULPHUR BITTERS will build you up, and make you strong and healthy.

Do you suffer with that tired and all-gone feeling? If so, use SULPHUR BITTERS; it will cure you.

Try SULPHUR BITTERS to-night, and you will sleep well and sleep better for it.

Ladies in delicate health, who are all run down, should use SULPHUR BITTERS.

$1000 will be paid for a case where SULPHUR BITTERS will not assist or cure. It never fails.

SULPHUR BITTERS will make your blood pure, rich and strong, and your flesh hard.

Don't be without a bottle. Try it; you will not regret it.

Operatives who are closely confined in the mills and workshops; clerks who do not procure sufficient exercise, and all who are confined in-doors, should use SULPHUR BITTERS. They will not then be weak and sickly.

If you do not wish to suffer from rheumatism, use a bottle of SULPHUR BITTERS; it never fails to cure.

Cleanse the vitiated blooh when you see its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Blotches and Sores. Rely on SULPHUR BITTERS, and health will follow.

SULPHUR BITTERS will cure Liver Complaint. Don't be discouraged; it will cure you.

A Seasonable Idyl.

There's no sound to me so thrilling,
Marrow-freezing, horror-filling,
When it penetrates the region of matutinal repose
As the voice of our Mariar,
Who's gone down to start the fire,
And comes back with the announcement that "the water-pipe is froze!"

A vision of the ruin
And disaster that is brewin'
Flies across my morbid fancy in the twinkling of an eye,
And like ghost of Banquo rises
The plumber as he sizes
Up the bill we'll have to settle in the coming by and by.

And John, unreas'ning creature,
With scorn in every feature,
Lays to me and poor Mariar what the elements have done;
Asks how in the name of thunder
He's to stand it, 'til I wonder
If I sent to Manitoba for this weather—just for fun!

I'm dazed with hydrostatics,
Hydraulics and pneumatics,
And I wish improvements modern were ten thousand miles away;
I'll hunt a flowing geyser,
Take little Mary 'Lizer,
And a note upon the bureau will tell John I've gone to stay.

—Amy Hamilton, in New York World.

AMONG THE PARAGRAPHERS.

The North wind doth blow
And we shall have snow,
And what does the coal man do then,
Poor thing?

He laughs out with glee,
With a merry he-he,
And tacks on a dollar a ton.
Shrewd thing.

Blobson—"Good morning, Smith. What's up?" Smith (dolorously)—"Coal."—Burlington Free Press.

It is when a man sits down, suddenly, unexpectedly, and severely that he realizes what a hard, hard world this is.—Epoch.

—An exchange speaks of "Death's Fatal Work." When Death tackles a job his work is generally fatal. There may be exceptions, but they are not on record.—Norristown Herald.

Application(to St. Peter)—Will you please let me in, sir? I'm all petered out.

St. Peter (eyeing him darkly)—Yes, and you'll stay Petered out, young man. You're a Chicago humorist.—New York Sun.

Young wife (reading)—What is Temple bar, lovey?

Young husband—I'm a little uncertain, tootsey, but I always had an impression it was a sort of buffet attachment to Westminster Abbey.—New Haven News.

Artist (who is spending a month in the country)—"My dear Miss Purpleblossom, you are so beautiful. Would you not like me to do you in oil?"

Miss Purpleblossom—"Do you take me for a sardine?"—Burlington Free Press.

Wealthy Floridian—Here we are wreathed in orange blossoms and the birds singing in every breeze. What could be lovelier in January? New York Girl (twenty-eight and desperate)—Just one orange blossom wreath and Mendelssohn's march rippling through the perfumed air.—Harpers' Bazar.

"Why not use our titles?"—Mr. Robinson—"Why, my dear Mrs. Doctor Smith, I am so glad to see you! Where have you been all these months?" Mrs. Smith—"Thank you, Mrs. Retired Grocer Robinson. I have been traveling abroad with Mr. Doctor Smith and my dear old friends Mrs. Merchant Tailor Jones. How is your husband."—Life.

Speaks practically. Miss Prime—"Philosophers dissagree as to which period of life seems the longest to mankind. What is your opinion, doctor?" Doctor (meditatively)—"Well, it varies. In women, for instance, the longest generally is between twenty-nine and thirty. I know in my wife's case ten years elapsed between her twenty-ninth and thirtieth birthdays."—Judge.

"We shall need about three tons more sulphur for pit 537," said one of the subordinate devils, as he put his head into Satan's private office, "and half a load of brimstone and a new poker. There's a tough consignment just sent down—two murderers, an Anarchist, an incendiary and a conversational punster."

"Is he one of the kind that makes puns on people's names?" asked the head of the establishment, meditatively.

"Yes."

"Well," said the chief, "I hate to waste sulphur, but I guess you can give him a pit all by himself."—Puck.

THE VIRTUE OF REST.

There is no better preventive of nervous exhaustion than regular, unhurried, muscular exercise. If we could moderate our hurry, lessen our worry, and increase our open-air exercise, a large proportion of nervous diseases would be abolished.

For those who cannot get a sufficient holiday, the best substitute is an occasional day in bed. Many whose nerves are constantly strained in their daily vocation have discovered this for themselves. A Spanish merchant in Barcelona told his medical man that he always went to bed for two or three days whenever he could be spared from his business, and he laughed at those who spent their holidays on toilsome mountains. One of the hardest-worked women in England, who has for many years conducted a large wholesale business, retains excellent nerves at an advanced age, owing, it is believed, to her habit of taking one day a week in bed. If we cannot avoid frequent agitation we ought, if possible, to give the nervous system time to recover itself between the shocks.—Cassell's.

Speaking of anthems I am reminded of the story of two old British sailors who were talking over shore experiences. One had been to a cathedral and had heard some very fine music, and was descanting particularly upon an anthem which gave him much pleasure. His shipmate listened for awhile and then said: "I say, Bill, what's a anthem?" "What?" replied Bill, 'do you mean to say you don't know what a hanthem is?" "Not me." "Well, then I'll tell yer. If I was to say to yer, "Ere, Bill, give me that 'andspike', that wouldn't be a hanthem. But if I was to say, 'Bill—Bill—Bill—giv—giv—giv—giv—giv me, give me that—Bill, giv me, give that hand, giv me that, hand, handspike, spike,—spike, ah—men, ah—men: Bill, givemethathandspike, spike, ah—men!' Why, that would be a hanthem."—Troy Times.

Make No Mistake.

If you have made up you mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion and preparation curative power superior o any other article of the kind before the people. Be sure to get Hood's.

"In one store the clerk tried to induce me to buy their own instead of Hood's Sarsaparilla. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was, I had taken it, was perfectly satisfied with it, and did not want any other."—Mrs. Ella A. Goff, 61 Terrace street, Boston, Mass.

"My wife suffered from sick headache and neuralgia. After taking Hood's Sarsaparilla she was much relieved."—W. R. Babb, Wilmington, Ohio.

The Dude and the Damsel.

On mild Potomac's banks did dwell
  A winsome maiden, passing fair,
With form and features very swell,
  And shining, golden yellow hair;
Likewise this pretty gyurl had she
A pile of $ $ $ $ fair to see.

In distant Gotham lived a youth,
  A youth of manly form and mien,
Whose chiefest aim in life forsooth
  Was in new garments to be seen;
He joyed to travel on his shape,
Nor wished his tailor to escape.

Two hundred pairs of trousers gay
  Were his delight, his joy, his pride,
He added to them every day,
  And owned a hundred suits beside;
His collars were a sight to see,
His neckties shone right gorgeouslee.

His canes he numbered by the score,
  His waistcoats flamed in varied hue;
He had full fifty hats or more
  And many a patent leather shoe;
His gloves were faultless: past compare
His gorgeous silken underwear.

This swelly youth went every day
  To sun him on the promenade,
To show the world his garments gay
  And fascinate each pretty maid;
He murmured, quite contentedlee,
"The women are all gone on me!"

The pretty gyurl in Washington,
  She found her life a dreary blank;
Though suitors came in crowds, each one
  She spurned regardless of his rank;
"Because," said she, "I do not feel
That they could fill my life's ideal."

The army tried in vain to win
  The beautiful but joyless maid;
Likewise the men, with lots of tin,
  The lurking chink of gold essayed:
To Bench and Bar, she answered "Naw!"
I can't endure the horrid law."

But lo! it chanced that to that town
  There came the gorgeous Gotham youth,
Said he, "I think I'll settle down,"
  Said she, "My fate has come, in truth!"
He saw the golden dollars gleam,
She felt the power of love's young dream.

"At last! at last!" she murmured soft,
  "At last my young ideal I see,
The lovely youth I've dreamed of oft,
  And swift my heart goes out to hee:
I'm sure that all my life I can
Be happy with that pretty man!"

Quoth he: "Though as a usual thing
  I shy at marrying, lots of tin
May reconcile me to a ring;
  Therefore I think I'll take this in!"
So pitapat away they goed
In double harness down life's road.

—Haberdasher.

A LITTLE HEROINE.

"I'll go and try my fortune with Uncle Robert," said Jack. "Bess and Maria failed because he could not stand girls with such fine ideas; but I won't trouble him that way. The old fellow is all right, if one only stirs him up in the right way."

"My child," says the gentle Mrs. Raymond, "I do not like to hear you speak in that boyish, rude manner. I fear your uncle would have less patience with you than with your sisters. No, he does not intend to forgive me, and we will make no further advances."

"Oh, yes we will, deary!" and Jack's curly head buried itself coaxingly. "Do, do let me try to win the obstinate old—to win our honored relative to a proper sense of his obligation to his only sister and her interesting family. How will I do that, eh? Now, mother, don't shake your head so; it's no use. Why did you give me a boy's name and bring me up on tops and marbles if you want me to be a real girl?"

"It was your father's wish, you know, dear. He was so grievously disappointed that he had no son. But Jacqueline is not a boy's name," and Mrs. Raymond shook her head smilingly at her wayward daughter.

"No; but Jack is, and I'm never called anything else," the young lady replied, triumphantly, with an obstinate shake of the jetty curls that gave such piquancy to her bright face. "If father were only here he would let me try anything that would take the burden from off your shoulders; and, now that he is dead, uncle must surely forgive you for marrying against his wishes. What right had he to have wishes, anyhow!"

"He was my only living relative and guardian," answered Mrs. Raymond, who was always ready to excuse her brother's harsh treatment.

"Well, mother, do let me 'go beard the lion in his den, the Douglas in his hall,'" said Jack, gaily. "You know we must do something, for we can get no work of any kind in this place, though we have tried so faithfully."

"Well, go, my dear, and I shall pray for your success," said the gentle mother.

Mr. Robert Doran sat cowering beside a dull, spiritless fire one bright, spring morning. His room was dusty and disordered, though its furnishing was good, and even luxurious. He looked moody and discontented, as if the wealth that showed itself in the handsome surroundings brought no pleasure to its owner. Perhaps he was thinking of the sister who had once made sunshine in the now gloomy home, and wished that his pride would let him beg her to come back and care for him in his dreary, old age.

A tap at the door aroused him.

"Who is it?" he demanded in surprise; for his servants never came unsummoned.

The door opened slowly, and a bright face peeped in.

"It's Jack Raymond, at your service, uncle," and in the venturesome girl walked, and stood before him.

She wore a long ulster closely buttoned to the throat, where a standing collar and neat black tie showed themselves, while on the short, glossy curls was a jaunty "Derby," guiltless of any trimming save the simple, masculine band.

"Why, I did not know my sister had a son!" exclaimed the old gentleman, his wrinkled face showing something very like satisfaction as he looked at the new-comer.

"She hasn't," said Jack. with dancing eyes, "but it isn't my fault. I do my best. I'm awful sorry I'm not a boy, uncle, if it would please you; but let me stay awhile and you'll see what a first-class substitute I am"—removing her hat and bowing with easy grace. "But, dear me, how dull it is here! Your fire wants a good stirring up!"

And seizing the poker, she attacked the coals in the grate with an energy that seemed to imply she would like to treat him in the same fashion.

A bright blaze followed her vigorous action, dancing on the walls and showing the bright hues of pictures and furniture, despite the dust that covered them, bringing a cheery look, too, even to Mr. Doran's grim face.

"There!" said Jack, giving a last approving poke, "that's better. Now, if I just open this window and let in the sunshine, so,"—suiting the action to the word,—"you'll feel as bright as a spring morning."

The girl was like a May-day herself, fluttering around the room as if wafted by invisible breezes, her bright face the embodiment of sunshine; and as the lonely old man watched her light fingers bringing order out of the confusion that had reigned so long, a quizzical smile dawned on his face.

"For a would-be boy, you seem to know a good deal about such things," he remarked dryly.

"That's the mother-part of me," said Jack, as she "settled" the chairs and furniture with a touch that only a woman has. Then she came and sat down on a footstool beside him, and clasping her knees with both hands, looked up with smiling audacity, saying:

"You'd better let me stay awhile, uncle; you'd be a great deal more comfortable."

There was deep anxiety beneath the merry exterior, for she knew well how vital her uncle's favor was. Her mother was too delicate, her sisters too fine ladies to work, and the child (she was not much more, in spite of her seventeen years,) felt as though the burden of the family rested on her shoulders.

Her uncle was very wealthy, and if he only could be brought to forgive her mother what happy days they would see!

He had sent once for her two sisters to spend a week at Glenside—a step toward reconciliation, which her mother had hailed with thankful joy. But before the week was out he sent them both home, saying he couldn't stand their fine airs; that, since his sister had chosen to bring up her family to such idle habits, he would have nothing more to do with them.

The one longing of the old man's heart had been for a son to bear his name. That hope disappointed in the early death of his son, he had gradually grown into the selfish, gloomy man Jack found him this fair spring morning.

There was something in her bright, boyish face that fascinated him; and now, with a warmth that surprised himself, he said:

"Stay, if you like, my child. It's a dull place within doors, but there are flowers and sunshine."

It was so much kinder than Jack had dared hope, that she could have cried for joy.

"Oh, you dear uncle!" she said, and kissed his wrinkled old face with an honest heartiness that he was quick to feel.

"There, then," he said impatiently, as if ashamed of the unwonted softness he had shown, "go and tell the cook that you're going to stay, and that she must give you a room and see to your meals. Do not be afraid if she's cross," he added, somewhat anxiously; "she does not like trouble or work."

"I won't," said Jack, as she ran off.

Half an hour later she looked in the door again, saying:

"Come to lunch, Uncle Robert. Yes," (as he stared at her in amazement,) "I know cook always brought you just what she liked up here because she did not want you down stairs. There has been a skirmish; but it's all right now. Come for my sake, please."

Mr. Doran drew his dressing-gown more closely around him, and followed Jack down into the small breakfast room, which she had chosen because it was so much pleasanter than the great, oak-wainscoted dining room.

A most tempting lunch was spread upon the round table, and flowers were intermingled with the dishes in profusion. It was pretty to see the air with which she led her uncle to his place, then took her own opposite him, almost forgetting, in her eagerness to serve him, to satisfy the demands of her own healthy young appetite.

"Did cook do all this?" Mr. Doran asked with some curiosity.

"No," replied Jack, blushing; "she wanted to take you up some smoky soup, and because I said 'no,' she wouldn't do anything else, so I did it myself. Don't you like it all?" and she looked anxiously at him.

"You are not like your sisters," he said, not replying to her qustion.

"Oh, no!" and Jack shook her head somewhat dejectedly; "they are very accomplished—real young ladies, you know. But then, I can cook and sweep, and do things that they can't."

"But I do not want a cook and a housemaid," said Mr. Doran.

"I think you do," laughed Jack. "If you had only tasted the soup!"

"Child!" cried Mr. Doran, suddenly catching at her hand, "I'm a disappointed, heart-broken old man. If you could only love me a little —"

"I do, Uncle Robert; I do, truly!" said Jack.

And she meant it; for her warm heart had gone out at once to the lonely old man, so unhappy in the midst of his wealth; and she comforted him now, in the best way she knew, with loving words that, skeptic as he was, he felt were honest and true.

"I fear master be a-goin' to die; he wor never so gentle afore," said cook, a week later.

That very night Mr. Doran was taken suddenly and violently ill. Jack heard his groans, and hastening to his assistance, found him suffering intensely.

"You must go for the doctor, cook; there's no one else to go," said Jack.

"Indeed I'll not," replied cook decisively. "He's been none so good a master to me that I should risk myself in the dark for him."

"Then watch him while I go," implored Jack. "Do not leave him or he'll die."

She had been down to the village once on an errand for her uncle, and knew she could find her way, but it was so different now at night. Brave Jack for going! But how her heart fluttered and her limbs quivered with fear, as she hastened on through the starlight.

The way seemed interminable, but at last the few lights which yet burned in the village shone out close at hand, and one part of her journey was over.

Chesney was one of the most unfortunate villages, with houses so painfully similar that a stranger might well wonder how each inhabitant knew his own home. Little wonder, then, that Jack, after much uncertain pausing before various doors should at last decide upon the wrong one.

She rapped gently, then listened. A footfall sounded on the pavement; a hand was on the gate, and—yes, the steps were coming toward her, swiftly, certainly.

She drew herself closely to the side of the porch, almost fainting with terror, when a hand outstretched touched her arm, and a voice exclaimed:

"Who are you? Speak! Who comes so late to my door?"

Gathering her courage with one last effort, Jack faintly replied:

"I want Dr. Robbins. My Uncle Doran is very ill at Glenside."

"And have you come alone from Glenside, poor child?" the voice inquired.

"Yes, sir," she said, impatiently; "but you are the doctor? Will you hurry? Uncle may be dying now, I have been so long in coming."

The poor girl had hurried till she was almost exhausted, and stood leaning, breathless and panting, against the door.

"The doctor lives two houses beyond. Shall I go with you and call him?"

But there was no response, for poor Jack, who had never in her life done anything so womanish, fainted quietly away.

She was only dimly conscious of being lifted in strong arms that held her close, and of being rapidly driven over a rough road, and at last finding herself lying on her own bed at Glenside, with a gray-haired gentleman bending over her. She started up pale and anxious.

"How is uncle?" she cried. "I must go to him."

"No, no, child; lie still; he is better," the doctor said.

"Well, then, tell me all about it. Who was it, and how did I get home?"

The doctor knew what she meant.

"You were at the minister's door, and he, coming home from visiting a sick parishioner, carried you, when you fainted, to my house, and I drove you both over here. Now, drink this; then, if you feel able, you may go to your uncle—he wishes to see you."

Jack obediently swallowed the strengthening potion, then smoothed out the tangled curls with her hands, and without stopping to look in her mirror, hastened to her uncle's room. He was not alone, for by his bedside sat a grave, pleasant-faced young gentleman, who looked at her with kindly, smiling eyes. She gave him but a hasty glance, for her uncle's hand was outstretched to her, and she ran to take it.

"And this is the brave girl who went two miles through the dark night to bring help to her cross old uncle?" he said. "I would have died if the doctor had not come so soon. You saved me. What reward can I give you, dear child?"

"Forgive my mother," whispered Jack, softly.

Mr. Doran's face brightened.

"I was sure you would say that," he cried. "Jack, dear, I have forgiven her already, and as soon as it is morning the minister here is going for her. Do you think she will forgive me and come? She must come and stay, for I can never let you go, Jack—dear, brave Jack! You have taught me a lesson."

And he drew the blushing, happy face down and kissed it with all a father's tenderness.

There were tears in the bright eyes when she looked up. For the second time within a few hours Jack forgot her manliness and was crying. But the tears and blushes gave a softness and charm to her face that made it wonderfully attractive to Malcolm Boyd, the young minister, and she looked so sweet and lovable and womanly that he felt an almost irresistable inclination to take her to his heart.

"She will be a woman worth the having," he thought, and then and there resolved to win her for his own.

Jack had meant to make some pretty speech to the minister, to thank him for helping her; but she only remembered now how she had felt his arms around her in the starlight, and blushing, she hung her head in silence.

That was two months ago. She smiles now when she thinks of it, for she is no longer shy with the minister. Can you guess why?

Mr. Doran is building a beautiful little parsonage close by the village church, and rumor says that when it is completed Jack will go there as the minister's bride. Perhaps it is so, for she is growing so quiet and womanly that her happy mother, who is renewing her own youth in beautiful Glenside, says that God has doubly blessed Jack's venture.—New York Journal.

Waiting.

Care not, if some outstrip thee in the race:
  The race is not unto the swift or strong;
  Thy gift will wait for thee however long,
No hand but thine can take it from its place

Care not, nor hasten; there is no soon or late,
  But all things have their seasons—stars to rise,
  Each star has its place and moment in the skies:
And thou must teach thy anxious heart to wait.

How many years in God's eternal plan
  The elements waited, till they found
  Their point in time's great circle rolling round,
To make thee what thou art, O Son of Man?

No hand may touch the wheels of God's design
  To hasten or retard them; and no power
  Can keep thee, at the one appointed hour,
From finding that which Right pronounces thine.

GOING TO JOHN.

"Going north, madame?"

"No, ma'am."

"Going south, then?"

"I don't know, ma'am."

"I never was on the cars. I'm waiting for the train to go to John."

"John?"

"Oh, John's my son. He's out in Kansas on a claim."

"I'm going to Kansas myself. You intend to visit?"

"No, ma'am."

She said it with a sigh so heart-burdened the stranger was touched.

"John sick?"

"No."

The evasive tone, the look of pain in the furrowed face, were noticed by the lady who asked these questions as the gray head bowed upon the toil-marked hand. She wanted to hear her story, and to help her.

"Excuse me—John in trouble?"

"No, no—I'm in trouble. Trouble my old heart never thought to see."

"The train does not come for some time. Here, rest your head upon my cloak."

"You are kind. If my own were so I shouldn't be in trouble."

"What is your trouble? May be I can help you."

"It's hard to tell it to strangers, but my heart is too full to keep it back. When I was left a widow with three children, I thought it was more than I could bear; but it wasn't bad as this—"

The stranger waited till she recovered her voice to go on.

"I had only the cottage and my hands. I toiled early and late all the years till John could help. Then we kept the girls at school—John and me. They were married not long ago. Married rich, too, as the world goes. John sold the cottage, sent me to the city to live with them and he went West to begin for himself. He said he had provided for the girls, and they would provide for me now."

Her voice choked with emotion. The stranger waited in silence."

"I went to them in the city. I went to Mary's first. She lived in a great house with servants to wait on her; a house many times larger than the little cottage—but I soon found there wasn't room enough for me"—

The tears stood in the lines of her cheeks. The ticket agent came out softly, stirred the fire, and went back. After a pause, she continued:

"I went to Martha's—went with a pain in my heart I never felt before. I was willing to do anything so as not to be a burden. But that wasn't it. I found they were ashamed of my bent old body and my withered face—ashamed of my rough, wrinkled hands—made so toiling for them—"

The tears came thick and fast now. The stranger's hand rested carelessly on the gray head.

"At last they told me I must live at a boarding house, and they'd keep me there. I couldn't say anything. My heart was too full of pain. I wrote to John what they were going to do. He wrote right back, a long, kind letter for me to come right to him. I always had a home while he had a roof, he said. To come right there and stay as long as I lived. That his mother should never go out to strangers. So I'm going to John. He's got only his rough hands and his great warm heart—but there's room for his old mother—God—bless—him—"

The stranger brushed a tear from her cheek and awaited the conclusion.

"Some day when I'm gone where I'll never trouble them again, Mary and Martha will think of it all. Some day when the hands that toiled for them are folded and still; when the eyes that watched over them through many a weary night are closed forever; when the little old body, bent with the burdens it bore for them, is put away where it never can shame them—"

The agent drew his hand quickly before his eyes, as if to look for the train. The stranger's fingers stroked the gray locks, while the tears of sorrow and of sympathy fell together. The weary heart was unburdened. Soothed by a touch of sympathy the troubled soul yielded to the longing for rest, and fell fast asleep. The agent went noiselessly about his duties that he might not wake her. As the fair stranger watched she saw a smile on the careworn face. The lips moved. She bent down to hear.

"I'm doing it for Mary and Martha. They'll take care of me sometime."

She was dreaming of the days in the little cottage—of the fond hopes which inspired her, long before she learned, with a broken heart, that some day she would, homeless in the world, go to John.

"No, my girl," said old aunt Sally, "it isn't a pleasant thing for a woman to live without a husband in this world. If it hadn't been for my parents I'd a married a good man. But I listened to them, and I've been chewing the bitter end of disappointment all these years."

"Is it possible?" ejaculated the fair young boarding-school girl. 'Why don't you switch off on gum."—Judge.

A TWO-EDGED ARGUMENT.

Two congressmen, the one from Texas, the other from Massachusetts—I do not feel at liberty to designate them more closely—fell to discussing at the club the other day the well-worn subject of the tobacco habit. The Texas man, like many of his southern colleagues, is an inveterate chewer. His friend from Massachusetts is, on the other hand, outspoken and fond of using very strong language whenever the subject of chewing tobacco is broached.

"Brother ——," said he, "is it possible that you chew tobacco?"

"I must confess I do," the other quietly replied.

"Then I would quit it, sir," sententiously continued the Massachusetts man. "It is an ungentlemanly practice—an uncleanly one. Tobacco? Why, even a hog wouldn't chew it."

"Now, brother from the land of baked beans, cod, and culture," resumed the Texan in his drawling manner, "do you chew tobacco?"

"No, sir," emphatically declared the other, almost pale with indignation. "No, sir; I do not."

"Then, pray," asked the Texan, as he lazily changed the quid from his right jaw to the left, "which is most like the hog, you or I?"

It is needless to add that the Massachusetts man, after that sally, stood treat for the crowd.

THE WIDOW DECEIVED HIM.

"Your children all turned out well, I reckon?" said a man addressing an old acquaintance he had not seen for many years.

"Well, yes, all but Bill, poor feller."

"Drunk liquor, I reckon?"

"Oh, no, never drunk no liquor, but hain't amounted to nothin'. Bill wuz deceived, an' it ruint him."

"Love affair."

"Yes, an' a mighty bad one."

"She married some other fellow, eh?"

"Oh, no, she married him. She wuz a widder, an' let on that she wuz well off, but she wasn't. W'y, she wan't able to get Bill a decent suit of clothes the week after they wuz married. Yes, the poor fellow has lost confidence.—Arkansaw Traveler."

HOW A WOMAN WOULD PROPOSE.

I think it would be funny to hear a woman propose to a man. I wonder how she would do it.

"I think you're the nicest man—I ever saw, and—I never loved any body before—but well—of course—I could marry plenty. There's Harry Thompson—and Mr. Jones—I know they would—if I—but I'd rather have you than any body."

"When shall the wedding day be?"

"Let me see; the 21st—no, I've got to go to a wedding on the 15th—I think it will be the 15th—I don't know. And then there's Mrs. Wilkerson's german on the 20th, and the ball on the 22d. Perhaps about the 29th—if Mary Farrellones doesn't give her garden party. Let us say some time next month, dearest."—San Francisco Chronicle

A remarkable dam is about to be constructed by a water company at the San Mateo canyon, four miles from San Mateo, Cal., in order to form a reservoir. The canyon is very narrow and steep, and 15 feet below the bottom is a solid rock, on which the foundation of the dam will rest. The structure will be 170 feet high, 175 feet wide at the base, 20 feet at the top and 700 feet in length. It will be the largest stone dam ever known to have been built. The dike will have a curvature of eighty feet and the convey side will be upstream. The material will be a new sort of concrete composed of stone. The walls will be perfectly smooth. The reservoir that will be formed by it and the adjacent hills will be about eight miles in length and 150 feet deep in the deepest places. Its capacity will be about 32,000,000,000 gallons. The water will be conveyed by tunnels to the city of San Francisco.

Robert J. Burdette, in his characteristic way, makes these observations, which seem to be pertinent to certain recent criticisms on the compensation of evangelists: "My son, when you hear a man growling and scolding because Moody gets $200 a week for preaching Christianity, you will perceive that he never worries a minute because Ingersoll gets $200 a night for preaching atheism. You will observe that the man who is unutterably shocked because F. Murphy gets $150 a week for temperance work, seems to think it is all right when the barkeeper takes in twice as much money in a single day. The laborer is worthy of his hire, my boy; and he is just as worthy of it in the pulpit as he is upon the stump. Is the man who is trying to save your immortal soul worth less than the man who is only trying his level best to go to Congress? Isn't Moody doing as good work as Ingersoll? Was not John B. Gough as much the friend of humanity and society as the bartender? Do you want to get all the good in the world for nothing, so that you may be able to pay a high price for the bad?"

"God made both tears and laughter, and both for kind purposes: Tears hinder sorrows from becoming despair and madness; and laughter is one of the very privileges of reason, being confined to the human species."—Locke.

"I hear your father hasn't appeared at any of your big dinners lately, Snaply," observed Bob White, the other day. "I hope the old gentleman isn't sick?" "No," said Snaply, "he isn't sick. He'll show up later." "When?" "When he learns not to call the butler 'sir.'"—Puck.

Trees on the Pacific coast are remarkably free from knots. Nowhere in the world can such long, smooth planks be procured as in California. Pine boards 80 feet long and 3 feet wide, with the entire surface free from knot or blemish, can easily be procured.

All the hotels have had a great jam of guests again this week, and two of the hotels will be enlarged if the rush continues for any length of time.

John O'Connor, the barber in Strong's block, contemplates leasing the room formerly occupied by the Diamond Candy Store, and removing his shop to that place.

The Eastern Hampden Medical Society met at the residence of Dr. W. H. Stowe on Thorndike street yesterday afternoon. Dr. Ballard of Hampden was the essayist.

The ballot-box registering the "yes" and "no" votes was accidentally broken during town meeting Monday, and the machine will have to be repaired before it can be used again.

The gentlemen who participated in the leap year ball at the Weeks House Monday evening, talk of giving the ladies a banquet and ball in return, to take place within three weeks.

"Holy week," which begins next Monday, will be duly observed at St. Thomas's Catholic church. Rev. Father Quinn of Willimantic, Ct., preached a Lenten sermon at the church last evening.

Rev. H. L. Hastings of Boston lectured to good audiences at the Baptist and Congregational churches Sunday afternoon and evening, on "The World without the Bible," and "The mistakes of Moses."

St. Patrick's day was not recognized locally this year by any demonstration. The social, which was to have been held on the evening of that day by the Ancient Order of Hibernians, was postponed.

Next Sunday being Palm Sunday, mass will be held at 11 o'clock instead of 9, at St. Thomas's Catholic church. On Easter Sunday the choir will render Rosewig's mass, with orchestral accompaniment.

At the district court last Saturday this civil entry was made upon the docket: Patrick Moriarity of Belchertown vs. Geo. D. Greene of Ludlow, for an action of contract; Gardner for plaintiff; defendant per se.

There is perceptible need of more light during the evening in the waiting-room of the union station, and until the electric lights are put in the traveling public will have to be as lenient as possible with the railroad officials.

Bartholomew Shea, a brakeman employed on the New London Northern road, had his finger badly jammed Saturday evening while uncoupling cars in the yard. He was taken to the office of Dr. J. J. Flynn and had his wound cared for.

An unsuccessful attempt was made Wednesday night to enter the clothing store in Caryl Brothers' block, kept by New York parties. The lock was badly damaged, and it is believed that failure of the burglars to effect an entrance was due to their being frightened away.

Road Commissioner Loomis has obtained the plans and specifications of Architect Henry T. Merriam of Millbury for the proposed highway bridges to be constructed in town the coming spring. These plans will be submitted for the consideration of the voters at the adjourned town meeting.

A base ball meeting will be held at the district court room next Monday evening at 7 o'clock, to consider the question of a nine for next season. A manager will be chosen and other important matters, pertaining to the proposed team, discussed. All the citizens interested are requested to be in attendance.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Second Congregational church has chartered a special car of the New London Northern road and made arrangements to visit Three Rivers this evening, to attend the flag festival held at the Union Evangelical church under the auspices of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the town.

The train leaving Palmer at 11.45 a. m., on the Ware River Railroad, and Thorndike at 1.15 p. m., stopped at the town house crossing Monday to accommodate voters who wished to attend town meeting. Those who voted "Yes" were furnished tickets both ways by the friends of license. Here's a pointer for those who favor prohibition.

There was a general temperance airing in the churches last Sunday morning and evening, which resulted, it is said, in winning a good many voters to the ranks of the "no license" party, which, after all, suffered a defeat at the polls Monday; and the churches will now let the matter drop until just before the annual meeting next year.

The young people of the Congregational church have engaged Rev. Pleasant Hunter of Newtonville, a former pastor, to lecture at the church next Tuesday evening, his subject being "What, and What Not." An admission of 25 cents will be charged, the proceeds to go toward paying for the recently purchased piano. Mr. Hunter's popularity with Palmer citizens will doubtless insure the young people a full house.

The unfavorable weather of the past few weeks has delayed work upon the electric light station. However, the roof is raised and the boiler has been placed upon its foundation. Quite a large number of new poles have been set this week upon the different streets of the village, and if the weather proves favorable the outside wiring will be finished in less than two weeks. The inside wiring for the incandescent system is now fairly under way.

S. C. Bradley of Manchester, Ct., has been in town this week securing memberships for the United States Mercantile Protective Association of New York, a company incorporated to facilitate the collection of claims against careless or dishonest debtors by a system of correspondence, and to protect the merchant from those who would be likely to defraud him. The collections are made by letters from the office of the member, and payments are made directly to him, the association handling none of the money. There are no commissions, and the membership fee is only $6 per year, which includes all stationery, and bi-monthly rate sheets, sent from the main office. Quite a number of the local merchants have been members for a year or more, and Mr. Bradley secured a number more during his stay in town.

The first leap year ball of the season was held at the Weeks House hall Monday evening, under the auspices of L. L. Merrick Woman's Relief Corps, with 56 couples in attendance. The committee in charge of the affair sent out a large number of invitations to their lady friends about the village, who selected their gentlemen and paid them marked attention during the evening. Dancing began at 8 and continued until 12 o'clock. The costumes worn by the ladies were, in many instances, very pretty, and the grand march, led by Miss Hattie Blanchard and gentleman, presented a very pleasing spectacle. The Palmer Orchestra furnished the music, and W. F. Shaw acted as prompter. Those in charge of the affair were the following: Floor director, Mrs. C. K. Gamwell; aids, Miss Della Holbrook, Mrs. H. W. Smith, Miss Ida Taft, Mrs. G. W. Lyman, Mrs. F. R. Lawton, Miss Effie M. Stone, Miss Georgia Packard, and Mrs. W. C. Hitchcock.

Mrs. E. Parker of Putnam, Ct., has been the guest of Mrs. J. P. Shaw on Walnut street this week.

Frank Parker and wife of the Dresser House at Southbridge were in town the first of the week.

W. H. Whiting and wife of Greenfield are the guests of Charles E. Dewey on South Main street.

Mrs. J. T. Warren and daughter of Brattleboro, Vt., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Stone at the Converse House.

Miss Mary Clark, who has held the position of housekeeper at the state primary school, has resigned on account of illness.

Miss Annie Shaw entertained a party of young friends with a candy-pull at her home on West Main street Tuesday evening.

Miss Henrietta Blaisdell of Springfield was a victim of the late storm, being detained in Thorndike a week as the guest of W. C. Greene at Oak Terrace.

Dr. G. H. Wilkins of this place was elected president of the Western Massachusetts Homeopathic Medical Society at its meeting in Springfield Wednesday.

C. Julian Tuthill, who is attending school at the Boston University, spent Sunday with his parents on Pleasant street. He was accompanied on his visit by George Kenney of Boston, another student at the University.

Miss Lizzie Wassum celebrated the 15th anniversary of her birthday at her home on Pleasant street last Friday evening. Quite a number of her acquaintances were present, and were treated to a supper and dance.

Town Meeting.

A RETURN TO LICENSE. THE OFFICERS ELECTED.

In spite of the deep snow and consequent hard getting out with teams, there was a fair attendance at the annual town meeting Monday, about 600 votes being cast, or 100 less than a year ago. There were four straight tickets in the field, and about half a dozen splits, while pasters were freely used on all names, from selectmen to constables. All the "tricks of the trade" were practiced, and sharp fight was made for the principal offices. The prohibitionists evidently centered their efforts on an attempt to control the board of selectmen, leaving a great share of the work of distributing "No" ballots to boys, and as a consequence were defeated at both points. Many dodged the license question altogether, not voting either way, and the temperance men might have made a large difference in the vote by closer attention to the matter. No business was attempted other than the election of officers. Two of the old board of selectmen are retained, also J. B. Shaw as town clerk and treasurer, and a woman elected to take Mrs. Proctor's place on the school committee, the balance of the articles being postponed for two weeks. Following is a list of votes cast, a star* indicating election:

Another Slight Freshet.

THE QUABOAG OVERFLOWS ITS BANKS AND DAMAGES PROPERTY.

Rain fell almost incessantly Wednesday, melting the snow and swelling the streams. The storm was accompanied at times by violent wind, which made it difficult for the average pedestrian to carry an umbrella and keep it in its proper shape. The Quaboag became greatly disturbed about ten o'clock Wednesday morning, and shortly after 1 o'clock began to overflow its banks, rising a foot an hour, inundating the meadows for a distance of three miles. Every means that could be devised to prevent accidents was exercised by the officials of all the railroads centering here, for it was obvious to them that there was serious trouble ahead if the storm continued. In spite of all that could be done the temporary trestle bridge near the mill of J. S. Holden & Co., over which trains on the New London Northern Railroad pass and under which flows the Quaboag, began to weaken at an early hour that afternoon, and before night was swept away. The passengers on Conductor Sanders' train were obliged to be transferred yesterday by team to a point opposite the state primary school. No trains ran over either division of that road Wednesday night, as the bridge at North Monson was reported unsafe, while one of the abutments of the Burleigh bridge between Palmer and Three Rivers was in a bad condition. The dam at the factory of Lindley Co., at North Monson, give away that afternoon, doing considerable damage to the factory, moving the highway bridge several feet and delaying travel between Palmer and Monson. At Blanchardville the tracks of the Boston & Albany road were washed a little, and a land-side was expected. The tracks of the same road between Palmer and North Wilbraham were considerably damaged, so much so that trains had to run at a very slow rate of speed. There was a slight washout on the Ware River road near the works of the Palmer Wire Manufacturing Co., but trains could continue to run by watching the dangerous place carefully. The cellars of the tenement houses on River street contained several feet of water, which made bad work with some of the provisions stored in them. The cellars of several houses on Park street were also flooded, and foot travel was considerably impeded on that street. The water gradually subsided yesterday morning, and no fears were entertained that further damage would result. The water nearly flowed over the dyke at Holden's mill, but timely action prevented it. The New London Northern road has had a gang of men at work yesterday and to-day, building a new trestle bridge, and trains will be running over it by Saturday night at the latest.

WALES.

The Baptist society has given Rev. H. H. Manser of Coldbrook a unanimous call to become their pastor, and he expects to commence his labors April 1st.

WEST WARREN.

Landlord A. N. Aldrich of the hotel is dangerously sick with the bronchitis.

The F. M. T. A. society made a nice little sum out of their entertainment and dance last Friday night.

The Hibernians had a banquet in Washington Hall last Saturday night, and there were many present from the surrounding villages.

The band fever has again struck the villages, and it looks as though the boys meant business this time. The instruments have come and the members are: H. L. New, cornet; E. T. New, cornet; Chas. Bernard, cornet; Felix Labrie, baritone; M. C. Dutch, alto; Chas. Reed, alto; John Hedge, tenor; John Caldwell, tenor; V. St. Germain, B bass; James Collins, tuba.

WARREN.

The Hall farm sale is postponed to Monday, the 26th.

The Universalists expect to have their new organ ready for use next Sabbath.

Fred H. Sylvester succeeds W. E. Patrick as agent for Brigham & Co., milk dealers.

Mrs. E. H. Hitchcock is visiting her sisters in Palmer, Mrs. Perlin Shearer and Mrs. John Foster.

On account of the storm the dedication of the Odd Fellows' Hall has been postponed to April 19th.

M. E. Shattuck of Worcester has sold his Prouty farm, so called, including stock and tools, to Samuel Adams.

Two entertainments will be given March 27 and 28 by the Womans' Home Missionary Society, conducted by G. B. Bartlett of Concord. About 40 people take part.

THREE RIVERS.

Charles Kendrick, formerly of this place, has taken a position in a meat market in Huntington.

Joseph Betters, who has clerked for Shaw Bros. for several years, has resigned, and will run a tea and coffee team.

Saturday morning as E. F. Shaw, of Shaw Bros., was making up the cash for deposit, he was called out for a few minutes to the back store, and when he returned found that about one hundred dollars was missing out of over two hundred, also Alexander Brothers. Mr. Shaw took the 1 o'clock train to Palmer, and had a warrant sworn out for Brothers's arrest. He was found at West Warren Sunday morning, and $96 recovered. He was taken before Judge Robinson and plead guilty, and was bound over to appear at the higher court, bail being fixed at $300.

BONDSVILLE.

Ed. Ryther, who has been yard boss for the Boston Duck Co. for about four years, has left for Northampton, where he is going into the paint business.

Clark & Hastings have just finished their new market in this place. It has all the modern improvements, including a Chase cold blast refrigerator. It was built by N. Aiken of Palmer, and is pronounced by experts to be the best market in town.

The funeral of Merrick Whitney was held in the Methodist church last Sunday, and was largely attended. He was for many years yard boss for the Boston Duck Co., was selectman of Belchertown for two years, and had been just reëlected for a third.

There will be a jug-breaking at the M. E. church Saturday evening. Children under twelve will be admitted free, adults 25 cents. Ice cream and cake will be offered for sale. The operetta "Conquered by Kindness" will be presented. The cast is:

|---|---|
| Prof. Grim | H. A. Smith |
| Prof. Cratchet | C. S. O'Regan |
| Tom Merrifield | O. B. Smith, Jr |
| Mme. Darrell | Mrs. R. Russell |
| Her Two Daughters | Miss J. S. WhitneyMiss B. Canterbury |
| Mrs. Ketchum | Mrs. F. A. Packard |
| Hetty Jones | Miss L. Aldrich |

The entertainment will commence at 7 o'clock. The proceeds will be devoted to getting new books for the Sunday-school library.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

The work of clearing up the ruins of the paper mill, which was stopped a week by the storm, has commenced again, and is being pushed forward. The temporary roof over the finishing room has been taken off and the walls are being taken down to the windows, which will be made larger than before. Large quantities of brick and other material are coming in, and the work of rebuilding will commence soon. The contract is said to call for the completion of the mason work in May.

Fifty people attended the Ladies' Benevolent Society social at the house of A. D. King Wednesday evening, despite the heavy storm, and they took the opportunity to play the most practical kind of a joke on E. W. Wall, our venerable organist. A nicely tied-up package was brought in, directed to the pastor. When he undid the same another wrapper was directed to some one else, to whom it was passed, with the remark that some one seemed to be forcing the season with April 1st jokes. After passing through several hands it came to Bro. Wall, who undid a fine morocco pocket-book containing a good-sized package of greenbacks as a token of appreciation of his services as organist.

WILBRAHAM.

Miss Mary Downing is home on a vacation of several weeks.

The Willing Workers meet Wednesday afternoon with Miss Mary Warner.

Misses Dora and Fannie Merrick are spending the week with friends at Northampton and Smith college.

The young people of the South church are to give the drama "Neighbor Jackwood," in the chapel soon.

The ladies' benevolent society of the Congregational church held a dime social at Dr. Fosket's last evening.

The spring term of the academy commenced Wednesday with a large attendance, notwithstanding the severe storm.

Orson Knowlton has bought the residence of Miss Nancy Pease on Main street, and will take possession the 1st of April.

Miss Fannie Merrick has been spending a part of her vacation with her brother, Prof. Charles Merrick, and other friends at Worcester.

Georgie Knowlton, who started last week for the south and was blockaded by the snow storm, returned last Thursday and will start again next week.

The parish meeting of the Congregational church was held at the chapel Monday afternoon and the following officers were elected: Clerk and collector, H. M. Bliss; parish committee, Monroe Pease, C. P. Bolles, A. A. Phelps; committee on entertainments, C. M. Pease, C. P. Bolles, A. A. Phelps; treasurer, J. C. Moody; committee on music, E. Bliss. The sale of pews will take place next Monday.

THORNDIKE.

T. Clifford of Worcester was in town this week.

Pete Phanneff is clerking for H. T. Bishop.

Frank Mayett has gone into the meat business in Union block.

D. G. Riley, who is studying at Middlebury, Vt., is home on a vacation.

The social dance held on Friday evening of last week was an enjoyable affair.

A number from this place will go to Ware to-night to see the Dailys in "Upside Down."

Leonard's mass, in E flat, will be sung at the Catholic church on Easter Sunday, for the first time in town.

The Democrats of this place feel more than pleased with the vote their candidate received on Monday last, and consider it a first step toward the young citizens' advancement in the town.

Tickets for the Emmet Club in "Foiled" will go on sale next week. The entertainment will be given at Union Hall, Fast eve, April 4th, after which there will be a social dance, with music by Lyon & Luman's orchestra, assisted by Messrs. Southland and Hoyt of Springfield. Chas. W. Stuart of Springfield will prompt.

William Hart of this place was thrown from a sleigh on the Palmer road near the Kelley place Monday. The horse ran with the sleigh attached to him, running into several other sleighs on the road, and doing much damage to them. By the time it reached this place there was nothing left but the shafts, the sleigh being demolished. The horse of Dr. Sirois of Three Rivers ran away the same day.

MONSON.

E. K. Bradway is visiting friends here.

The spring term at the academy began Wednesday.

Charles Hathaway has a new pacer which shows a lively clip.

Geo. H. Newton has been in Providence this week on a business trip.

Jarvis Smith, an old resident of the town, died Thursday morning.

The adjourned auction sale of Isaac H. Robbins's property takes place to-morrow.

Mrs. Lottie Stacy Whittemore is attending the spring openings in Boston this week.

The Granite Clothing Co. has put in the mammoth Rochester lamps, the largest in town.

Misses Lizzie Williams and Gertrude Bell spent Sunday at Miss Williams' home in Bolton, Ct.

The chicken pie supper at the M. E. church Thursday evening, was a very successful affair.

Mrs. Frank Fenton is in New York, learning the S. T. Taylor system of dress-cutting, also draping, at A. T. Altman's.

The lecture, "Reminiscences of the late civil war," by Dr. George E. Fuller at the academy this evening, will be well worth attending.

A. M. Guilford has leased a large pasture of Barry Bros., and will purchase a number more cows to supply his increasing milk business.

Several of the stones on the south side of Memorial Hall have fallen out, and the damage will need repairing soon or more damage will be done.

Harlow Chapin, who started for Newburn, N. C., was snow bound at Meriden and had to abandon his trip, returning home last Thursday.

The Ladies' Social Circle of the Universalist society met with Mrs. C. R. Buffington yesterday afternoon, and the Bible class met there in the evening.

Mrs. S. J. Comey is in New York attending the millinery openings, and has engaged Mrs. Lottie Stacy Whittemore as trimmer for the spring season.

Rev. E. A. Perry of Hudson, N. Y., formerly of Palmer, has been engaged by Marcus Keep Post, G. A. R., to deliver the address in Memorial Hall on Decoration Day.

There will be a regular meeting of Marcus Keep Post, G. A. R., in Grand Army Hall next Monday night, when it is expected that Comrade H. M. Fay will relate his army experiences.

John Thacker, a lad of about 16 years, and who has been visiting friends in Taunton, started for home last Monday but has mysteriously disappeared and no clue to his whereabouts can be obtained.

The Windsor club held their second drive whist party Wednesday evening. Refreshments were served, and a very pleasant evening was enjoyed by all. The first prize was captured by Miss Helen Hussey and G. L. Fuller, and the booby prize fell to Mrs. L. C. Flynt and W. J. Randall.

The popular drama "Fidelity" and a farce was presented to a crowded house by the young people of St. Patrick's society at Central Hall last Saturday night. The solos by Misses Alice Cantwell and Kate Keefe and William Cantwell received merited applause.

At the Prohibitory caucus held at the town hall Wednesday evening the following list of town officers was nominated: Moderator, W. J. Ricketts; town clerk, C. M. Gage; treasurer, E. D. Cushman; selectmen, H. M. Tucker, Marvin Bradway, E. P. Keep; overseers of the poor, C. L. Jewett, A. H. White, Lester Howe; school committee, William Sutcliffe, Lee Blanchard, F. E. Morris, Rev. Ira A. Priest; fence viewers, Joseph H. Carpenter, Melville Smith; constables, W. H. Underwood, Joel H. Thompson, Charles L. Jewett, Dwight B. Richmond, A. A. Babbitt, Charles Hathaway, Edward D. Kelso. The Republicans and Democrats will hold their caucuses next week. No date has yet been fixed, but they will probably be Thursday and Friday.

The rain of Tuesday and Wednesday took off nearly all the large body of snow, and caused very high water, the streams being within 8 inches as high as they were last month. Considerable damage was done, both to the highways and sidewalks. The water undermined the railroad track near A. Squier & Son's lumber yard, and Downer's train was delayed some time until the place was blocked up. The upper part of Lindley & Co.'s dam at North Monson was carried away for the second time in about a month. No mails were received Wednesday evening on account of the bridge at Palmer, which was swept away also for the second time in about a month, and trains are obliged to run up a point opposite the state primary school, passengers being conveyed from there to Palmer in teams. No freight has been received since Wednesday morning.

WARE AND VICINITY.

Peter Querie & Company have opened a wood-yard on North street, on land of Mr. Hill, nearly opposite Prospect street.

The Center Farmer's club meet this evening, when they will discuss the question: "Shall we have license in Ware the coming year? and the reasons why."

A grange was formed at Ware Center last Monday evening with 19 charter members. The officers are to be elected and installed April 2.

THE validity of the Bell telephone patent has been sustained by the United States supreme court, in a decision handed down Monday. Justices Gray and Lamar did not sit on the case, and Justices Bradley, Field, and Hanlan dissent, in an opinion based on the Drawbaugh claim, so that the court stands four to three in favor of Bell. The dissenting justices consider that the evidence proves conclusively that Drawbaugh's invention antedated Bell's. The battle has been a long and sharply contested one, but is now clear for the great monopoly to become more monopolistic than ever.

THE striking engineers on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy road seem to be fairly beaten, as the railroad managers now have all the engineers they want. The strike of engineers on the Santa Fe and other roads "for sympathy" has been abandoned, the engineers recognizing the folly and wickedness of such a step.

THE United States supreme court decides that the Western Union Telegraph Company is not exempt from taxation in Massachusetts, even though many miles of its lines pass over post roads. The company owes the state over $37,000.

The suggestion of Senator Dawes as a delegate from the 12th district to the Republican national convention at Chicago is an admirable one. The senator would be no more honored than the district by his selection.

EX-GOV. Horace Fairbanks of Vermont, head of the large scale works at St. Johnsbury, Vt., died at New York last Saturday of pneumonia.

THE bill authorizing the issue of 10, 15 and 25 cent fractional silver certificates has passed the House at Washington.

IOWA Republicans are solid and enthusiastic for Senator Allison for the presidency.

JUNDGE BACON of the superior court died of appoplexy at Taunton Wednesday night.

A broken axle caused a terrible accident last Saturday morning on the Savannah, Florida & Western Railroad, when a section of the Cuban fast mail train was thrown from a trestle near Waycross, Ga., and 23 persons killed, besides injuring 35 others.

Georgia was visited by an electric storm Tuesday night which swept 100 miles across the state in about 30 minutes, wrecking many villages and killing scores of people.

State Treasurer Tate of Kentucky is reported to be a defaulter to the tune of nearly $200,000.

Governor Ames has named Thursday, April 5th, as Fast Day.

LEGISLATIVE DOINGS.

From our Special Correspondent.

BOSTON, March 21, 1888.

It was after 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon when the House finally reached a vote on the bill to incorporate Beverly Farms, and it stood 93 in favor to 108 against. Sixteen pairs were recorded, making a total of 124 on record against the bill, or a clear majority of the House. The Democrats were expected to be solid against the bill, but 20 of them voted for it. All the other votes, of course, came from the Republicans. Of the 34 representatives from Essex county, only six went on record in favor of the bill. The friends of the measure confess that they have no hope of doing anything further this year.

The Senate voted Thursday afternoon, by a large majority, in favor of the 1 per cent liquor bill, after it had been amended by striking out all reference to malt liquors.

The Senate stood 11 to 24 against Senator Howard's bill to prevent work in factories and stores on public holidays.

In the House Thursday a bill was reported from the public health committee, Mr. Wilkinson of Cambridge dissenting, in favor of more care in vaccination. The operation must be performed with an instrument which is cleaned in the presence of the patient, and the virus must be fresh from the cow within ten days.

A last despairing effort to save the Beverly bill was made on Friday, when Mr. Qua of Lowell attempted to have tabled his motion to reconsider the rejection, in order that it might be seen whether a compromise was possible between the parties, but Mr. Symonds of Salem, for the opponents of the division, said that no compromise was possible, and the House, by a decided majority, refused to reconsider, after spending an hour in debate. It was stated in the debate that the Farms people will come up again next year for division.

The public service committee has reported a salary bill for the clerks of court in all the counties, as follows: Barnstable, $1000; Berkshire, $2800; Bristol, $4000; Essex, $5200; Franklin, $1800; Hampden, $3500; Hampshire, $2300; Middlesex, $6000; Nantucket, $600; Norfolk, $2800; Plymouth, $2000; Worcester, $5200; Suffolk, civil, $6500; criminal, $6000.

The labor committee reported Friday a bill that no woman or minor under eighteen years in any manufacturing, mechanical or mercantile establishment, shall work over ten hours a day, with exceptions in unusual cases, and in no case are they to work over sixty hours a week.

Some secret railroad scheme was nipped in the bud by the House on Monday, though just what it was is not known. Rumor has it that it was the consolidation of the Boston & Albany with the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad. But that some powerful influence was behind it was evident from the strenuous fight that was made for it, for men don't fight for nearly an hour, as 'they did over that, unless there is something more than general principles and the good of the public behind it. The opposition to the order, which came down from the Senate, and proposed a general railroad consolidation law, was led by Mr. Wyman of Hyde Park, who scored a decided hit by displaying before the House a supposed tablet in the union station of the future under consolidation, as follows: "New York & New Brunswick Consolidated Railroad Depot. Built, 1895. President, Cornelius Vanderbilt; vice presidents, William Bliss, G. C. Lord, A. Sewell; general superintendents, Hudson River division, C. P. Clark; Connecticut River division, W. H. Barnes; Merrimack River division, J. T. Furber; Penobscot River division, Payson Tucker. Main office, Forty-second street, New York." On admitting the order, the House stood 102 to 41, not the necessary four-fifths.

A bill was reported from the liquor law committee to prohibit the sale of liquor on Thanksgiving and Christmas.

The labor committee, Mr. Mellen of Worcester dissenting, has reported against an eight-hour law.

On Tuesday afternoon the House debated the woman suffrage license bill on the question of passing it to be engrossed, and at the end of the afternoon voted in the affirmative by 100 to 92, and 18 pairs. This includes 228 members of the House, and was an unusually full vote. The debate was on a little different line from what it was before. Mr. Bixby of Brockton, who had voted for it, said he was satisfied by the confessions of its friends that it was only a woman suffrage movement in disguise, and not a temperance movement. He could support it no longer. Others took the position that it was really a woman suffrage bill. But its friends either denied it, or said they were not afraid of it if it was, and so it went through.

The committee on agriculture reported in the Senate a bill to prevent deception in the manufacture and sale of butter and cheese. It puts a penalty of a year's imprisonment, or a fine of from $100 to $500, on all who color imitation butter or cheese so as to imitate the genuine article.

The liquor committee reported a bill to limit to one in 500 people the licenses of the first three classes, except in Boston, where it is to be 250. A minority of the committee present a bill with those figures just doubled.

A motion in the House on Tuesday to reconsider the defeat of the general railroad consolidation order was tabled by the friends of the scheme.

The liquor law committee reported in the Senate Wednesday afternoon a bill to require all liquor license fees to be paid by the cities and towns into the state treasury; also a high license bill, fixing the scale as follows: First class, $1000; second and third class, $250; fourth class, $500; fifth class, $150; sixth class, $1. Senator Sullivan and Representatives Eames, McEttrick, Cronin, and Driscoll, dissented. They are a majority of the committee, and the chairman explained, in reply to a question, that four of the six who were present at the meeting were in favor of the bills. Finally they were recommitted with instructions to be reported back within a week.

The committee on taxation has reported a bill to require lists of all persons assessed for poll taxes to be posted on or before August 1; also a bill to make the assessors' valuation lists accessible as public property.

A bill from the committee on towns compels every town to elect an auditor, instead of permitting such election as at present. They also report against dividing Medford and making a new town of Brooks, and against annexing part of Hanson to Whitman.

The liquor committee reported Wednesday a bill to make last year's law for the issue of licenses to druggists permissive instead of compulsory. LANDON.

A CARD.—I desire to express my thanks to those who so kindly assisted me in my late affliction, both by kindly acts and sympathy; and sincerely hope that when they are called to part with loved ones they will find friends who will as readily assist and comfort them in their hours of sadness.

I have had catarrh for twenty years, and used all kinds of remedies without relief. Mr. Smith, druggist, of Little Falls, recommended Ely's Cream Balm. The effect of the first application was magical, it allayed the inflammation and the next morning my head was as clear as a bell. One bottle has done me so much good that I am convinced its use will effect a permanent cure. It is soothing, pleasant and easy to apply, and I strongly urge its use by all sufferers.—Geo. Terry, Little Falls, N. Y.

HOW UNPLEASANT

it is to see a beautiful child's face disfigured with vile humors, bursting through the skin in pimples, blotches, and sores, and sadder still, when the young and innocent are laughed at and twitted in all such cases. Parents should give them that good and pure remedy, Sulphur Bitters, which will search and drive out of the blood every particle of humor.—Health Gazette. (2w51)

A WOMAN'S DISCOVERY.

"Another wonderful discovery has been made, and that too by a lady in this county. Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly, and could not sleep. She bought of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night and with one bottle has been miraculously cured. ### THE VERDICT UNANIMOUS.

W. D. Sult, Druggist, Bippus, Ind., testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of Rheumatism of 10 years' standing." Abraham Hare, druggist, Bellville, Ohio, affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years' experience, is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys or Blood. Only a half dollar a bottle at LeGro & Lynde's Drug Store. 2

LAST DAY! LAST CHANCE!!

The Great Fire Sale of Men's, Boys' and Children's Clothing will positively close (to-morrow), Saturday, March 24, at 9 p. m. at Caryl's Block Palmer. The appraisers for the insurance companies, after carefully examining this stock clothing, concluded that the same was not so badly damaged as claimed by the assured clothing manufacturers, and failing to agree as to the actual loss, were forced to take the stock, turn it into money, and the goods must be sold at once in order to make a final settlement. All goods are appraised at forty cents on the dollar of manufacturers' cost. And this is all we want of them. The fire sale will enable the people of Palmer and vicinity to secure their clothing for almost nothing. We will tell you here of a few bargains. We will sell men's nice business suits, all to match, for $3.65. This suit cost to manufacture $13.25, and if it does not suit you in every respect, or if you do not think it worth $13.25, bring it back at any time in four days and we will pay you $3.65. Elegant cheviot suits worth $15, must go for $4.95. Beautiful cassimere suits worth $17, marked $6.85; 1000 different kinds of diagonal, worsted, and corkscrew suits, which cost to make about $20, we will sell for $9.75. Good working pants worth $2, are now marked at 75 cents. We have 60 different styles of cassimere pants at $1.20 that can't be bought elsewhere for less than $4. We have a large line of boys' suits, pleated black suits, suitable for the season, worth $5, but we will let them go at $1.75. 1500 men's overcoats, worth from $7.50 to $25, will be sold for from $3.85 to $9.80. Insurance Company's salesroom. Open evenings till 9 o'clock. CARYL'S BLOCK, Palmer. (2w51)

Having recently been visited by the GREATEST STORM IN MASSACHUSETTS, we must certainly be impressed with the fact that wonders never cease. This is true with greater severity at

THE - GREAT - BAZAR - STORE
OF
S. H. HELLYAR & CO.

They have without question some of the most remarkable bargains ever shown, especially in their CLOTHING DEPARTMEMT. No FIRE INSURANCE SALE, or any kind of a Sale can meet their extremely low figures, as any judge of clothing who has recently seen our stock will verify.

WE ARE BOUND TO SELL OUR GOODS, MAKE OR BREAK.

It is break at the present time, and is the greatest opportunity which has ever been offered the public for purchasing goods at much less than the cost of the raw material.

We have the finest stock of
WASH DRESS GOODS
ever shown in town, having received the heaviest stock of these goods ever purchased by us.

Have you seen our
5c., 10c. & 25c. COUNTERS?
We have over one thousand different articles at the above prices, and are positive we can meet every want in this line.

OUR NEW SPRING WOOL DRESS GOODS

will be on sale Saturday morning, March 17, and if you want to see a beautiful line of these goods, we shall be pleased to show you, and you will find our price on same as low, if not lower, than you will obtain elsewhere.

OUR SPRING NECKWEAR

has arrived, and we consider it, as you undoubtedly will, a remarkably handsome line.

We are still making to order many SPRING SUITS, having the best $20.00 assortment of woolens ever shown by us.

REMEMBER-- A Harper's Bazar Pattern given away with every dollar's worth of goods purchased.

Respectfully Yours, S. H. HELLYAR & CO.

You May Remove

Those unsightly Blotches, Pimples, and Sores by a faithful and persistent use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the best and most reliable alternative and blood-purifier ever discovered. "I was troubled for a long time with a humor, which appeared on my face in and blotches. Ayer's Sarsaparilla cured me."—Charles H. Smith, North Craftsbury, Vt.

"Until recently," writes Alice E. Charles, of Bath, Me., "my face has been covered with pimples ever since I was fifteen years old. I took four bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and my skin became as fair as could be desired."

Ayer's Sarsparilla,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles $5.

THORN'S

Hop and Burdock Tonic

STANDS AT THE HEAD OF ALL

SARSAPARILLAS, BITTERS, TONICS,

And Similar Preparations.

It is prepared with the greatest care by I. B. Thorn, who has had twenty years of actual experience in compounding Physicians' prescriptions, and is warranted not to contain a particle of aloes or other drug.

It is composed of Sarsaparilla Root, Burdock Root, Prickly Ash Bark, Mandrake Root, Golden Seal Root, Dandelion Root, and the best Northern Grown Hops, the proportion of which when properly combined make the best preparation in existance for curing all blood diseases.

It is the Best Tonic and Invigorator, as Hundreds can Testify.

It cures Biliousness, Sick Headache, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, General Debility, Mental and Physical Exhaustion, and Nervous Prostration.

There is no other preparation like it, and noother that has had the sale in so short a time. Its merits have sold nearly Seventeen Thousand Bottles in the last two years.

THE INCURABLE CURED!

HOPKINSVILLE, KY., Feb. 24, 1887.

Gentlemen—Seven years ago a sore developed on my nose from a finger nail scratch. I tried a few simple remedies, but the sore would not yield. I grew worse every year for seven years. Many thought I had a cancer. Over a year ago I began to take S. S. S., and two dozen bottles entirely cured me. When I began with Swift's Specific I was in very poor health, and could hardly drag about. After I had finished the course of S. S. S. I was strong and buoyant, and had a good appetite. I regard it as a most valuable medicine for ladies in weak, delicate health. It is a household medicine with me. Yours respectfully,

MRS. R. W. WILSON.

SPARTANSBURG, S. C., April 2, 1887.

Gentlemen—For twenty years I have had a sore on my left cheek. I had gradually been growing worse. The many physicians whom I had consulted were unable to do me any good. Last fall a year ago I began using S. S. S. At first it inflamed the sore, and it became more virulent than ever; so much so, indeed, that my family insisted that I should leave off the medicine. I persisted in using the S. S. S. At the end of two months the sore was entirely healed. Thinking that the evil was out of my constitution, I left off the medicine; but in November, ten months after a very slight breaking out appeared. I at once began again on S. S. S. It has done me more good than all the doctors and other medicines I ever took. Yours truly,

A. R. SHANDS.

WINSTON, N. C., April 12. 1887.

Gentlemen—Two or three years ago a cancer came on my face. It soon grew to be quite large. It wore on me, and my general health was very poor. Last September I began a course of S. S. S., which I have continued to the present time with there happiest result. The cancer entirely disappeared, there being no evidence or symptom of a cancerous character left. My general health is good now, and my appetite better than it has been for years. I am 82 years old, and to-day I am working in the field planting corn. Yours truly,

JONAS LIMEBACH.

Gentlemen—I had a sore on my upper lip for eight years. Seven different doctors attempted in vain to heal it. One gave me a small vial for five dollars, which was a "certain cure." It is needless to say it did me no good. About two years ago I became quite uneasy, as people thought I had a cancer, and I took a course of eighteen bottles of S. S. S. The result has been a complete cure. The ulcer or cancer healed beautifully, leaving scarcely a perceptible scar. From that day I have been in excellent health, the Specific having purified my blood thoroughly, increased my appetite and perfected my digestion. In a word, I feel like a new person, and, best of all, the 8-year ulcer is gone entirely. Yours truly, MRS. W. P. CANNON.

The Future Life.

How shall I know thee in the sphere which keeps
  The disembodied spirits of the dead,
When all of thee that time could wither, sleeps
  And perishes among the dust we tread?

For I shall feel the sting of ceaseless pain
  If there I meet thy gentle presence not,
Nor hear the voice I love, nor read again,
  In thy serenest eyes, the tender thought.

Will not my own meek heart demand me there?
  That heart whose fondest throbs to me were given?
My name on earth was ever in thy prayer;
  Shall it be banished from thy tongue in heaven?

In meadows fanned by heaven's life-breathing wind,
  In the resplendence of that glorious sphere,
And larger movements of the unfettered mind,
  Wilt thou forget the love which joined us here?

The love that lived through all the stormy past,
  And meekly with thy harsher nature bore,
And deeper grew, and tenderer to the last,
  Shall it expire with life, and be no more?

A happier lot than mine, and larger life,
  Await thee there; for thou hast bowed thy will
In cheerful homage to the rule of right,
  And lovest all, and renderest good for ill.

For me, the sordid cares in which I dwell,
  Shrink and consume the heart as heat the scroll;
And wrath hath left its scar—that fire of hell,
  Has left its frightful scar upon my soul.

Yet, though thou wear'st the glory of the sky,
  Wilt thou not keep the same beloved name,
The same fair, thoughtful brow, and gentle eye,
  Lovelier in heaven's sweet climate, yet the same?

Shalt thou not teach me, in that calmer home,
  The wisdom that I learned so ill in this,—
The wisdom which is love,—till I become
  The fit companion in that land of bliss?

—William C. Bryant.

AMONG THE PARAGRAPHERS.

"We've won our suit," the lawyer said,

Kissed His Mother.

She sat on the porch in the sunshine,
As I went down the street—
A woman whose hair was silver,
But whose face was a blossom-sweet,
Making me think of a garden,
Where, in spite of the frost and snow
Of bleak November weather,
Late, fragrant lilies blow.

I heard a footstep behind me,
And the sound of a merry laugh,
And I knew the heart it came from
Would be like a comforting staff
In the time and the hour of trouble,
Hopeful and brave and strong;
One of the hearts to lean on
When we think that things go wrong.

I turned at the click of the gate-latch,
And met his manly look;
A face like his gives me pleasure,
Like the page of a pleasant book.
It told of a steadfast purpose;
Of a brave and daring will—
A face with a promise in it,
That, God grant, the years fulfill.

He went up the pathway singing;
I saw the woman's eyes
Grow bright with a wordless welcome,
As sunshine warms the skies.
"Back again, sweetheart mother,"
He cried, and bent to kiss
The loving face that was lifted
For what some mothers miss.

That boy will do to depend on;
I hold that this is true—
From lads in love with their mothers
Our bravest heroes grew.
Earth's grandest hearts have been loving hearts,
Since time and earth began!
And the boy who kissed his mother
Is every inch a man!

NOTES BY THE WAY.

In the experience of any man who has traveled to any extent there is an element of the ludicrous which often contains some of the happiest experiences through which he passes. The railroad methods of transportation may be, and no doubt are, far superior to former methods, yet there is an uncertainty even in this means of moving from place to place, which is not always taken into consideration.

We marched upon Atlanta one night—we don't mean to say that we are soldiers and carry guns, nor had we knapsacks on our backs, nevertheless there was a small brigade, which came up out of the darkness to capture the handsomest city in the South, late at night. It happened something like this: We were informed by our traveling companion, who so kindly lead in our journey for a day, that a few miles out of the city was a very interesting scene which he would advise us not to overlook before we went our way. So, early in the afternoon we boarded a train on the Georgia Central railroad and rode four and one-half miles to the station called the "Barracks," so named because here the United States government has bought a plot of ground and is erecting barracks for the regular troops who are to be stationed here as soon as the buildings are completed. Just across the way from where the barracks are being erected is a building which is very interesting to the consumer of Phil. Armour's lard. Not many years ago the cotton planter knew of no other way of getting rid of his cotton seed except to scatter them upon the ground, thus to become a fertilizer. The ingenuity of some unknown hero whose name may well have passed to future generations as the inventor of artificial pork, suceeded in perfecting a scheme by which these cotton seed are utilized. No sooner had this scheme been well started than the sharp pork packer of Chicago began to turn in that direction for a means of increasing the capacity of his lard-producing establishment. Hence throughout the South there are erected to-day monster mills for the purpose of extricating oil from cotton seed. The seeds are boiled and rolled and ground until on the one hand we have cotton seed oil meal and on the other hand the oil itself. The kindly manager of the mill, standing opposite the barracks, revealed to us the process by which the seeds are utilized, and when we innocently asked him, without appreciating the situation, what the oil was used for, he answered: Olive oil or lard, whichever is in the greatest demand in the market." Here it is that we good people of the North may find the source from whence proceeds pure pork grease as may be known by Armour's trade mark. But we will proceed to our campaign against Atlanta. According to the schedule of the trains upon the Georgia Central Railroad we were to have less than an hour for our survey of the mill, but before we had fairly done with our investigations a whistle sounded down the road and we in haste rushed to the crossing, that our train might not leave us. It was a false alarm. The train was a freight, and passed by without stopping, and for four mortal hours we stood on that crossing waiting for the train to come which was to carry us into the city, but it never came. Freight after freight passed by and still no means of transportation to Atlanta. Finally the captain of the host suggested that if we were to reach the town that night we should be obliged to provide some other means of transportation than the railroad train. We had arranged before leaving the city to take another road at 11 o'clock that night, for Birmingham, therefore when the hour of nine passed we became very anxious to know how to make our connections. Hence when the suggestion came that we must either walk into the city, or sit upon the crossing all night long, we accepted the inevitable and followed the lead of our courageous captain. The sequel is easily understood. We are not handsome, we have never prided ourselves on being handsome, indeed we have never prided ourselves upon any æsthetic culture in the way of dress, and yet we must confess that when that night's campaign ended and we stood beneath the gaslight at the hotel door we were thoroughly disgusted with our appearance. Those who know the nature of mud know that it sticks. Those who know the nature of Georgia mud, know that it is red. And those who know the Georgia climate in mid-winter will understand that there is no lack of this commodity wherever you may go. We had never traveled that four and a half miles before, and "we hope we never shall again." We were unacquainted with the path, and though the middle of the road was paved with stone, yet its gutters were not, and ever and anon in the inky darkness we would wander from the beaten path and drop with somewhat of surprise, and perhaps a little amazement, into a pool of slime, ankle deep. When we arrived at the door of the hotel we paused, made a personal examination, and concluded that the office with its brilliant light was not the place for such ones as we, and so before we entered we dodged around the corner, there to find a "gammin" waiting to black the "gemmen's" boots. The mud was thick and the dirty imp was lazy, and before the process of cleansing was completed the hour for supper was ended, and so late at night, somewhat bruised and tattered as a result of our campaign, and supperless, we boarded a train and marched onward to the sea of Alabama mud.

But winter weather in Alabama is not always muddy weather. For a week we have been enjoying a season of sunshine which would do honor to the May days of our northern climate. The weather is bright and clear, just a little frost in the early morning, and warm during mid-day, while the plum trees and the peach are blossoming into life in the yard and in the gardens. It is a day like this, so warm and bright that one can sit bareheaded and in slippers on the porch, that we witness a scene strange to us, and full of instruction. The scene referred to is a market day in Shelby. A scene perhaps peculiar to this locality and yet somewhat general throughout the South.

In the village where we are stopping a single company hires all the laborers and with a thrift and energy which was only brought about in Massachusetts through a legal process, this company arranges to pay all its hands each Saturday. From nine to one are the hours of payment, and between these two periods all who wish can get the cash due them for their labor during the week just passed. Early on Saturday morning, and indeed sometimes on the evening previous, people begin to gather for a day of traffic. From east to west along the center of the village, for half a mile or more, extends the main street, toward which the business of the place is centered. Half way down this street is a space triangular in form and covering perhaps an acre of ground. This is the market place, and here it is that from east and west and north and south, from far and near, from farm and shop, are gathering the poorer population of the section, for exchange of commodity and wealth.

We have not forgotten the beauty of Atlanta's streets nor the indication of her prosperity and life, and yet this scene which lies before us is far more suggestive of the local civilization, unadulterated by foreign elements, than anything we have yet seen. Of course it must be understood that the wealthier of the people have little or no part in what is going on, for it is given over to the poorer section of the black and white.

We may easily divide the elements of this market scene into three distinct parts. Beyond the open square of ground is a row of posts and trees, promiscously set, to which are tied horses and mules and oxen of every color, size and shape. In the center is stretched without order or arrangement of any kind a promiscuous mass of conveyances of every form and make, ranging from a "quill wheeled cart" to a wagon of the latest style and newest paint.

The third element of the scene is one which, while it is in its arrangements peculiar to the surroundings, yet in its genius it is pecliar to no day or place. There is a character which, if by anything finite is entitled to the distinction of being omnipresent, can easily bear the palm. His name is legion. We find him sitting opposite us at Saratoga. He elbows us at every station of the railroad and occupies the best seats in the cars. He is a prominent figure in the best hotels of New York city. His name is on the register of every halting place for the night. He sells jewels in a norther metropolis, whisky in Birmingham, Yankee notions on every northern cross-roads, and here we find him with his merchandise spread out upon the lumber piles which are strewn along the borders of the market place. He is the best hated, most thoroughly despised, the most earnestly dreaded, according to where you find him, of any form of civilized man. He disgusts the hotel clerks. He tires out the waiters. He demands more attention than any other guest, and wishes to pay less money, and yet he is absolutely necessary to the financial success of many houses. He is sharp, often unscrupulous and grasping, and even conscienceless in business, and yet with all this he is more than any other man the money changer of the world. He is Shylock, elaborated, multiplied, and divided. He is the Jew, and here he stands beside the lumber pile and shouts to these poor darkies "come on and get your bargains," while before him lies a pile of articles, the odds and ends of everything, varnished and colored to catch the eye of ignorance with its cheap and taudy colors.

The hour of noon will find the market day at its very ebb. With the blowing of the horn appears upon the scene a row of darkies, each one carrying a pail or jug or dipper in which to store the staple of his living,—"soggum" (sorghum). "Soggum" as it is called, is a kind of cheap molasses, "home-made" from the cane. This is the leading agricultural commodity of the market day. Nearly every woman has a barrel or keg or jug which is filled with this, and one after another the dishes of the darkies are filled with it at forty cents a gallon. It is black, and thick, and sticky, you may well believe. Sometimes in the process of pouring it into the jugs the outside of the dish receives it full proportion, but the darkey never flinches. Out his long tongue runs and up and down the outside of the jug it plays until it is washed as smooth as though the kitchen maid had plied it with the dish-rag. What do the farmers bring? Not much, and yet everything. Here is a wagon whose whole burden is a market-basket with perhaps ten cents worth of turnip greens. Over the basket presides a "lady of color," two hundred pounds in weight, upon which flour always shows like dirt. Beyond is still another wagon, across the box of which is laid a board on which is sitting the madame of "ante bellum" days, while before her sits a bag of "goobers" holding half a bushel or perhaps more, on which is set a cup, and her business is to deal out a nickel's worth of these to those who wish to purchase. There are wagons with yams; others with Irish potatoes, and a few with corn-meal in boxes or barrels, ground out at some distant custom mill, and everywhere a keg or jug of "soggum." Pork is another commodity on market day. Not such as we see here in our northern states, but a kind of animal which runs wild and is built like a jack-knife, and instead of being killed as we "stick" our hogs, is "shot," as one merchant tells us, "with a rifle at forty rods." The animal seldom grows to a weight of more than 50 to 75 pounds, and the pork when newly dressed looks as though it was smoked while yet alive.

Here as everywhere there is a pathos and eloquence of human nature which even under the roughest covering touches one's sensibilities to the quick. Over the pack of the Jewish peddler bends a youth of twenty years or less. Of course and uncombed hair, cow hide boots, and blue jeans trowsers, while his open coat reveals nothing underneath except a striped shirt and a pair of cheap suspenders. Yet there is a human heart beneath his coarse exterior. He makes a bargain with the Jew and then wraps his treasure in a bit of torn and dirty paper and tucks it carefully away within the capacious pocket which adorns the inside of his roundabout. Carefully he handles it as though it were to him the richest jewel on the earth. We are sitting on a pile of lumber, gazing innocently and quiety upon the scene, when the young man stops close by our elbow with his back toward the crowd, pulls the package from his pocket, then removes the paper, and behold a pair of buttons of scarce the value of a single dime. They are for too small for the adornment of the young man's person, and as we ponder in our minds the thoughts that fill the other's mind while he holds the small treasure in his hand, "A touch of nature makes the whole world kin." Instinctively we turn from the treasure to the eyes that are gazing thereon, and then we read the secret of his mind. Full many a jem adorns the form of my lady fair. Full many a man heaps treasures rich to buy some jewel for the maiden of his heart, and yet while sitting there upon the lumber pile and gazing upon that course and uncouth form, we wondered if the wide world o'er a jewel richer with the treasure of the heart's devotion and pledged loyalty, would ever be given from man to womankind, for on the countenance was written plain as living words could tell, the joy and happiness marked out for this young gay gallant, as standing by the cabin in the woods he gives his maiden fair this purchase of the market day.

At three o'clock there is a general breaking up of the busy outlines of the camp within the market square. One by one the mule, or horse, or ox is fastened to the wagon, the teams started, and one by one the men or women, black or white, who are the proprietors of the different conveyances, coax and whip the jagged steed along its homeward route. And while they disappear in the distance and the ground before us takes its form of red and lifeless clay, we ponder on the picture and the vision yet before our eyes, and wonder if even here in this simple scene, where ignorance and poverty so closely blend, we wonder if even here there may not be the seat of greater peace and happiness than the finest we will find beneath the glare of gaslights, where silk and diamonds enter into rivalry in the adornments of the hour, and where society meets and mingles and passes its empty and meaningless compliments, and then retires to ponder on the ignorance and simplicity of those who think that such a life brings peace and joy to human hearts. F. W. BETTS.

HOW TO AVOID ACCIDENTS.—Never insult a man with large feet.

Go four miles around a mule rather than cross lots.

Take along a pair of bellows to blow into your gun with.

Aim to do most of your skating in July; after that the ice gets thin.

Always approach a buzz-saw with your toes pointing in the opposite direction,

Don't stick your nose too far into the private affairs of a muscular man.

Carry a piece of chalk to rub your nose with while passing through a cattle pasture.—Burlington Free Press.

A Face.

Between the curtains of snowy lace,
Over the way, is a baby's face;
It peeps forth, smiling in merry glee,
And waves its little pink hand at me.

My heart responds with a lonely cry,
But in the wonderful By-and-by,
Out from the window of God's "To Be,"
That other baby shall beckon to me.

That ever-haunting and longed-for face,
That perfect vision of infant grace,
Shall shine on me in a splendor of light,
Never to fade from my eager sight.

All that was taken shall be made good—
All that puzzles me, understood;
And the wee white hand that I lost one day
Shall lead me into the better way.

CALIFORNIA NOTES.

San Francisco and Oakland.

OAKLAND, CAL., MARCH 13, 1888.

San Francisco, the metropolis of the country west of the Rocky Mountains, is well worthy a visit by every New Englander. It is really the only city in the state that will compare with eastern cities. Situated upon San Francisco bay, a magnificent natural harbor, probably the best in the world, her commercial supremacy is assured. A large part of the city, particularly the residence portion, is very uneven, and very steep hills are scattered all about. The overland traveler and nearly all the railroad travel from every direction is concentrated at the two Oakland piers, and thence ferried across the bay, a distance of four miles, to a common terminus at the foot of Market street, a broad thoroughfare some three miles long. At this Market street ferry terminus are also concentrated nearly the entire cable and horse car system of the city, so that it is possible to reach most any portion of the city from one point. The cable car system of the city is first class, and where it is necessary to climb such fearful grades as it is here it seems to works to a charm. The business portion of the city is substantially built for the most part, and there some really fine buildings. The residences are nearly all wooden builings. The dusty streets are uncomfortable, and it is most always breezy in the city. The Chinese population of 30,000, a city by itself, is one of the features not particularly agreeable to an easterner, and to a Puritan the lack of regard for the Sabbath is a serious drawback to making a home of a city where base base, horse races, theatres, etc., are a special feature of the day. I would rather live where the blizzard howls and an occasional snow storm comes than to live with the "heathen Chinee." I have heard people speak of Massachusetts as having a very changeable climate, and so it has, but California, both in the Los Angeles district and and hereabouts, is also very changeable. San Francisco has a beautiful park, Golden Gate Park, situated on the outskirts of the city, and to make so nice a park from so unpromising surroundings shows remarkable energy upon the part of her people. San Francisco undoubtedly will become the New York of the Pacific coast, and Oakland her Brooklyn. Oakland is a city of beautiful homes, and the climate is much better than in San Francisco. California is a cosmopolitan country throughout, a general conglomeration of everything and everybody from everywhere. Variety is said to be the spice of life, and there is certainly lots of spice here. San Francisco, perhaps, is neither better nor worse than any other city; it is certainly inferior to eastern cities of equal population as a place of residence. The "back country" of the state is so diversified, each particular locality having its good points, that a person should spend a year within the state, and then perhaps would not be very well acquainted with it. Land values are more stable, and liable to longer continue so, in the northern and central portion of the state. This is a good country for working people and people of means, but no better than the East. It is worth all it costs to cross the continent and realize what an everlasting big country we live in, but a person without sufficient means in hand to pay fare both ways is foolish to come here, because they might want to see New England again, and the walking is bad.

A. L. H.

Sacramento and Oakland.

On board sleeper "Messin.,"
MARCH 19, 1888.

Sacramento, the capitol of the state of California, which is only exceeded in area by Texas, is well worth a visit, but a short one will cover all the points of interest. It is the center of a fine agricultural district, and its commercial importance is considerable. The shops of the Southern Pacific are located here. The capitol building occupies a commanding position in the center of the city, and the grounds are nicely laid out in terraces, and semi-tropical trees and shrubs are in abundance. The view from the dome is grand. The building is modeled after the capitol at Washington, and the height of the dome is 240 feet. The corner-stone was laid in 1860, and the building was completed in 1874; length, 282 feet; width, 128 feet. There are 60 rooms, and the cost was $2,500,000. There are 65,000 volumes in the state library. Perhaps the greatest attraction about the building is the statuary group of Christopher Columbus, Queen Isabella of Spain, and her page. Columbus has a ball in his hand, explaining to the queen that the world is round, and asking for assistance to fit out an expedition to discover the New World. This handsome work was cut from one solid block of marble, and was executed in Italy by Larkin G. Mead, of Vermont. The cost was $60,000, and it is a gift to the state of California by D. O. Mills.

It is remarkable, the number of magnificent gifts by California citizens for the public good. Another grand monument is the Crocker Art Gallery. The late Judge E. B. Crocker began the collection room fourteen years ago, and to-day the citizens of Sacramento, too, are the owners of an elegant gallery building costing over $250,000, and containing over 700 paintings of a choice character. A good many hours may be spent in this gallery to advantage. Sacramento has a climate said to be very hot in summer, and even on St. Patrick's day it was very warm. The country all about for many miles is level, and malaria is said to have a strong grip on this locality. It is a great railroad center, the commercial center for an empire within an empire.

Whether the people here are any more wicked than in Massachusetts I am not prepared to say. But Californians are perfectly open and above board in their wickedness, while no doubt the eastern idea is to keep their crooked ways in the dark. Gambling is carried on here Sundays and other days in public places, open to all who care to witness it, and various other crooked ways, said to be wicked, are just as prominent. In the east of course it is different, but I dare say full as much wickedness is going on in one place as in the other. The pioneers here, who came overland from Indiana and other states, and took six months to do it, and many died on the way, see quite a contrast in the way we do it now-a-days. A lady I have in mind left Palmer Wednesday noon and the following Monday noon reached San Francisco—five days, against near 200 days in olden times. Eastern people have but little idea of the vastness of the country we are a part of. Hundreds of miles we ride to-day across the sand plains of Nevada, covered principally with a scattered growth of sage brush. Modern science has made it possible to go across our continent in five days, to sit in elegantly constructed palaces on wheels, comfortably writing this letter, for instance, and still be making good speed. What a comparison to the emigrant train of years ago! We hope to reach Salt Lake City in twenty-four hours. Through Nevada there is no snow to be seen except occasionally on the distant mountain tops, and the weather is comfortable. A. L. H.

THOUGHTFUL.

It is always pleasant to see the kindly, tender deference paid by a young husband to his bride in the days when she is still called a bride and he a bridegroom, and it is still more pleasant and beautiful to see this deference and kindly courtesy enduring through all the years of their lives, and manifesting itself in many little things when they are both aged and gray.

The attention of the passengers on the railroad train was directed to an old couple, both of whom had passed threescre and ten years, and were living in the waiting, expectant, "borrowed time" period of life.

The old gentlemen's vision was apparantly stronger and clearer than his wife's, and he was evidently anxious that she should see as much as possible while on their journey.

"Now Harriet," he said when they found an unoccupied seat, "you set next to the window."

"No, no, pa, you set there yourself," she mildly protested.

"No, I want you to set where you can see the most," he insisted, gently pushing her forward.

"Well, thank you, pa," she said: "you shall set next to the window on your way home, anyhow."

There were other unoccupied seats in the car, but it did not occur to the old gentleman that he might sit in one of them, and then be near a window himself. Possibly he thought it would not be polite or gallant to leave his wife sitting alone.

"You see everything, Harriet?" he would ask anxiously of his wife, as she sat with her dim, old eyes turned toward the window.

"Oh, yes, pa, everything; but I'm afraid you don't see much at all."

"Oh, yes I do, yes I do," he replied cheerily; don't you bother about me—see that monstrous big house and barn up there on the hill."

"Where? I don't see."

"Oh, your looking the wrong way, over here—now we are past them. I'm sorry, I'd liked for you to have seen them. How's your headache now?"

"Oh, it's most all gone."

"That's good. Don't you want a drink of water?"

"No, I guess not; I thank you all the same."

And to the end of the journey of several hundred miles the old gentleman's thoughtfulness and attention did not lapse; it evidently had not lapsed in all the fifty or more years that he had lived with his wife.—Youth's Companion.

Many who put a ten dollar a month advertisement in a local paper, flatter themselves that they are liberal advertisers. Some of them may be surprised to learn that one column in length in the Chicago Tribune costs the advertiser $62,000. The New York World receives for the lowest price column $35,230, and for its highest $348,000. The New York Tribune for the lowest $28,654 and its highest $84,623, and these papers, it is stated, are never at a loss for advertisements to fill their columns.

FRIDAY EVENING, MARCH 30, 1888.

AND now the manufacturers of doors, sashes and blinds talk of organizing a trust, with the usual advance in prices.

JUDGE WELLS of the Springfield police court, who held an inquest on the death of the victims of the recent fire in the Union office, reports that the deaths were accidental, not being caused by the criminal act of any person.

THE president and cashier of a national bank at Raleigh, N. C., have decamped in style with the funds of the bank, estimated at from $250,000 to $300,000, taking the colored porter of the bank along to carry the $20,000 in gold.

THE late German emperor managed to save only $12,500,000. Which shows that to be an independent American citizen is better financially, sometimes, than to be the occupant of a throne, while there is no question about its being better in every other way.

THERE has been a distinguished gathering of notable women at Washington this week in the international council of women, called to celebrate the 40th anniversary of the first woman's rights convention. Women from various countries have been present, and numerous papers were read, covering woman's work in various spheres.

ROBERT R. BISHOP of Newton has been nominated by Gov. Ames to succeed the late Judge Bacon on the bench of the superior court. Mr. Bishop is a capable lawyer, and his nomiation is commended on every hand. He made his mark in the Legislature, serving in the House, and several terms in the Senate, presiding over that body for three years. In 1882 he was nominated for governor by the Republicans, but was defeated by Gen. Butler.

IT costs something to tickle the palate of a millionaire. Mr. Vanderbilt has just imported a cook from France to preside over his kitchen at a salary of $10,000 a year. But with all his skill and highfalutin knick knacks, there are hundreds of thrifty New England housewives who can prepare a meal any day which for thoroughly appetizing flavor, solid nourishment and real healthfulness will knock the spots out of any French "a la" get-up, and don't you forget it.

UNDETERRED by the palpable failure of the engineers' strike on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy road, some 1500 switchmen struck last Friday night, hoping thereby to help the engineers. There will be no particular difficulty in filling their places, and the result of their folly will be simply the adding of so many more to the list of the unemployed. The Burlington engineers are now endeavoring to persuade the men on other roads to renew the boycott against Burlington cars.

WILLIMANTIC, Conn., takes its turn now, a shortage of $150,000 having been discovered in the funds of the Willimantic Savings Institute. Irregularities have been known to exist for nearly two years, but the treasurer, H. T. Royce, was not suspended until last Friday, and there is said to be a question whether he was dishonest or only incompetent. There can be little question, however, as to the incompetency of a board which will retain an official known to be guilty of irregularties. The directors have voted to scale the deposits 15 per cent.

CHIEF JUSTICE WAITE of the United States supreme court died at his home in Washington last Friday morning after a brief illness. He presided over the court during the reading of the Bell telephone decision the preceding Monday, but was not well at the time, having had a chill the Saturday before, and he returned to his home as soon as the reading was finished. Symptoms of acute bronchits appeared the next morning, and on Wednesday circumscribed pneumonia showed itself, but his condition was not considered dangerous. At 6 o'clock Friday morning he said to the nurse, "I feel a little easier. I think I will go to sleep," and turning over he breathed his last. The news of his death was the first intimation the country had that he was not in his usual health, his sickness having been kept quiet, at his desire, so as not to cause any uneasiness to his wife, who was in California. Judge Waite was 71 years of age, and had been chief justice of the supreme court since 1874, when he was appointed by President Grant. His judicial temperament, probity and devotion to his duties won him undivided esteem, and his death is a loss to the bench he has honored. Impressive funeral services were held at the capitol Wednesday. The body was taken to Toledo, O., his old home, for burial. Politicians are busy already in selecting his probable successor, numerous names being mentioned, but it is of course the merest guess work, and President Cleveland probably will not be in haste to fill the vacancy.

The locomotive of the morning passenger train from Willimantic to Hartford, on the New England road, blew up Wednesday, near Manchester, killing the engineer and fireman.

The annual rental of pews will take place next Monday evening at 7 o'clock.

Easter Sunday at the churches in this village will not be so generally observed as has been the custom. At St. Thomas' Catholic church the finest musical programme to be heard at any of the churches will be rendered. The choir has been diligently rehearsing Rosewig's mass, which will be given with orchestral accompaniment under the direction of John Masterson. At the Second Congregational church the choir will present a carefully arranged programme at the morning service, while in the evening the children will give an Easter concert. The Second Baptist and St. Paul's Universalist churches have not any special programmes arranged.

The base ball meeting at the district court room Wednesday evening called out quite a number of interested citizens. D. F. Holden was elected chairman of the meeting and thought it advisable to form a local base ball association. After some discussion it was voted to appoint the following committee, whose duty it will be to make a canvass of public sentiment and see how many citizens there are in town who will support a team, if formed, and report at an adjourned meeting to be held at the court room next Tuesday evening at 7.30: Thomas W. Kenefick, James Healey, H. C. Sanger, M. Sullivan, F. L. Brooks, J. F. Holbrook and C. A. Brown.

The ball at the Converse House last evening, given by the business men and citizens to the ladies in return for their recent leap year ball, was a very pleasant affair. About 40 couples were present. The north store in Caryl Brothers' block was used for dancing, and was tastefully decorated. The grand march was led by Charles E. Fuller and wife. At 10.45 an intermission was held and a fine supper was served, the menu being one of Landlord Stone's best. The committee of arrangements were: E. G. Hastings, C. K. Gamwell and Charles A. LeGro. The Palmer orchestra furnished music, and Charles T. Stewart of Springfield acted as prompter.

Joseph King, a well-known and respected citizen of this town, died Wednesday morning at the old King homestead on the Warren road after a comparatively brief illness. He was first confined to his house by a sudden attack of pneumonia, which was followed by erysiplas and other complications that resulted in death. The deceased was a direct descendant of John King, the pioneer settler of Palmer, and a son of the late Isaac King. He was a member of the Knight Templars and Masonic lodges of Boston, where he held a position as cashier in the American Express Company's office. He was 51 years of age and leaves a wife and two daughters, besides a large number of friends to mourn his loss. The funeral took place at 1 30 o'clock this afternoon at his late residence, Rev. Howard W. Pope of the Second Congregational church officiating.

They are enough matters to be acted on at the adjourned town meeting next Monday to make a good day's work if they are all properly considered. There will be many calls for money, and while lavish expenditures should be avoided, there is unquestionably need for a wise outlay of considerably money. The new bridges will require quite a sum, and it may be demonstrated that another $1000 ought to be added to the appropriation for the high school building. That sum certainly ought not to stand in the way of the town's having a suitable building for high school purposes, after waiting so many years for it. A sufficient appropriation ought to be made to put the town's history into manuscript. Mr. Gates, of the committee, has done a suprising amount of preparatory work in a thorough manner, in preparing maps and genealogies, and the work should be pushed to completion now. A comfortable sum ought also to be appropriated for sewerage, to be expended at the discretion of the selectmen.

Miss Carrie M. Burdick entertained about 30 of her friends at her home last Friday evening, the occasion being her eighteenth birthday. The guests were happy the whole evening through with games, music, dancing and a supper. Miss Burdick received many handsome presents.

It is to be hoped, now that it is a certainty that Monson will be represented by a base ball team in the Western Massachusetts League this season, that she will hold her own with the surrounding teams. There is plenty of good material, and all it needs is practice to bring out good players.

It is time that those whose duty it is should look after the crowd of roughs who collect at different places on Main street, especially at Central Block. Ladies who are obliged to go out on the street in the evening cannot pass without being insulted. This is not allowed in other places, and Monson should be no exception.

The Academy hall was well filled last Friday evening to hear Dr. George E. Fuller's lecture on "Personal Reminiscences of the late Civil War," which was very interesting. The next lecture of the course will be given by Rev. J. F. Lee of St. Patrick's church, April 6th, when he will relate an account of his travels in Ireland during his vacation last summer, which will no doubt be very interesting.

Memorial Hall was crowded Sunday evening by an audience composed of the attendants of the different churches, who had come together to hold a union temperance meeting. Rev. James Tufts presided, and a large choir under the direction of Spencer Lane furnished the singing. Revs. J. H. Emerson, Ira A. Priest and F. S. Hatch addressed the meeting. The second will be held at the same place Sunday evening at 7.45 o'clock.

The home of Charles McKendrick, superintendent of the Branch mill, was the scene of a genuine surprise Wednesday evening. While Mr. McKendrick and wife were listening to the drum corps at the front door, employes of the mill to the number of 50 quietly filed in and took possession of the house. Dancing, games and refreshments helped to pass a delightful evening, and before the guests took leave, Mr. Handy, in a few well-chosen words, presented Mr. and Mrs. McKendrick with two handsome easy chairs.

The Republicans held their caucus at Memorial Hall last evening. C. M. Gage called the meeting to order. A. A. Gage was chosen chairman and W. M. Tucker clerk. The following town officers were nominated: Town clerk, C. M. Gage; selectmen and overseers of the poor, Daniel G. Potter, George H. Newton, George H. Fosket; treasurer, Edward D. Cushman; assessors, Omar Pease, George M. King, Horace Squier; school committee, for 3 years, William Sutcliffe, Jacob L. Bradway, Willard Leach, Lee Blanchard; constables, Charles L. Stiles, William H. Underwood, Joel H. Thompson, Herbert T. Whitney, Edward P. Newton, Eugene B. Farrell, W. G. Meacham; fence viewers, Charles M. Webber, Lee Blanchard, A. H. White; moderator, A. A. Gage; delegates to the state convention to be held in Tremont Temple, Boston, April 25th, S. F. Cushman, R. M. Reynolds, William N. Flynt; district convention, A. A. Gage, W. M. Tucker, Rufus Fay.

Personal.

Mrs. George Gates of Leverett is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Burdick, this week.

Fred Tucker of Phillips Academy, Andover, is at home for a two-weeks' vacation.

Stephen B. Knowlton of Amherst College is spending his two-weeks' vacation in town.

Miss Minnie Hunt of Hampden is the guest of Mrs. Eugene Squier.

Mrs. Arthur Ballard and son are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Rogers.

Miss Lena Messenger of Washington is visiting her sister, Mrs. D. B. Needham.

M. R. Lull, of Marsh's grocery store, Springfield, was in town Sunday visiting old friends and acquaintances.

Fred Clifford spent Sunday with friends here.

Town Matters.

Town meeting next Monday.

The town warrant is a long one, containing 34 articles.

Politicians say:

That George H. Newton can again be chairman of selectmen if he will only say the word.

That the liquor men will put a good deal of hard cash into the campaign.

That the tickets will be terribly mixed this year.

YES, OR NO?

One of the most prominent men in Massachusetts gives the following reasons why licenses should not be granted: Drunkenness is the cause of 85 per cent of all the crimes committed in Massachusetts, and the cause directly or indirectly of 75 per cent of all the poverty that fills the almshouses. To grant a license is to say it is right to sell it, and consequently to give it the protection of society through law. Every respectable man who votes for license votes to put next door to somebody else a blot, a nuisance, and a snare he would not willingly have next door to his home.

Easter Services.

At St. Patrick's church Farmer's mass will be celebrated in the morning, and vespers will be held at 6.30 in the evening, with a special programme of music.

At the Congregational church in the morning the pastor, Rev. F. S. Hatch, will preach a sermon appropriate to the day, and a special programme of music has been prepared for the evening. The Easter concert by the Sunday-school will be held at 6.30 o'clock.

At the Universalist church there will be preaching in the morning by the pastor, Rev. Ira A. Priest, from John 16:7: "It is expedient for you that I go away nevertheless I tell you the truth." The Easter concert that was to take place in the evening will be postponed, on account of the temperance mass meeting, until a week from next Sunday.

Easter Sunday will be observed at the different churches by special service. The churches will be decorated for the occasion, and at the Methodist church the pastor, Rev. J. H. Emerson, will preach in the morning from Col. 3:1: "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things that are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God." In the evening there will be an Easter concert at 6 o'clock by the Sunday-school. There will be special music at both services.

Interesting to Voters.

The town report for the past year will be ready for distribution to-morrow noon, and shows the following figures: Cash in hands of treasurer, $960.42, against $1255.68 a year ago. The balance against the town, above assets, is $13,441.21, the debt having been reduced $550.25. There is due the town $654.46, and the bills due from the town amount to $578.92, while the real estate and personal property of the town is valued at $60,570. The selectmen have paid out $27,830.26, as follows: Old bills, $937.27; library and reading room, $500; Hampden avenue sewer, $526.37; highways, $3431.93; schools, $8663.13; miscellaneous, $3,202.44; poor away, $1506 93; poor at farm, $2170.31; new barn at town farm, $2411.60; liquor prosecutions, $440.46; fire department, $1896.49; discount taxes, $1127.28; new road, Margaret street, $297; iron bridge at Cushman's mill, $219. The property at the town farm inventories $1453.90 more than last year. There were 19 paupers supported a period of 851 weeks at a cost of $596, or 70 cents per week for each person. The following amount of produce was raised on the town farm the past year: 35 tons hay, 2 tons meadow hay, 8 tons oat hay, 18 tons corn fodder, 200 bushels potatoes, 75 bushels carrots, 600 bushels corn in ears, 10 bushels onions, 15 bushels beets, 40 bushels rutabagas, 100 bushels turnips, 45 bushels cattle beets, 300 heads of cabbage, 10 bushels parsnips, 200 pounds squash, 2475 lbs. pork, 575 lbs. beef, 150 chickens, 2100 lbs. butter, 830 dozen eggs, 20 cords of wood, not inventoried, delivered to the lock-up and elsewhere, also about 17,000 feet of plank and timber, not inventoried, valued at $340. The school committee reports that there were 642 pupils enrolled, with an average attendance of 1487, and the cost for each pupil, aside from academy and free text books, $11.13; including text books, $12.

LEGISLATIVE DOINGS.

From our Special Correspondent.

BOSTON, March 28, 1888.

The fate of the resolves for biennials was settled on Thursday afternoon without any debate, except what occurred on Wednesday. Owing to long preliminary business the matter was not reached till nearly four o'clock, and the Democrats had arranged for their dinner at Parker's at half past four. So they agreed to omit the debate altogether and to come to a vote at once. On the resolve for biennial elections of state officers, there were 126 yeas to 72 nays and 13 pairs, or less than the necessary two-thirds. On biennial elections of members of the Legislature there were 106 yeas to 78 nays and 16 pairs, or a greater lack of the two thirds. This ends the matter for this year. Mr. Grosvenor of Ludlow was paired in favor of both resolves. Mr. Hitchcock of Ware voted for biennials for state officers, but was not recorded on the election of members.

Mr. Grosvenor of Ludlow made an attempt Thursday afternoon to stop the trip of the street railways committee to Kansas City to inspect the cable roads there, and offered an order to that effect. But it was at once laid over on request of Mr. Dresser of Medford, House chairman of the committee which was about to start. But later Mr. Grosvenor offered a resolution to the same effect. It was debated warmly for a long time, but was finally defeated by 89 to 117.

The taxation committee has reported a bill to extend from September 15 to October 1 the time within which a person may apply for assessment of a tax in order to be registered as a voter.

Friday afternoon the committee on public charitable institutions reported, on Gov. Ames's message relating to the immigration of English convicts and paupers, a memorial to Congress setting forth in detail the magnitude of the evil and asking the national government to take such steps as will prevent the coming in of such persons. The memorial is really quite sobering, for it shows how there is an organized effort in England among so-called "philanthropic" people to send the paupers and convicts over here, and even to pay their passage so far inland that they will not be likely to be sent back. The committee find that since the English people adopted the policy, in 1880, of sending their criminals and paupers over here, the proportion of the foreign born to the native born in our jails, almshouses and insane asylums, has noticeably increased. The memorial was referred to the committee on federal relations.

The military committee has reported a resolve appropriating $1200 for flank stones and for mounting cannon as monuments on the field of Gettysburg.

Inexpedient has been reported on prohibiting any court officer from being a member of the standing committee of any political party; also inexpedient to increase the tax on savings bank deposits, and on teaching civil polity in the schools.

On Monday the liquor law committee reported adversely on the following matters pending before them: On repealing the law to forbid the pigeonholing of appealed liquor cases; on allowing druggists and apothecaries to sell liquor on prescription only; on voting on the issue of liquor licenses at special meetings to be held in March or April; on permitting an abuttor's objection to be valid against the issue of a fourth class license; and on forfeiting to the state the implements and furniture of places where liquor is seized.

The House had quite a debate on the bill to close all liquor saloons on Thanksgiving and Christmas. Mr. Milliken of Maden put in an amendment to make it cover all legal holidays. On Labor Day, he said, there were in Boston 149 arrests for drunkenness, while on the corresponding day of the year before, there were only 26. It was objected to the amendment that Washington's birthday and the Fourth of July were especially days of jubilation, and it would not be well to restrict liquor selling on those days. At the end of the discussion the House added Fast Day to the list, because Fast Day, Thanksgiving and Christmas are in the nature of religious days, but refused to include the other legal holidays. The vote for Fast Day was 72 to 27, and on the other days, 39 to 66.

The House spent an hour Monday on the Senate bill to raise the salary of Secretary of State Pierce from $3000 to $4000, by 60 to 91 made it $3500, and so made a conflict of the two branches possible.

Some proposed legislation was checked by unanimous committee reports which were made on Tuesday. Inexpedient was reported on limiting to 56½ hours a week the labor of women and minors in manufacturing establishments; inexpedient on regulating the connection of national banks with savings banks; inexpedient to apply to children up to the age of 16 the law for those under 14, employed in factories, who cannot read and write English. Leave to withdraw was reported on the petitions of the mayors of Boston, Fitchburg and other cities that all city and town bonds may be exempt from taxation, and on the petition of E. Loring, controller of county accounts, for an increase of salary.

But the public service committee reported bills to raise the Worcester sheriff's salary to $2500, the Suffolk sheriff's to $3000, and two others relating to minor court officials.

The printing committee reported in favor of printing an annual edition of 15,000 copies of the report of the secretary of the state board of agriculture, and 25,000 copies of the report of the agricultural experiment station at Amherst.

A bill from the banking committee provides a general law for the incorporation of loan and trust companies, and another requires savings banks to keep a reserve fund of 4 per cent on their deposits, until their guaranty fund reaches 5 per cent on the deposits, with which to pay the losses on investments.

The imperfect weaving bill was debated at length in the House Tuesday, but without a vote. Its chief supporters were Messrs. McCovey of Blackstone and Mellen of Worcester, and its chief opponent was Mr. Blume of Boston. The vote on it to-day was 85 yeas to 80 nays and 17 pairs.

On Wednesday the woman suffrage license bill came up in the Senate, having passed the House. It was debated by Senator Howland of Bristol, in favor, Senator Gleason of Worcester, against; Gleason of Plymouth, in favor; Kingsley of Middlesex, in favor, and Crosby of Berkshire, against. Then it was rejected, 13 to 14, as follows:

Yeas: Clark of Hampshire, Clark of Essex, Cook, Gleason of Plymouth, Howland, Keith of Plymouth, Marble, Palmer, Pike, Sleeper, Stevens, Towne, Wheelock—13.

Nays: Collins, Crosby, Gleason of Worcester, Glines, Hartwell, Hathorne, McAlpine, Perkins, Roads, Shea, Slattery, Spellman, Sprague, Sullivan—14.

Pairs: Messrs. Messinger, Keith of the Cape, Walker, Ladd, Kingsley, Tucker, yes, with Messrs. Fletcher, Kimball, Horne, Southworth, Dwyer, Howard, no.

Inexpedient has been reported on legislating to prevent trusts, combinations and pools to control trade.

The public health committee reported a resolve for the state board of health to investigate the use of opium, the extent of the evil and the probable remedy, and to report to the next Legislature.

An adverse report has been made on the petition of the tour workers that their hours of labor may be shortened to 65½ a week. Senator Howard and Representatives Mellen and Keane dissent.

The insurance committee has reported a bill to incorporate the New England Live Stock Insurance Company. It proposes to insure horses, and is put under the assessment insurance laws.

Considerable interest is being shown in town in the Hampden County Musical Association performance of "The Creation" at the City Hall, Springfield, next Tuesday. A coach will be attached to a freight train leaving the city after the concert, reaching Palmer in good season. Geo. W. Ely and C. A. Brown have some choice seats which can be had if applied for early. "The Creation" is a delightful work, being replete with solos, duets trio's, etc., which being in the light and florid vein of the Hayden school, are readily appreciated and quickly become favorites with all audiences. Throughout the whole work also, the orchestrations is of great richness and variety, and with a small number of musicians much of the coloring and effect would be last; hence, we are glad to note that the association has secured the services of a large orchestra and some of the very best soloists, Miss Lizzie Webb Cary, soprano, William H. Fessenden, tenor, and Myron W. Whitney, bass, all selected for their peculiar fitness for the solo parts in "The Creation." It would be difficult, we think, to [illegible] a better trio. The orchestra engaged, thirty pieces of the "Germania" of Boston, has been brought to Springfield to render the oratorio and [illegible] to render the music with best effect. No one expects anything but the work from this organization, and they never disappoint. Of the work of the chorus, we need hardly [illegible] said. They can do all their work well as they always do. We trust Palmer will be well represented at the concert, and that next year we can have a choral society of our own, [illegible] county organization [illegible] great events like the coming concert, as does the Holyoke Choral Union.

IW.

For the cure of all female disorders and irregularities, Ayer's Sarsaparilla has no equal.

To promote digestion, and for use as a stomachic, after the mid-day meal, Ayer's Cathartic Pills have no equal.

TO THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS OF THE COUNTY OF HAMPDEN:—Respectfully represent the undersigned, Selectmen of Palmer in said county, and the Boston and Albany Railroad Company, that the highway in said Palmer known as Commercial street is crossed in said Palmer by the railroad of said Company, the railroad of the New London Northern Railroad Company, and the railroad of the Ware River Railroad Company, the said highway passing under said railroads; that the passage-way is long, narrow and dangerous, and the undersigned are of the opinion that it is necessary for the security and convenience of the public, as well as to enable the said Boston and Albany Railroad Company to construct at and near said crossing a suitable and convenient approach to its passenger station in said Palmer, that said passage-way should be shortened, widened, and that other alterations should be made in the crossing, the approaches thereto, the location of the said railroads, highway, and in the bridge at said crossing.

We therefore pray that after due notice you will hear all parties interested, and if you decide that such alteration is necessary, certify your decision in the matter to the parties and also to the board of railroad commissioners, and take such other action in the premises as to you shall seem meet and proper.

Dated, January tenth, 1888.

THE - GREAT - BAZAR - STORE

—OF—

S. H. HELLYAR & CO.

They have without question some of the most remarkable bargains ever shown, especially in their CLOTHING DEPARTMENT. No FIRE INSURANCE SALE, or any kind of a Sale can meet their extremely low figures, as any judge of clothing who has recently seen our stock will verify.

WE ARE BOUND TO SELL OUR GOODS, MAKE OR BREAK.

It is break at the present time, and is the greatest opportunity which has ever been offered the public for purchasing goods at much less than the cost of the raw material.

We have the finest stock of

WASH DRESS GOODS

ever shown in town, having received the heaviest stock of these goods ever purchased by us.

Have you seen our

5c., 10c. & 25c. COUNTERS?

We have over one thousand different articles at the above prices, and are positive we can meet every want in this line.

OUR NEW SPRING WOOL DRESS GOODS

will be on sale Saturday morning, March 17, and if you want to see a beautiful line of these goods, we shall be pleased to show you, and you will find our price on same as low, if not lower, than you will obtain elsewhere.

OUR SPRING NECKWEAR

has arrived, and we consider it, as you undoubtedly will, a remarkably handsome line.

We are still making to order many SPRING SUITS, having the best $20.00 assortment of woolens ever shown by us.

REMEMBER-- A Harper's Bazar Pattern given away with every dollar's worth of goods purchased.

Respectfully Yours, S. H. HELLYAR & CO.

THE INCURABLE CURED!

HOPKINSVILLE, KY., Feb. 24, 1887.

Gentlemen—Seven years ago a sore developed on my nose from a finger nail scratch. I tried a few simple remedies, but the sore would not yield. I grew worse every year for seven years. Many thought I had a cancer. Over a year ago I began to take S. S. S., and two dozen bottles entirely cured me. When I began with Swift's Specific I was in very poor health, and could hardly drag about. After I had finished the course of S. S. S. I was strong and buoyant, and had a good appetite. I regard it as a most valuable medicine for ladies in weak, delicate health. It is a household medicine with me. Yours respectfully,

MRS. R. W. WILSON.

SPARTANSBURG, S. C., April 2, 1887.

Gentlemen—For twenty years I have had a sore on my left cheek. I had gradually been growing worse. The many physicians whom I had consulted were unable to do me any good. Last fall a year ago I began using S. S. S. At first it inflamed the sore, and it became more virulent than ever; so much so, indeed, that my family insisted that I should leave off the medicine. I persisted in using the S. S. S. At the end of two months the sore was entirely healed. Thinking that the evil was out of my constitution, I left off the medicine; but in November, ten months after a very slight breaking out appeared. I at once began again on S. S. S. It has done me more good than all the doctors and other medicines I ever took. Yours truly,

A. R. SHANDS.

WINSTON, N. C., April 12. 1887.

Gentlemen—Two or three years ago a cancer came on my face. It soon grew to be quite large. It wore on me, and my general health was very poor. Last September I began a course of S. S. S., which I have continued to the present time with there happiest result. The cancer entirely disappeared, there being no evidence or symptom of a cancerous character left. My general health is good now, and my appetite better than it has been for years. I am 82 years old, and to-day I am working in the field planting corn. Yours truly, JONAS LIMEBACH.

Gentlemen—I had a sore on my upper lip for eight years. Seven different doctors attempted in vain to heal it. One gave me a small vial for five dollars, which was a "certain cure." It is needless to say it did me no good. About two years ago I became quite uneasy, as people thought I had a cancer, and I took a course of eighteen bottles of S. S. S. The result has been a complete cure. The ulcer or cancer healed beautifully, leaving scarcely a perceptible scar. From that day I have been in excellent health, the Specific having purified my blood thoroughly, increased my appetite and perfected my digestion. In a word, I feel like a new person, and, best of all, the 8-year ulcer is gone entirely. Yours truly, MRS. W. P. CANNON.

Well, Not Hardly.

Smiles upon her face so sweet:
Dressed always so rich and neat;
Just to see her is a treat,
In the parlor, on the street—
In the kitchen? Well, not hardly!

Banged and golden is her hair;
She is very, very fair,
With a manner debonnair;
Light and happy, free from care—
Help her mother? Well, not hardly.

Reads the novels, every one;
Flirts a little, just for fun;
To the seaside takes a run,
When the winter's season's done—
Makes her own clothes? Well, not hardly!

Comme il faut in bagatelle

Marries some good man some day;
Nine times in ten that is the way
The righteous get their earthly pay
(We mean the man); and will he say,
"I thank the Lord?" Well, not hardly.

Which the most hardened feelings would hurt,

Who is doing her best to flirt.

"You advertised for an expert accountant, sir?" "Yes, I did. Have you had much experience?" "About 30 years, sir; in long and tangled interest, and partnership accounts, confused government books, chancery and bankrupt accounts, companies' accounts, and—" "Well, here; what I want you to do is this—here is my wife's shopping list for one day. There are about twenty-five items. See what she bought, how much she paid for it, and what the total amount is." But the accountant hesitated, shook his head, and said that his only brother died in an insane asylum for undertaking just such a matter, and he believed he wouldn't touch it.—Burlington Hawkeye.

I Was Astonished.

Children often suffer greatly from impure blood until a good medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla, is taken to expel impurities and give vitality.

READ THIS:

"I think it my duty to tell how much good Hood's Sarsaparilla did my little girl. She was from birth puny, pale and sickly, and did not gain strength as she grew older. Even when three years of age she could not stand alone. She ate hardly anything, and seemed to be weak constitutionally; but was doubtless kept back by impure blood, which caused her much discomfort and suffering. She had scald head terribly, her head being covered with one sore. I decided to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and I was astonished at the effect the first bottle had on her. Her appetite began to pick up, and soon we could hardly give her enough to eat. She also gained strength, could stand alone, and the sore on her head began to grow less. We soon healed that up with Hood's Olive ointment, and when she had taken three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla she could run about the house as smart as any child. She has been bright and hearty ever since. I write this out of pure gratitude to Hood's Sarsaparilla." E. T. Alexander, 28 Cleaves street, Portland, Me.

The King's Fool.

The king one day in generous mood,
Presented to his fool
A cap of wondrous beauty rare,
But first laid down this rule:

"When you can find a greater fool
Than thou, O Clown," he said,
"Present him with my compliments
And place this on his head."

The king was taken ill one day,
And feeling death was near
He sent a summons to his fool,
Who quickly did appear.

"I'm going on a journey soon
From which I'll ne'er return,"
The king said, speaking low and sad,
"The way I've yet to learn."

"Then you've no preparation made
In all these years, O king?"
The fool said, wond'ring, to his lord,
"Now give me leave to bring

"An article which you once gave
To me, in gracious mood
With words to find a greater fool,
Now pray, don't call me rude

"If I obey your majesty,
And carry out your rule,
To place this cap with compliments
Upon a greater fool.

"I've sought indeed, but never found
Till now a greater clown,
This cap becomes your excellence,
Far more than does your crown."

A TRIP TO THE "CRESENT CITY."

We have often wished, since traveling in these Southern states, that every northern man had come down here with the armies that invaded the Confederate states, and that every southern man had met them with a gun. We would not be understood as wishing literally that every adult in the United States could have been engaged in the civil war, but what we do mean is that had this been the fact, or could all the adults of our country have viewed the scene from the side of the Union or the Confederate soldier, there would be a very different feeling to-day between the sections than there is. None of our experiences here have been more pleasant than where we have met, side by side, men who fought under the Blue and Gray, and listened while they told their stories and reminiscences of those dark and bloody days. To see two soldiers who fought each other on the battle fields of Gettysburg or the Wilderness, sit down with boyish eagerness and fight each other in the relating of their experiences of this conflict, is a revelation of reconciliation which can never be understood under other circumstances. While sitting at a railroad junction, not long since, waiting for connections between two trains, we fell in with one, Colonel Lee, a prominent lawyer of Birmingham, Alabama. It was Monday morning and he was just returning from a trip southward toward Montgomery. He inquired whence we came, as to our occupation, and soon a pleasant chat resulted. Of course the topic of conversation as usual turned to questions of our political and social order, and soon from this we turned to speaking of the work of Christian churches in the South, and then he told us of an incident that happened only the day before, which, better than anything we can say, will reveal the spirit of the true man of the South. When Wilson and his band of raiders followed Forrest through the state of Alabama, the last stand that Forrest made was at Stanton, some fifty miles northwest of Montgomery. Here was a little building known as "Elizabeth church," which was the scene of, and bears even now many marks of, that final conflict.

Among the men who followed Wilson was a captain who upon this spot was wounded quite severely. This resulted in the loss of a limb, which necessitated his confinement for a long period of time. When fully recovered this man resolved to settle where the battle was fought, "and thus," the Colonel said, "yesterday I attended services in that same church and witnessed a scene that might well have been photograghed. There I sat, an ex-colonel of a rebel regiment, and there beside me sat another who had fought with Forrest in the yard outside the church, while before us, teaching from the word of God, stood that one-legged captain who had lost his limb fighting those among whom sat the man who was his scholar in the Bible class, while above and all around bullet marks were silent memorials of the bitter conflict."

And thus we find everywhere, it is only those who remained at home and did their fighting with their mouths who fail to respect the virtue and courage of their opponents during those bitter years. We have yet to find a single soldier in these Southern states, be he Federal or Confederate, who fails to praise in the strongest terms the men who tried to kill him on the battle field.

In the city of Montgomery, in that first Capitol of the Confederacy, and where the decisive move for the secession of the southern states was made and where Jefferson Davis was first sworn in as president of the Confederacy, we visited the cemetery where the bodies of many of the southern boys were buried. An old policeman walked with us throughout the grounds and pointed out each monument. "There," he said, pointing to a column standing in a little lot beside the walk, "There is the monument of one who little understood the nature of the conflict he was forcing on the people." The monument was raised above the grave of William Yancey, who thought to drink all the blood that would be spilled before the war was ended. The old policeman was a member of the 6th Ala. regiment, Company E. which mustered in 170 strong and which surrendered to Grant at Appomatox nine privates and two corporals as the remnant of its force. Near half a day we wandered with the old man neath the trees and through the shrubs that marked the walks among the silent tombs, and certainly if hero ever dwelt beneath the rough exterior of an old and weather-beaten man, that old Irishman who fought four years and then retired to make his watch among the silent dead, was one well worthy the name.

Montgomery is a typical city of that period which has passed. Staid and conservative is this spot, possessing the elements of social life, which remain here more than in any other place, to remind us of what has been in the South. And yet even here, in the very home of conservatism, we have met one of the most progressive men it has been our lot to visit with in all our journeying. He is mayor of the city, and if brains and pluck and energy will build success for those who serve us, then not far off are days of prosperity and advancement for the city of Montgomery. Mayor Reese is a Southerner of Southerners, and a type of the courtly gentleman not often met with here, or for that matter, anywhere. A peculiar situation greets every man who comes to be known as of northern birth and breeding. Almost instinctively it is assumed in conversation that he is radical, at least his leanings are toward that Republicanism so dominant in many of our northern cities, and so it was with Mayor Reese. From first to last words from us, there was the undertone of feeling that we were, in our thought, of radical Republicanism, and yet for gentlemanly courtesy and willingness to talk with freedom and frankness of the situation, political and social, we have yet to find a man, Republican or Democrat, who will bear the palm of fairness from this type of the southern gentleman. Standing upon the spot where Davis took the oath as President, with the great columns rising stately and far above us, and higher still the dome of the capitol, looking far away adown the avenue and over the city to where the river Alabama winds along in horse-shoe form beside the city and then onward to the sea, there came to us the recollection of those scenes, and then the memory of the words of hope and prophesy this later representative of these people had been speaking in our ears, and we were sure that brighter days and more prosperous generations would build out of the very ashes which the train of war has left, success and prosperity beyond our power to think or tell.

The farther objective point of these journeyings of ours was the Cresent City which lies along the west bank of the Mississippi river, 110 miles from its mouth.

The first surprising thing as the eye rests upon New Orleans is the fact that the Missisippi runs exactly north along the levees where the vessels are laden for the river or the sea. And this is whence the "Crescent City" is derived. Miles to the westward, the river sweeping to the south, gradually curves to the eastward and then still more to the northward and then it forms a half moon encircling the southern side of the city and the territory to the west, and then sweeping east and south again to enter into the Gulf, forming an exact outline of a crescent moon. Standing at the foot of Canal street on the river bank and looking west, north and south, no busier sight can be found in all this country than is there. Vessels from Liverpool and steamers from New York and St. Louis side by side, while hundreds of negroes load and unload their cargoes, while to the westward, three miles on a level stretch, runs Canal street, broad and level with its succession of dummies, street-cars and draymen. The city has a peculiar life, social and business, which differs from that of any other city of America. It has its favorable and unfavorable elements, and one of the latter seemed to strike us most prominent from the moment of our entrance.

From that we entered until the moment of leaving, in the window of every cigar shop and every restaurant and in the hands of peddlers on the streets were packages of tickets representing chances in a lottery. It happened that the drawing of this lottery took place the week following our visit, and the topic of conversation on the street, and in the cars, at the hotel, and wherever a company was gathered, was "who will draw the chief prize of three hundred thousand dollars next Tuesday?" There is a gambling element in humanity. There is a continual tendency among human kind to take chances wherever there is a possibility of getting very cheap something we hold dear. No doubt many generations must pass and much of Christian teaching be put forth before men will come to understand that he who gains by chance is nothing more nor less than as a gambler wins his money at the table with cards.

This much we can understand, but the thing that puzzles is how at this day and generation a commonwealth made up of business men, intelligent Christian citizens, can became partners in a scheme which in its conceptions and consummation is built on the gambler's fortune, we fail to understand or appreciate. Here is a lottery organized in the beginning for a benificent and wise purpose in the way of charity, yet in its management and arrangements it is built upon the gambler's chances. Here is a city rich in resources, able in its citizens, and intelligent in its political management, leveling itself to the dust before an institution which is nothing but degradation for all who enter in. The name of Albert Sidney Johnston and General Lee are names that will be held in honor and esteem by coming generations. They were men of virtue and honesty. They were loyal to their convictions, no matter how much they were mistaken, yet they were above reproach and above the stigma of dishonesty in their every public act. Without comment we simply contrast such names as these with those of Early and Beauregard, who will stand as sponsors for men who reap their golden coins by lottery chances under the charter from the state of Louisiana. The power of example is very great under every circumstance, and it is greater still when chivalry adds its sympathy to those who have been defeated. And it is only with sorrow and pity that we can see such men as these two generals, by the influence of a cause which was honored by the sacrifice and devotion of heroes and martyrs, help by their influence and example the demoralization of those who look upon them as representatives of a cause which while lost, is yet sacred.

The chief point of interest in New Orleans to the stranger is its cemeteries. The monument of Jackson in Jackson Square, Clay on Canal street, and Lee on St. Charles street, are all fine specimens of the artist's skill. The old French Cathedral is a memorial of the past, and the French Market of to-day is suggestive to the curious eye of much that is peculiar and unknown in other cities, but it is in the cemeteries that we find that which interests us, not alone for its variety, but for its beauty of conception and nobility of realization. From our boyhood the custom which has held Christian lands regarding burial has been offensive to our thoughts. In connection with the thought of death, to us, at least, there is always loathsome disgusting in that other thought of placing bodies six feet under ground, there to corrupt and moulder and decay, mixing thus with dirt and casket remains. "Necessity is the mother of invention." It is impossible to dig graves in the vicinity of New Orleans and bury bodies in them, for they will fill with water before the bodies could be put in. This required a new method of disposing of the bodies. A method, to us a decided advancement upon the custom in vogue in modern states, is developed here. The graves are built above ground. That is they are built in a little house with brick or stone or marble for material, according to the wealth of the builder. It is wonderful what a variety of architecture can be made to adorn the burial place of the dead. The general form of these tombs is of an oblong building with arching roof. The structures will averag some eight or nine feet square upon the base, and through the center runs an open way reaching from floor to roof. Along the sides of this open hallway are receptacles, one above the other, for the holding of the coffins. This is the general form of architecture, but it varies. They are from the small unadorned square structure, to the elaborated marble decorations which wealth alone can have. Here upon a rise of ground stands a base of marble with a pillar upon each corner and an arched ceiling high above and closing in the sky, while underneath the dome is set a stature delicately carved, and yonder stands in miniature an English Cathedral, perfect even to the turreted towers which rest above the ancient gable roof. In the distance stands a marble palace with halls running in every direction, and along these halls at every angle are the places for the coffins. The structure is surmounted by glistening steeple, built to represent a church spire pointing up to Heaven. Even the monuments which are the memorials of the valor of the Confederate soldiers partake of this same method of construction. Yonder is a mound built high and broad, not by nature but by artificial methods. On it stands a column surmounted by the monument of General Lee, while from the farther side of the mound downward to the foot of the base upon which the monument rests is a marble stairway leading to the hallway underneath the monument, and here again we find receptacles for coffins are on every hand. Over against the gate-way, high above another mound, upon his war horse, sits the figure of Albert Sidney Johnston, while again beneath his form and horse is found the place where loving hands have carved his epitaph, and devoted followers lie silently entombed in marble beneath his feet. The roses are blooming on the bushes, the live-oak turns to life with increasing vigor, the orange trees are loaded with their fruit, and thus upon this winter's day we look upon this city of the dead and wonder if it were not better that we too, who bury those we love beneath the ground, should build for them a home of marble, or even brick, formed like the little church upon the hillside, with its steeple pointing to arching blue, and we even wonder if this might not come much nearer to the ideal of the receptacle for the dead which we find in that story of the tomb whose owner was Joseph of Arimathea, and which "was situated in the garden."

WESTERN NOTES.

Salt Lake City to Denver.

DENVER, COLO., MARCH 23, 1888.

Salt Lake City, the Morman stronghold, has a beautiful location, and its extra wide streets give it a fine appearance. Zion's Coöperative Mercantile Institution is the most noticeable building in the business section, and it is one of the principal business institutions of the Mormons. In it may be found nearly everything used by a family. The Tabernacle, which has a seating capacity of 10,000, has wonderful acoustic properties, and the whole building can virtually be turned inside out, and there are doors swinging outward all around the building, an oval shaped structure. The unfinished Temple building presents an imposing appearance. The Bee Hive and the residence of the president of the so-called latter-day saints are all points of interest.

The Mormons are finding it rather warm since Uncle Sam has been after them with a sharp stick. The prison pens are now filled of them, convicted of the various stages of unlawful cohabitation, and additional quarters are to be provided. There is said to be eighty per cent Mormon population in the city, but an emigration to asylum has already begun and it is probable that in a few years Salt Lake will be considerably more of a Gentile town than now. The climate of Salt Lake is said to be fine, and its clear, crisp mountain air is very invigorating. From Salt Lake city to Denver is the finest trip in point of scenery anywhere in the world. Salt Lake City has an elevation above sea level of 4241 feet. The Black Canon, where the rocky sides rise heavenward 2300 feet above the tracks, is simply grand, and we pass through the great Gunnison valley, 7000 feet above sea level, where it is said the thermometer registers 30° below zero three months in the year, and got down to 50° below at one time the past winter. After leaving Gunnison we soon begin the ascent to Marshall Pass, the triumph of engineering skill of this century, and worth all it costs an eastern man to see the same. I have been nearer the sky in the past 40 hours than ever before. Marshall Pass is 10,800 feet above sea level, and to climb this great height with a railroad train, making good running time, is a wonderful feat. The heaviest part of the grades each side of the summit are about eighteen miles in length and average 217 feet to the mile. For illustration, imagine the railroad between Palmer and Worcester a part of this Rocky Mountain system and let Brookfield stand for Marshall Pass, 10,850 above sea level; let Sargent represent Worcester's location and Poucha Jct, 7480 feet above the sea, represent the location of Palmer. By a series of grades up one gulch, around another and up another the train winds up higher and higher until the summit is reached, and the descent begins. It is a wonderful piece of railroad building, and if your humble servant doesn't come out to Colorado one of these days and "tramp" the grades it will be because I can't get here. Right here let me say that the dining rooms along the line of the Denver and Rio Grande road are the best in the country; there are none better anywhere. The ground canon of the Arkansas, where the solid walls of rock rise upward both sides of the track 2750 feet, is—well, words or pen cannot express the grandeur of this wonderful Colorado country. Come out to Colorado and see for yourselves, and I am certain any one would consider themselves well paid. Pueblo is a busy railroad centre. Colorado Springs, where Manitoba tourists take a branch line, has a gem of a railroad station. Denver is a handsome city, and when I know more about it it will endeavor to describe its beauties. Real estate is on the "boom" here now.

A. L. H.

Denver and Kansas City.

KANSAS CITY, MARCH 24, 1888.

Denver everybody has a good word for, and it is really an interesting and beautiful city. The town is "booming" now in true western style. Lots of eastern people are located here. The first two people I noticed on the platform station were George A. Randall, formerly of Palmer, now located here as assistant superintendent of Pullman's Palace Car Company, and a policeman, formerly a Springfield citizen. The unlimited supply of coal, iron and other minerals in the Rocky mountains, the central location and grand climate, are bound to make Denver the city between Chicago and San Francisco. Denver has 100,000 citizens now. It is the handsomest town I have yet visited. The Tabor opera house is a beautiful structure, her hotels are as nice as any eastern city has, her public buildings are first-class in every respect, and I would rather live there than in any place west of the Mississippi. We are well up in the world now, and the air is crisp and dry, and puts inspiration into one.

From Denver to Kansas City by the "limited" express, flying over the broad prairies of Kansas a mile a minute for miles and miles, is very different traveling from a few years ago. Trains in this western country used to be run very slow, but competition has changed all this. Kansas is a monotonous country, but it is a grand farming section. Kansas City is a sort of a two-story city, a portion of the business section and the railroads being located on the river level, and the best of the city on the upper level, some 200 feet above the railroad yards. The best streets are paved in good shape, but as this is the muddy season, Missouri mud is shown at its worst. Hacks are hauled with four horses, and the mud is of the most affectionate description, a real clinging disposition, and if a person hasn't sufficient funds to purchase a corner lot a short walk in an unpaved street well persisted in will gather together a good quantity of surface soil. Kansas City is a big commercial centre, but like most western cities a good share of the town is still in a rough, unfinished condition. Rents are said to be high. Nice residences are plentiful and a large number of flats and buildings of all descriptions are going up. Prices have been "boomed" away up and the end is not yet.

From Kansas City to Illinois through Iowa was a journey through a country practically afloat with the spring freshets. This Iowa and Illinois country is the very best agricultural region in the United States. The Burlington strike is the uppermost topic with everybody, and matters and things on the great "Q" system are considerable demoralized.

From Chicago, the busiest city of the west, to Massachusetts is but a short trip now-a-days, and will complete nearly 10,000 miles of travel since leaving Palmer in December, and we would advise our friends to go and do likewise, and trust they will be as free from accident and delay as we have been.

A DANGEROUS CHARACTER.—A lady and little girl entered a Woodward avenue car and took seats next a swell young fellow in all his swellness. For a moment the little girl eyed him dubiously, then arising hurriedly she exclaimed:

"Mamma, I don't want to sit there."

"And why not, child?"

"I'm afraid of that man."

"Why, you silly little thing, he won't hurt you."

"Yes, he will, mamma. He looks just like a dude, and sister says they try to mash girls."—Detroit Free Press.

The tract of land in question is located in that immediate vicinity, and very convenient of access.

The musicale at the Converse House parlors Saturday evening was a very pleasant one. The evening's programme was made up of classical selections, the soloists being Miss Helen M. Warren of Brattleboro, Vt., Miss Effie Stone, J. P. Lynde, Jr., and M. E. Howard of North Brookfield. Following the musicale refreshments were served and games indulged in.

Fire District Meeting.

The annual meeting of the fire district will be held at the district court room next Tuesday at 2 o'clock p. m. Besides the necessary expense of the fire department and the annual rental of the Palmer Water Company, the district will be asked to pay the board of engineers a small sum for the coming year, raise $200 to finish paying for the electric fire alarm and possibly add one more box, also allow a discount on taxes paid previous to September 1st. The engineers also think the district should own 500 feet of hose, which will cost about $300. The matter of lighting the streets will probably be laid over until a later date. Chief Engineer Kenerson says he will not run again, and W. H. Hitchcock is the one mentioned as his probable successor. The voters should turn out in full force, not stay at home and then complain, after it is all over, that the appropriations do not suit them.

Probate Court Matters.

At the probate court in Springfield, Wednesday, administration was granted on the estates of—Calvin Shaw, late of Wales, Elam S. Hyde of Ellington, Ct., administrator; Franklin N. Bartlett, late of Hampden, Sarah M. Bartlett administratrix; Mary E. Leary, late of Monson, Cornelius J. Leary administrator; Leonard Converse, late of Springfield, Ira G. Potter administrator; Charles H. Robbins, late of Monson, George H. Newton administrator. Letters of adminstration with the will annexed were issued to J. A. Bosworth on the estate of T. H. Bosworth, late of Wilbraham, and Sarah M. Bartlett was appointed guardian of Robert A., Gertie V. and Olive H. Bartlett of Hampden. Accounts were rendered in the estates of—Andrew W. Porter, late of Monson; John P. Hubbard, late of Ludlow; Agnes Truesdell, late of Monson; Abigail W. Bartlett, late of Monson; Mary A. Smith, late of Monson. Hancock, administrator of the will of Louisa H. Colton, late of Wilbraham; James B. Shaw, executor of the will of Lucy D. Tiffany, late of Palmer. A widow's allowance of $300 a year was granted to Marcia A. Harris of Ludlow.

Easter at the Churches.

Easter Sunday was pleasantly observed at the different churches in this village, the weather being pleasant and the attendance comparatively large at both the morning and evening services. At St. Thomas's Catholic church Rosewig's mass was finely rendered with orchestral accompaniment. The following persons took part: Organist, Miss Maggie Kerigan; sopranos, Miss Mamie Thompson, Miss Lizzie Kerigan, Miss Annie Murphy; altos, Miss Emma King, Miss Annie Grady and Miss Maggie Kerigan; tenors, John O'Connor, William Olney; bassos, John Kerigan and C. E. Leonard; orchestra, John Masterson, F. O. Munger, W. H. Kellogg, W. A. Weld, F. R. Sistare and F. L. Eager.

At the Second Congregational church the decorations were very tasteful. The choir gave a fine musical programme at the morning service, and Rev. Mr. Puddifoot of Boston spoke in the interests of the Home Missionary Society. In the evening the children gave a very pleasing concert.

Around the altar at St. Paul's Universalist church could be seen pretty potted plants, ferns and cut flowers, and mottoes appropriate to the day. The choir rendered a special musical programme at the morning service, and an interesting discourse was preached by Prof. Shipman of College Hill. In the evening the Easter concert was very interesting.

The Farmer's Institute.

A GOOD ATTENDANCE AND PRACTICAL TALK.

The Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society held its last institute of the season at the Weeks House hall Tuesday, with a fair attendance at both sessions. In the absence of President Holbrook, King Knox was chosen chairman and called the meeting to order. The subject for discussion was: "How to Make the Farm Pay?" E. B. Lynde of Brookfield said the question of how to make the farm pay was one of great importance to every farmer. In the first place it is a wise idea to have your expenses always less than your income, for if you do not you certainly cannot make farming pay. At the present time the average New England farmer finds himself in close competition, there being so many engaged in farming. We not only come in direct competition with our neighbor, but with the products of the West, which can be sold in our New England markets at a much lower rate than the products of Massachusetts will bring. It is the best way, perhaps, to conduct the farm upon thorough business principles, and keep a record of everything bought and sold. A farmer to make his vocation profitable should be studious and thoughtful, and take more than one agricultural paper. The proper kind of literature will help to make farming pay if it is studied as it should be. The farmer should belong to some agricultural association. Join a farmers' club, if there is one in your locality, and keep posted upon all agricultural matters. If a man wishes to become successful in his vocation he must become thoroughly interested in it, for if not he will surely never make farming pay. The reason that there are so many unsuccessful farmers is owing to the fact that they do not take the interest in their work that they should. Their attention must not be diverted elsewhere, it must be wholly upon farm matters. It requires a person of a good deal of executive ability to run a farm properly and in a way that will make it pay. The farms of New England are deteriorating in value year by year, and why is it? Because the tiller of the soil has so many discouraging things constantly coming up in his way. One important factor is the burden of taxation; but it is out of the question to exempt the farmer from that. If such a thing should be done it would throw a greater burden upon the corporations and others, and it would soon be found that they could not carry the load. Then again the farmer feels as though he does more hard labor for the compensation he receives than the man that is engaged in any other class of labor, and all such discouraging phases have a tendency to make the farmer leave his vocation and engage in something that he deems more profitable.

Z. Baker of Three Rivers thought the way to make farming pay was for the farmers to be contented with their lot and remain upon New England soil, instead of leaving their homes in exchange for those in Western states, it being generally the case that those who engage in farming upon the Western prairies are always glad to get back to New England after a short time. One trouble with the farmers is that they do not commence early enough to educate their boys to work. The youth who intends to become a farmer should learn his trade just as much as the mechanic. Boys should become farmers before reaching twelve years of age. There are many who enter college who are not good for anything there, and are told to go back on the farm. We don't want them on the farm. It requires as intelligent a man to become a successful farmer as it does a successful preacher. The farmer must take a great interest in the work, and the farmer's wife should manifest an equal interest. If the interest is one-sided and the wife prefers city life, then the farmer might just as well hang up the hoe. The farmer's home should be a school of education in which can be found at any and all times the leading agricultural papers of the day and books from which the boys can derive some benefit. From them they will learn to become industrious, and know better how to make farming pay.

Wilson M. Tucker of Monson believed that boys could be made successful and competent farmers after reaching the age of twelve years. He advised the youth to acquire an education at an agricultura college, saying that some very successful farmers had gained their knowledge at such institutions.

The afternoon session began at 1.30 with Vice-President Tucker in the chair. E. B. Lynde opened the discussion, the subject being "Ensilage." He said that he sincerely believed a good silo would double the income of a man's farm. He had considered the matter somewhat, and was satisfied that ensilage is the best feed for cattle. James Tufts of Monson said that he had a silo, the dimensions of which were something like thirteen feet square by fourteen feet high, holding about 60 tons. He had reckoned the expense of a silo very carefully and said it cost him $1 per ton to cut the crops and put them in. George Robinson followed, saying that he built the first silo in Hampden county, and thought it an advantage in many ways to the average farmer in making farming successful. He was followed by C. M. Abbe, H. A. Rindge of Monson, and others.

The Adjourned Town Meeting.

LIBERAL AMOUNTS APPROPRIATED.—MORE TO FOLLOW.

The muddy state of the roads kept many from attending the adjourned town meeting Monday, but there was a very fair attendance after all, and the comparatively harmonious manner in which every thing passed off was an agreeable surprise to the majority of the voters, there being very little controversy except in the matter of appointing a committee and appropriating a sum to suppress the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors. It was 10.15 when Moderator Taft called the meeting to order, and the first article taken up was No. 3, the reports of the selectmen, school committee and other town officers being accepted. A motion to fix the tax collector's compensation at the lowest sum at which the work might be bid off was lost, and it was finally voted to pay the same sum as last year, $215, which includes the posting of the town warrant. It was moved to elect a tax collector and one more constable, and George W. Ely was chosen for both positions. The collector was instructed to collect all taxes within one year from the time the list shall be placed in his hands, and a discount of 6 per cent will be allowed on all taxes paid on or before September 1st, but the collector must pay all money to the town treasurer once a month. The overseers of the poor were instructed to hire the present lockup and tramp room for another year upon as favorable terms as possible.

The matter of voting by precincts was opposed to by some on the ground of additional expense to the town, as three more ballot boxes at $50 each would be necessary, with hall rent and extra officers at each village on election day, and it was voted not to accept the provisions of the statute. The sum of $300 was appropriated to extend the Central street sewer in the Depot village from Park street to near the head of Central street, and $200 to entrust to the Grand Army post for aid to veterans or their families, also $100 for the observance of Memorial Day. After two refusals to take up article 28 the moderator reminded the voters that they would be obliged to dispose of it some time, when it was taken up and $100 voted to build a branch of the Central street sewer along Pleasant street to near the Congregational church in the Depot village. After a few words of explanation by the committee there was little or no opposition to granting the additional $1000 asked for the new high school building.

Under article 24 the assessors were instructed to make a new valuation of the property in the town, and to go personally and view each piece of real estate. Also to have the valuation printed for general distribution and incorporated with the next annual town report. There were a good many who wished it printed in the fall, so as to look it over before the spring election, but they were not numerous enough to carry it. Voted to elect a board of health of five, and a committee appointed to nominate presented the names of Drs. W. H. Stowe, M. H. Davis, J. J. Flynn and H. A. Smith, and A. M. Bond. Drs. Stowe and Smith declined, as did also Dr. Holbrook, and A. M. Bond, with Drs. Flynn, Davis, Wilkins and Smith, were chosen. The proposition to pay the firemen at the Depot village $150 was amended to $2 for each member in attendance whenever they were called out of the fire district to other parts of the town, and it was voted to pay them the $2 certificates of service issued by the engineers. An appropriation of $600 for the public library was opposed by some who thought $400 enough, but was finally carried.

The sum of $100 was voted to drain Walnut street, near Converse avenue, in the Depot village, and $1000 was readily granted for putting the history of the town into manuscript, the committee asserting that they could get the work done by a competent person for that sum in addition to what they now have on hand. A motion to raise $150 to harden Pine street in the Depot village was lost, but the article was taken up later and $100 voted. The highway surveyors were instructed to drain the street in Thorndike leading from the Catholic church to the river, in the manner they shall deem best. There was a good deal of talk relating to the manner of caring for the highways the past year, the commissioner being alternately praised and blamed. It was finally voted to go back to the district system, the matter being left in the hands of the selectmen. The two roads as laid out by the selectmen on Dewey's hill in the Depot village were accepted and allowed.

There was some "kicking" on the question of appropriating money to convey scholars to the high school. Some thought $600 was enough, while others thought if a scholar really desired to attend the school he could get there without help from the town. The sum of $1000 was finally appropriated. The selectmen were authorized to fence the cemetery at Palmer Center at a cost not to exceed $200. It was voted to allow water closets and sink drains to be emptied into the sewers of the town where such pipes were flushed with water and the inlets trapped. The fee for hotels was made $150, the fee for residences and other buildings being left with the selectmen.

At the recommendation of the school committee these appropriations were made: Salaries of school teachers, $10,800; text books and supplies, $1000; fuel, $800; care of houses, $700; contingencies, $700; repairs, including steam heat at Depot village, $1500; salary of committee, $600. In this connection the school committee was sharply criticised for not attending to its duties, the claim being made that some of the schools in town had not been visited twice in the past year, while the law calls for three times a term. These appropriations, suggested by the selectmen, were made: Support of poor, $5000; contingencies, $3000; highways, $4000; sewers and culverts, $1000; repairs of bridges, $1500; railways, $400. The selectmen were instructed to expend $100 for a sidewalk near the Point of Rocks in the Depot village, and $800 was voted for clearing the recent snow and ice from the highways. It was found that the two bridges near M. C. Fenton's could be replaced with iron at a cost of $2500 for the two, the one at Blanchardville for $3000, and the one near Jeremiah Dutton's for the same price. The matter was finally left with the selectmen to do as they think best for the interests of the town. The treasurer was instructed to borrow money for town use, with the approval of the selectmen, the same to be paid from the taxes of the current year. After a division of the house it was decided that $1000 be appropriated to suppress the illegal sales of liquor, the matter being left with F. A. Bowen, F. A. Packard and James Healey as a committee. The revised list of jurors was accepted, and $100 voted to drain the high school yard in the Depot village. Suitable guide boards were ordered erected on the roads of the town and streets of the several villages, and $500 appropriated for the same. These officers were chosen: Sealer of weights and measures, F. L. Brooks; surveyors of lumber and measurers of wood and bark, C. L. Alexander, T. D. Potter, J. A. Palmer, H. A. Northrop, H. T. Bishop, G. W. Randall; field drivers, same as last year with the addition of John Gay, Sr., G. H. Smith and J. R. Wellman; auditors, S. H. Hellyar and H. T. Bishop.

The appropriations amount to $38,000.

LUDLOW.

The bills thus far presented to the town for breaking out the roads after the late snow storm amount to $750.

Rev. Mr. Ferguson is at conference at Milford this week. He expects to return to his charge at the Center another year.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

Miss Isabel Cutler has been quite sick with pneumonia, but is recovering.

A large number of masons and carpenters are at work on the new paper mill, and the work is being pushed as rapidly as possible.

The wife of Sectionmaster Strickland, who has been sick for several months, has been much worse for several days, but is better again.

The contributions of Grace church for the first three months of the year were for home missions, and amounted to $130. For the next three months the object will be the work among the Freedmen; for July and August, foreign missions; September, parish work; October, work among Mormons; November and December, church building.

The south end voters failed to materialize at the town meeting Monday, and the north end ticket was elected by more than two to one. The old board of selectmen was reëlected, and organized at the regular meeting Wednesday with Henry Cutler as chairman. J. A. Parker was appointed clerk, and the regular meeting for the year will be the first Wednesday of each month at the Collins House, North Wilbraham.

WILBRAHAM.

The public schools reopened Monday.

The "Willing Workers" met with Miss Carrie Moody Wednesday afternoon and evening.

Union services were held in the Congregational church Fast Day, Rev. M. S. Howard officiating.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Goodenough gave a very pleasant reception at their home on Main street Monday evening.

At the last quarterly conference of the Methodist church licenses to preach were given to Walter S. Watson, James Sutherland, Walter S. Pember and John J. Smallwood.

The ladies' society of the South church met in the church parlors last Friday evening with Miss Clara Markham and Miss Fannie Merrick. There were refreshments and pleasant literary exercises.

Easter services were very appropriately observed in both churches last Sunday, and fine selections of Easter music were rendered by the choirs. Interesting Easter concert exercises were rendered by the members of the Sunday-school of the Congregational church in the evening. The floral display was very beautiful and tastefully arranged.

A very pleasant wedding occurred at the residence of Mrs. J. A. Lilly Tuesday evening, when her daughter Jessie and Rev. James Sutherland were united in marriage, Rev. M. S. Howard officiating. The presents were beautiful and useful. Mr. and Mrs. Sutherland will leave for their home in Prescott, where Mr. Sutherland has been stationed, next week.

BRIMFIELD.

George L. Plimpton being home from college on a vacation, was surprised a few evenings since with a call from 19 of his fellow members of the Christian Endeavor society. The callers were as much surprised before they left to be invited to gather round a table well loaded with popcorn, candies and oranges.

The funeral services of Mrs. Hattie Richardson Ayer were held in the church at Sturbridge Sunday. She was a daughter of Rev. M. L. Richardson of that place, and a graduate of the Hitchcock Free High School in this village four years since. She won for herself a good name here, and was much beloved by all who knew her. Rev. Joseph Kyte officiated at the services.

At the town meeting Monday these officers were elected: Moderator, Samuel W. Brown; town clerk and treasurer, Henry F. Brown; selectmen, Oscar F. Brown, Frank R. Newton, Josiah Stebbins; assessors, Samuel W. Brown, John Shanly, George W. Sherman; school committee for three years, Newton S. Hubbard; collector of taxes, Charles S. Tarbell; constables, Francis E. Cook, Orrin Hicks, John P. Eastman: overseer of poor for three years, Francis E. Cook; road commissioner for three years, Orrin Hicks. The vote on license was Yes, 4; No, 74. Appropriations: Highways, $1600; bridges, $200; snow paths, $200; schools, $1500; repair of school houses, $150; support of paupers, $1500; officers' salaries, $500; discount on taxes, $300; miscellaneous expenses, $600; interest on town debt, $50; total, $6600. The meeting was adjourned to Monday, April 9th, at 10 o'clock a. m.

HAMPDEN.

A. O. Thresher has sold his trotting horse "Ginger," as continued ill health obliges him to abandon its training.

The remains of Mrs. Paulina Root, who died at her daughter's residence in Torrington, Ct., were brought to town and buried Wednesday.

Town meeting passed off quietly Monday and the town officers who served in '87 were nearly all reëlected. The no license voters had 14 majority.

Mr. Wall, who has been so unfortunate in manufacturing, has concluded to start the Lacowsic mill again, and people are drawing wood to him as fast as the weather will permit.

A Minister's Resignation.

Rev. E. A. Chase has resigned his pastorate, and with his family gone to Chelsea. A correspondent says there is a good deal of indignation felt at his statement before the Congregational Club as reported in the Springfield Republican in regard to the support of the clergymen in this place. He made a plea for fewer churches and more united evangelical work, saying that Hampden has 800 inhabitants and 200 families, with four churches and ministers. Two of these ministers who have to keep horses to do their work are paid together less than $1000 a year, and he has known that the family of one has actually suffered for food. The question was also a social one. So jealous were the churches in Hampden that when he invited a stranger to tea at his house he was accused of "fishing" to get him to attend his church. Besides its financial and social difficulties the hill-town problem has religious perplexities. Only when the Congregationalist, the Baptist and the Methodist can say, "I love the Lord more than my denomination," and to his brother, "let us strengthen Christianity," can there be any hope. The truth is the Baptist minister receives $600 per annum, has but two in his family, and keeps his horse from choice, not necessity. The Methodist minister has received $500 with the rent of the parsonage, and furniture worth $125, and the use of the barn and garden, and presents to the amount of several dollars more. He is obliged to keep a horse and has quite a family, but that they have suffered for food he and his wife deny. It is suspected that Mr. Chase gave his own experience, as he went to the Methodist minister and gave him some points of his speech, adding, "Should you see it in the paper do not consider it as reflecting on you or your society, as such is not my intention."

MONSON.

The drum corps made a creditable showing Monday evening.

Sportsmen have brought in some fine strings of trout this week.

Rev. J. H. Emerson is attending the New England Conference at Milford this week.

The "Battle of Gettysburg" occupied Central Hall Monday and Tuesday evenings.

Rev. J. F. Lee lectures at the academy this evening on his travels through Ireland.

L. Hutchins has the new engine and saws in operation at his carriage manufactory.

The stones which fell from the south side of Memorial Hall are being replaced this week.

The annual meeting of the Universalist parish will be held at Central Hall next Monday evening.

About 80 couples attended the Washington Club's concert and ball at Central Hall Wednesday evening.

Rev. J. F. Simmons of Stafford Springs will occupy the pulpit of the Universalist church next Sunday in exchange with Rev. I. A. Priest.

The senior class at the academy gave a very pleasant reception Wednesday evening, quite a number of the old students being present.

C. E. Bills, once a prominent merchant of this town, died of consumption at his home last Saturday, at the age of 38. The funeral was held there Tuesday afternoon.

Fast day was duly observed at all the churches. There was a union service at the Congregational church at 10 o'clock in the morning, and appropriate services were held at St. Patrick's church.

Welcome Converse, for many years a respected citizen of this town, died at his son's residence in Brooklyn last Sunday, at the age of 70 years. The funeral was held at his residdnce here Wednesday afternoon.

There was a large and enthusiastic audience at the union temperance meeting at Memorial Hall last Sunday evening, and Dr. J. P. Rand, Rev. F. S. Hatch, Prof. Dustan and others made very interesting addresses.

A very jolly party gathered at the Windsor Club's rooms Tuesday evening, and whiled away the hours in proving that Mrs. Rufus Fay and A. T. Robinson deserved the first honors, while Mrs. H. C. Norcross and W. J. Randall laid claim to the consolation prizes at whist.

At the regular meeting of the Windsor Club these officers were elected: President, George L. Jenks; vice president, Ralph Clifford; secretary, A. L. Squier, treasurer, G. E. Knowlton; directors, L. C. Flynt and W. J. Randall. The club give their fourth drive whist party one week from next Tuesday evening.

T. L. McDonald, formerly of this place, after a seminary course in Vermont and a three-years' course at Hahnemann Medical College, Philadelphia, has just graduated with the highest class honors. He has received an appointment as resident physician in the Hahnemann hospital, and is contemplating a sojourn of a year or two in Europe, going as traveling companion to a patient of one of his college professors.

The public schools commence Monday with the following teachers: District No. 1—Grammar, Miss N. A. Hardy; upper primary, Mrs. E. Leach; primary, Miss M. L. Anderson; No.2, Miss Mary Bliss; No. 3, Justin G. Carew; No. 4, Rufus Stebbins; No. 5, Miss L. A. Sullivan; No. 6, Miss Edith L. Severy; No. 7, Miss Ella J. Bradbury; grammar, C. L. Jewett; No. 8—intermediate, Miss Bessie Sutcliffe; upper primary, Miss Converse; primary, Miss M. A. Collis; No. 9, Lilla D. Whitney; No. 10, C. S. Craik; No. 11, Miss E. E. Moulton; No. 12, Miss Olive W. Sutcliffe; No. 13, Miss Mary A. Walker; No. 14, Miss G. E. Whiting. On account of the sickness of Miss Bacon, the intermediate school in district No. 1 will not begin Monday, as was expected, and there will be no school until further notice.

Personal.

W. C. Felton of Tufts College is at home for his vacation.

Dr. P. P. Riley of Holyoke spent Sunday at his home here.

Geo. L. Jenks went to Chicopee for his Fast Day holiday.

F. E. Walker of North Brookfield was in town Thursday.

F. M. Thompson of Amherst spent Fast Day among friends here.

S. J. Wilcox, the jeweler, is very ill at his home on Green street.

H. G. Brockbank has taken a position as hostler with the Drs. Rand.

Miss Ada C. Hall of Springfield spent Thursday with her sister, Miss Stella Hall.

Mrs. G. M. Edson of Willimantic spent the week here among friends and acquaintances.

Mrs. J. H. Emerson and family are spending the week with her parents in Cambridge.

Miss J. Annie Whitney spent a few days with her sister, Mrs. J. E. Dutton of Niantic, Ct., this week.

Miss Lilla D. Whitney has returned from a two-weeks' visit to her sister, Mrs. J. E. Dutton of Niantic, Ct., and will resume her school on Monday.

Easter at the Churches.

AND OTHER NOTES.

At the Methodist church in the morning the pastor preached an Easter sermon, and a special musical programme was given by the choir. In the evening the concert was by the children, the best that has been given for some time.

At the Congregational church in the morning there was preaching by the pastor, and an appropriate musical programme was given under the direction of Spencer Lane. An excellent concert was given in the evening by the Sundays-chool.

The auditorium of St. Patrick's church was none too large for the assembly at the Easter services. The altar was profusely decorated with flowers. Farmer's mass was celebrated in the morning and vespers in the evening. The special programme was rendered by the usual choir, under the direction of Miss Mary F. Cantwell.

Easter services were held in all the churches last Sunday, and were attended by very large congregations. Special musical programmes were prepared for the morning and evening services, and appropriate discourses were preached by the pastors. The floral decorations, while not as elaborate as some years, were very handsome.

At the Universalist church there was an appropriate service in the morning and a fine programme of music. No concert was given in the evening, on account of the temperance mass meeting. The concert will be given next Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. Subject: "Child Eric's Pilgrimage; or, the story of the little boy who went out to find Jesus," which is a departure from the ordinary custom of separate recitations. The singing will be given by the children and choir, accompanied by I. F. Thompson with cornet.

Town Meeting.

OFFICERS ELECTED AND APPROPRIATIONS VOTED.

The usual interest was attached to the town meeting held Monday. Everything passed off quietly, very little discussion being indulged in. Alvin A. Gage was chosen moderator, and the appropriations were as follows: Schools, $6500; Monson Free Library and Reading Room Association, $300; text-books, $600; paupers and contingences, $5000; highways and bridges, $4500; town debt, $1000; discount on taxes, $1000; prosecuting illegal sales of liquor, $500; miscellaneous, $1300; total, $20,700. The members of the fire company will be paid according to the certificates of service issued by the board of engineers, which are $2 to each man for the year they served without pay. Among the special improvements the town voted to raise $700 for a new iron bridge near D. W. Ellis & Son's mills, and $100 was raised for evening schools. The selectmen were the committee appointed to see the license law enforced. D. G. Potter was again elected tax collector, and it was voted he should be paid $150. No less than 9 tickets were in the field, and they were so badly split up it was 6.30 before the vote could be counted. The candidates and votes were as follows, a star * indicating election:

LEGISLATIVE DOINGS.

From our Special Correspondent.

BOSTON, April 4, 1888.

The Senate on Thursday had its debate on the bill to allow the Boston and Maine Railroad to buy the Eastern, and at its close the measure was advanced its last stage without a division. Senator Crosby of Berkshire was the only opponent of the bill on general principles, saying that it was bad policy to allow the consolidation of competing lines. Senator Glines of Middlesex, chairman of the railroad committee, and others (Senators Hartwell, Sleeper, Southworth and Dwyer also supporting the bill) argued that experience had shown that competition was not the true policy, but consolidation, and that the bill ought to become a law.

The education committee, Mr. Haggerty of Southbridge dissenting, has reported a bill to allow two or more towns with a total valuation of not less than $2,000,000 and a number of schools not more than 50 nor less than 30 to unite into a district for the purpose of school superintendence.

Ought not to pass was reported Thursday by the liquor law committee on the high license bill, and on the bill for turning into the state treasury all the liquor license fees received by the cities and towns. Senator Gleason of Plymouth and Representatives Haynes of Sturbridge and Rogers of Orleans dissent.

The House on Thursday advanced one stage the bill to regulate the employment of children in factories. Attempts were made to change the age of 13, below which employment is prohibited, to 12 and to 14, but both failed.

The committee on election laws reported on Friday that it was inexpedient to legislate to prevent the payment of poll taxes by political parties. This matter has come up about every year since the abolition of the poll tax as a suffrage qualification has been agitated, but it has never found much support.

The committee on fisheries and game has reported a bill to change the close season for woodcock and partridge so that for the former it shall be from Dec. 1 to Sept. 1, instead of from Jan. 1 to Aug. 1, and for the latter from Dec. 1 to Sept. 1, instead of from Jan. 1 to Oct. 1.

By vote of 75 to 40, after a sharp debate, the House indefinitely postponed the bill for a more permanent tenure of office by policemen.

Over an hour was spent by the House Friday afternoon on the bill which was reported unanimously from the liquor committee to change last year's compulsory law on the issue of a sixth class liquor license in towns which vote no license, by making it permissive, instead of compulsory. It was argued on one side that in every town there ought to be at least one place where liquor could be obtained for medicinal use, and that the public ought not to be exposed to the whim of a board of selectmen as to this necessity. On the other side it was replied that druggists' licenses were abused badly. The House voted for the bill, 76 to 54.

Both branches of the Legislature adjourned over Monday on account of town meeting day, and the legislative halls were undisturbed, save by the few sight-seers who are always present on every day of the year that the state house is open to the public. Men with their wives and daughters, and young fellows with their girls, are regular visitors at the seat of legislation.

The elevators have been shaking the venerable state house structure again. Tuesday forenoon the reporters' gallery trembled with the motion of the elevators as if it had the palsy, and the bulletin board rattled against the wall as if it had been on a train of cars. Sergeant-at-Arms Adams said that the trouble was that too much air was in the pipes which run the elevator. It may be all safe to work with the state house in such condition, but it is extremely unpleasant. The gallery, however, is just outside the dome, while the representatives have to sit directly under it.

The labor committee reported on Tuesday a bill to provide that no woman or minor under 18 years shall work over 10½ hours a day in any manufacturing or mechanical establishment, except on Saturday, when the hours shall not be over 5½, and in no case shall the total be over 58 in one week. Certain exceptions are made. The bill amends Chap. 74, sec. 4, of the Public Statutes.

The House had a lively debate Tuesday on the bill to divide Medford and to incorporate West Medford as the new town of Brooks. On a rising vote the West Medford people had it, 83 to 69, but the other side rallied for a roll call and carried the day, 89 to 93. A motion to reconsider was made and tabled to-day.

An adverse report has been made on the petition of the order of the Iron Hall for leave to pay money to its members other than for benefits. Two members of the committee, Messrs. Church of Cambridge and Clark of Natick, who are also members of the order of the Iron Hall, dissent from the report.

The Senate had a most interesting debate Tuesday afternoon on the bill to prevent the coloring of imitation butter and cheese so as to resemble the genuine articles. The cause of the farmers and of honest butter was maintained by Senators Gleason of Worcester, Gleason of Plymouth, Palmer of Middlesex, Howland of Bristol, Pike of Essex and Sleeper of Middlesex, while the excellence of oleomargarine and the honesty of the business was maintained by Senators Glines of Middlesex and Kingsley of Middlesex. The vote on the bill was as follows, including pairs:

YEAS: Clark of Hampshire, Crosby, Gleason of Worcester, Gleason of Plymouth, Hartwell, Hathorne, Keith of Plymouth, Kimball, Palmer, Pike, Sprague, Stevens, Towne, Sleeper, Ladd, Spellman, Wheelock, Howland, Marble—19.

NAYS: Collins, Cook, Glines, Howard, Howe, Keith of the Cape, Kingsley, Shea, Southworth, Sullivan, Walker, Fletcher, Messinger, McAlpine, Clark of Essex, Perkins, Roads—17.

Senator Glines of Middlesex made a last attempt in the Senate on Wednesday to defeat the passage of the oleo bill. He said that it ought not to be passed while the state board of health had the same matter under advisement, and that its report would be ready next week. So he moved to postpone for one week. The Senate was against him, 12 to 14, and then the bill was passed to be engrossed, 13 to 10.

A large vote was given in the Senate against the motion of Senator Hartwell of Worcester to reconsider the rejection of the resolve for biennial sessions of the Legislature.

The House has assigned to next Tuesday the bill to allow the Boston and Maine Railroad to purchase the Eastern, and Mr. Wyman of Hyde Park will present a substitute bill, limiting possible dividends to 6 per cent and not allowing savings banks to invest in bonds of the road.

A long debate occurred in the House Wednesday on the bill for an annual state loan of $200,000 for the purpose of building homes for poor people. One of the leading speakers for the bill was Mr. Quincy of Quincy, and Mr. Mellen of Worcester, who offered the bill, was also prominent. Mr. Sawyer of Cambridge and Mr. Bottum of Northampton were leading opponents of the bill, and it was defeated, 69 to 105.

By 88 to 44 the House voted for the bill to limit the first five classes of liquor licenses to one in 1000 of the population, with one to 500 in Boston, against the committee's bill to limit the first three classes to one in 500 of the population, with one to 250 in Boston. LANDON.

WORTH KNOWING.

Mr. W. H. Morgan, merchant, Lake City. Fla., was taken with a severe Cold, attended with a distressing Cough and running into Consumption in its first stages. He tried many so-called popular cough remedies and steadily grew worse. Was reduced in flesh, had difficulty in breathing and was unable to sleep. Finally tried Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and found immediate relief, and after using about half a dozen bottles found himself well and has had no return of the disease. No other remedy can show so grand a record of cures, as Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption Guaranteed to do just what is claimed for it.—Trial bottles free at LeGro & Lynde's Drug Store. 4

RENEWS HER YOUTH.

Mrs. Phœbe Chesley, Peterson, Clay Co., Iowa, tells the following remarkable story, the truth of which is vouched for by the residents of the town: "I am 73 years old, have been troubled with kidney complaint and lameness for many years; could not dress myself without help. Now I am free from all pain and soreness, and am able to do all my own housework. I owe my thanks to Electric Bitters for having renewed my youth, and removed completely all disease and pain." Try a bottle, 50c. and $1, at LeGro & Lynde's Drug Store. 4

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.

THE BEST SALVE in the world for Cuts, Bruises, Sores, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Corns, and all Skin Eruptions, and positively cures Piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For Sale by Legro & Lynde. 1y29

Advice to Mothers.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle. 1y23

HOW I FELT

Why, two years ago I was just about crazy, and no wonder that my wife and children were afraid of me. You just want to suffer with neuralgia with no relief as I did before I used Sulphur Bitters. They cured me, and now my wife says I am as meek as a lamb.—Robt. Davis, American House, Boston.

HOW TO READ

your doctor's prescriptions. Send 3 2-cent stamps to pay postage and receive Dr. Kaufmann's great treatise on diseases, illustrated in colors; it gives their signs and abbreviations. Address A. P. Ordway & Co., Boston, Mass.

ELY'S CREAM BALM.

The best remedy for its purpose I have sold. John Hooker, Druggist, Springfield, Mass.

An article of real merit.—C. P. Alden, Druggist, Springfield, Mass.

Those who use it speak highly of it.—Geo. A. Hill, Druggist, Springfield, Mass.

Cream Balm has given satisfactory results.—W. P. Draper, Druggist, Springfield. Mass.

I believe Ely's Cream Balm is the best article for catarrh ever offered the public. It has given great satisfaction in every case.—Bush & Co. Druggists, Worcester, Mass.

Some Things Learned by Experience.

That a tablespoonful of salt thrown on a coal fire that is low, will cause it to burn up quickly. That you can clean oil cloth with milk and water; while soap and brush will ruin it. That the skin of a boiled egg is the best remedy you can apply to a boil. That you can't cure Rheumatism or Neuralgia without taking Menard's Rheumatic Bullets. That you can buy them of LeGro & Lynde for $1.00 per bottle. eow7

A SENSIBLE MAN

Would use Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs. It is curing more cases of Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup and all Throat and Lung troubles than any other medicine. The proprietor has authorized any druggist to give you a sample bottle free to convince you of the merit of this great remedy. Lage bottles 50c and $1.

A GREAT SURPRISE

Is in store for all who use Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs, the great guaranteed remedy. Would you believe that it is sold on its merits and that any druggist is authorized by the proprietor of this wonderful remedy to give you a sample bottle free? It never fails to cure acute or chronic coughs. All druggists sell Kemp's Balsam. Large bottles 50c and $1. 4w

TO THE HONORABLE JUSTICES OF THE SUPERIOR COURT, holden at Springfield, within and for the County of Hampden. Humbly shews Mary Decker of Palmer, in said County of Hampden, that she was lawfully married to Charles Decker, then of Altona, Clinton County and State of New York, and now of Brandon, Rutland County and State of Vermont, at Mooers, Clinton County and State of New York, on the tenth day of August A. D. 1872, that they have since lived together as husband and wife in Altona, Shadiga Lake, and Woods Falls, all in the State of New York, in Middleboro', in the State of Vermont, and in said Palmer until September last, since which time they have lived separate and apart from each other, and she has ever conducted towards him as a faithful, chaste and affectionate wife yet the said Charles Decker, regardless of his marriage vows and obligations, has contracted gross and confirmed habits of intoxication. Wherefore she prays that the bonds of matrimony heretofore existing between her and the said Charles Decker, may be dissolved, and for such further orders and decrees in the premises as to law and justice may appertain.

Dated the first day of March, 1888.

TO THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS OF THE COUNTY OF HAMPDEN:—Respectfully represent the undersigned, Selectmen of Palmer in said county, and the Boston and Albany Railroad Company, that the highway in said Palmer known as Commercial street is crossed in said Palmer by the railroad of said Company, the railroad of the New London Northern Railroad Company, and the railroad of the Ware River Railroad Company, the said highway passing under said railroads; that the passage-way is long, narrow and dangerous, and the undersigned are of the opinion that it is necessary for the security and convenience of the public, as well as to enable the said Boston and Albany Railroad Company to construct at and near said crossing a suitable and convenient approach to its passenger station in said Palmer, that said passage-way should be shortened, widened, and that other alterations should be made in the crossing, the approaches thereto, the location of the said railroads, highway, and in the bridge at said crossing.

We therefore pray that after due notice you will hear all parties interested, and if you decide that such alteration is necessary, certify your decision in the matter to the parties and also to the board of railroad commissioners, and take such other action in the premises as to you shall seem meet and proper.

Dated, January tenth, 1888.

H. E. W. CLARK, D. F. HOLDEN, JOSEPH KERIGAN, } Selectmen of Palmer.

J. A. RUMRILL, { Vice President Boston & Albany Railroad.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—HAMPDEN, SS.—At a meeting of the County Commissioners, holden at Springfield, within and for said County, on the twenty-eighth day of March, in the year of our Lord, 1888.

And now upon the petition aforesaid, the County Commissioners give notice that they will meet for the purpose of hearing all parties interested at the station of the Boston & Albany Railroad Company, in Palmer, on Friday, the eleventh day of May next, at ten o'clock a. m.; and it is ordered by the County Commissioners that a copy of said petition and this order be served by the sheriff of said County, or his deputy, upon the said Town of Palmer, the New London Railroad Company, and the Ware River Railroad Company, thirty days at least before the said eleventh day of May, and that all persons and corporations interested therein be notified by publishing a copy of said petition and this order thereon, once a week in the PALMER JOURNAL, a public newspaper, printed in said County, three weeks successively, the last publication to be fourteen days at least before said eleventh day of May, and it is further ordered by the Commissioners that copies of said petition or abstracts containing the substance thereof, and this order, be posted by said sheriff or deputy, in two public places in the town of Palmer, thirty days before said eleventh day of May, and that notice be given in manner aforesaid to all persons and corporations interested, that the County Commissioners will hear the parties interested at the time aforesaid.

FIRE DISTRICT MEETING.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—HAMPDEN, SS..—

To the qualified voters of Fire District No. 1, in Palmer:—You are hereby notified to meet at the Eastern Hampden District Court Room in said Palmer, on Tuesday, the tenth day of April next, at two o'clock in the afternoon, to act on the following articles, viz:—

ART. 1. To choose a moderator to preside at said meeting.

ART. 2. To choose a clerk, treasurer, prudential committee, and board of engineers, and all other officers and committees that may be necessary for the ensuing year, and give them instructions.

ART. 3. To hear the report of the treasurer, prudential committee and board of engineers, and act on the same.

ART. 4. To raise such sums of money as may be necessary to pay the expenses of the fire department and annual rental of the Palmer water company for the ensuing year, and appropriate the same.

ART. 5. To see what action the district will take towards paying the board of engineers for their services for the ensuing year.

ART. 6. To see what action the district will take towards paying the firemen for their services for the ensuing year.

ART. 7. To see what action the district will take towards lighting the streets.

ART. 8. To see what action the district will take towards allowing a discount on taxes paid on or before September 1st of the current year, and raise such sums of money as may be necessary to cover the deficiency caused thereby.

ART. 9. To raise a sum of money to pay the balance due on the fire alarm, and whatever sum may be necessary for improvements thereon.

Given under my hand this twenty-ninth day of March, 1888. WILLIAM W. LEACH, (2w53) Clerk of the Fire District.

NOTICE is hereby given that the subscriber has been duly appointed Executor of the will of Alexander Harwood, late of Brimfield, in the County of Hampden, deceased; and has taken upon himself that trust, by giving bonds as the law directs. ## THE INCURABLE CURED!

HOPKINSVILLE, KY., Feb. 24, 1887.

Gentlemen—Seven years ago a sore developed on my nose from a finger nail scratch. I tried a few simple remedies, but the sore would not yield. I grew worse every year for seven years. Many thought I had a cancer. Over a year ago I began to take S. S. S., and two dozen bottles entirely cured me. When I began with Swift's Specific I was in very poor health, and could hardly drag about. After I had finished the course of S. S. S. I was strong and buoyant, and had a good appetite. I regard it as a most valuable medicine for ladies in weak, delicate health. It is a household medicine with me. Yours respectfully,

MRS. R. W. WILSON.

SPARTANSBURG, S. C., April 2, 1887.

Gentlemen—For twenty years I have had a sore on my left cheek. I had gradually been growing worse. The many physicians whom I had consulted were unable to do me any good. Last fall a year ago I began using S. S. S. At first it inflamed the sore, and it became more virulent than ever; so much so, indeed, that my family insisted that I should leave off the medicine. I persisted in using the S. S. S. At the end of two months the sore was entirely healed. Thinking that the evil was out of my constitution, I left off the medicine; but in November, ten months after a very slight breaking out appeared. I at once began again on S. S. S. It has done me more good than all the doctors and other medicines I ever took. Yours truly,

A. R. SHANDS.

WINSTON, N. C., April 12. 1887.

Gentlemen—Two or three years ago a cancer came on my face. It soon grew to be quite large. It wore on me, and my general health was very poor. Last September I began a course of S. S. S., which I have continued to the present time with there happiest result. The cancer entirely disappeared, there being no evidence or symptom of a cancerous character left. My general health is good now, and my appetite better than it has been for years. I am 82 years old, and to-day I am working in the field planting corn. Yours truly,

JONAS LIMEBACH.

Gentlemen—I had a sore on my upper lip for eight years. Seven different doctors attempted in vain to heal it. One gave me a small vial for five dollars, which was a "certain cure." It is needless to say it did me no good. About two years ago I became quite uneasy, as people thought I had a cancer, and I took a course of eighteen bottles of S. S. S. The result has been a complete cure. The ulcer or cancer healed beautifully, leaving scarcely a perceptible scar. From that day I have been in excellent health, the Specific having purified my blood thoroughly, increased my appetite and perfected my digestion. In a word, I feel like a new person, and, best of all, the 8-year ulcer is gone entirely. Yours truly, MRS. W. P. CANNON.

Judge Not.

How do we know what hearts have vilest sin?
How do we know?
Many, like sepulchres, are foul within
Whose outward garb is spotless as the snow,
And many may be pure we think not so.
How near to God the souls of such have been,
What mercy secret penitence may win—
How do we know?

How can we tell who hath sinned more than we?
How can we tell?
We think our brother has walked guiltily,
Judging him in self-righteousness. Ah, well!
Perhaps had we been driven through the hell
Of his untold temptations, we might be Less upright in our daily walk than he—
How can we tell?

Dare we condemn the ills that others do?
Dare we condemn?
Their strength is small, their trials not a few,
The tide of wrong is difficult to stem,
And if to us more clearly than them
Is given knowledge of good and true,
More do they need our help, and pity, too—
Dare we condemn?

God help us all and lead us day by day,
God help us all!
We cannot walk alone the perfect way,
Evil allures us, tempts us, and we fall—
We are but human and our power is small;
Not one of us may boast, and not a day
Rolls o'er our heads but each hath need to say,
God bless us all!

Here is a leap-year puzzle propounded by a good young man: "A young lady has made a proposal to me and I have promised to be her husband. Should I allow her to kiss me before we are married?" No, surely not; it would be scandalous. Do all the kissing yourself.—Chicago News.

"What! is it possible you don't know anything at all about the Scriptures?" said the surprised Sunday-school teacher to the new boy in her class. "Never heard of 'em," replied the boy. "We have just moved here from New York city."—Chicago Tribune.

A Rude Awakening.—She had been rhapsodizing about Browning for nearly an hour to young Mr. Waldo, and as she sat there in the flickering firelight, shading her eyes with one shapely hand, he thought he had never seen a fairer picture. She was about to go on, when her little brother opened the door. "Penelope," he said, "can't I have some of them cold beans you put away to eat after Mr. Waldo goes home?"—New York Sun.

SOMETHING THE PUBLIC SHOULD KNOW.

The articles, anonymous and otherwise, appearing from time to time in the newspapers, making unfavorable reference to Cleveland's baking powder, are from a rival baking powder company. These articles are intended to counteract, if possible, the letter to the public from General Hurst, late Ohio State Dairy & Food Commissioner, in which he states that the Ohio Commission's investigation of the baking powders, based upon the State Chemist's analyses of thirty different brands, proves that Cleveland's is a strictly pure cream of tartar baking powder, entirely free from alum, ammonia, lime, &c., and that it is absolutely the best and most desirable baking powder manufactured; also, that the Royal baking powder contains ammonia; that the Cleveland's is superior to the Royal in every quality of excellence. Another object sought by our competitors in the articles referred to is to divert public attention from the scathing but well merited rebuke administered to them by General Hurst for falsifying his official report in their effort to bolster up their baking powder when it compares so unfavorably with Cleveland's powder.

It is quite time that the public is made aware of the deceptive character of the advertising of the baking powder company in question. While extravagantly advertising their powder they have shrewdly concealed their use of ammonia in its manufacture and have persistently maligned Cleveland's powder.

Cleveland's superior baking powder has never been made of anything but purest grape cream of tartar, purest bicarbonate of soda, and a small portion of wheat flour or starch, and has always been absolutely free from adulteration. This is attested by the leading chemists in different parts of the country from analyses made of our powder purchased by them in open market in their respective localities, as shown by their certificates in the circular accompanying each can. We ask the public to show its disapproval of the despicable advertising methods referred to by extending its patronage to Cleveland's superior baking powder, which has for eighteen years been first in point of merit as a pure, efficient, and healthful bread leavening agent. CLEVELAND BROTHERS.
ALBANY, N. Y., MARCH, 1888.

Make No Mistake.

If you have made up you mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion and preparation curative power superior o any other article of the kind before the people. Be sure to get Hood's.

"In one store the clerk tried to induce me to buy their own instead of Hood's Sarsaparilla. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was, I had taken it, was perfectly satisfied with it, and did not want any other."—Mrs. Ella A. Goff, 61 Terrace street, Boston, Mass.

"My wife suffered from sick headache and neuralgia. After taking Hood's Sarsaparilla she was much relieved."—W. R. Babb, Wilmington, Ohio.

"Call Me When Breakfast Is Ready."

Call me when breakfast is ready—
O mother! don't call me before;
Do not deny me the pleasure,
Of moderate rest, I implore.
Eight hours of sleep are too little
For delicate maidens like me;
Dearer by far, is my pillow
Than a cup of the daintiest tea.
Mother, I can't endure it,
This getting up early's a bore—
Call me when breakfast is ready—
Oh, please do not call me before.

Call me when breakfast is ready.
O mother! don't call me too soon.
Shopping, of course, needs attention,
But that can be done before noon.
Talk of the folly of fashion,
I do not consider it so;
Parties must not be neglected,
And style is important, you know.
Mother! it makes me so nervous
To think of your step at my door;
Call me when breakfast is ready,
Oh, please do not call me before.

Call me when breakfast is ready—
Oh! don't call me early, I pray.
Doctors advise to be quiet,
My spine is affected, they say.
Sleep is a potent elixir,
And better than drugs or the knife;
Why, then, so much in a hurry,
Since rest is the solace of life?
Mother, do have some compassion,
And chide my late rising no more;
Call me when breakfast is ready,
Oh! please do not call me before.

Call me when breakfast is ready—
O mother! I think I've been told,
Multitudes struggle for riches,
And barter their comfort for gold.
Hypocrites often rise early—
Their motives are perfectly plain;
Sundays they always sleep later,
Because they have nothing to gain.
Mother! I cannot endure it,
This getting up early's a bore—
Call me when breakfast is ready,
Please do not call me before.

CHARACTER SKETCHES BY THE WAY.

Society is like mosaics inlaid on the floor; each state or nation is a section somewhat similar in outline to every other state or nation. Each has its different institutions corresponding in a general way to the institutions of all the rest. Or we may say, perhaps more accurately, that states and nations are made up like the myriad formations of a kaleidoscope. The constituent elements are always the same, but the turning of the glass of civilization never results in exactly the same combination and arrangement of details. Where ever we go and whatever scenes we may visit, will find that men and women in general are always the same; are thinking the same thoughts, possessing the same hopes and are putting forward the same endeavors to bring about a realization of these thoughts and hopes in actual life. Hence, the first condition of successful observation is the power of analysis. He who goes upon a journey with no definite idea of how he is to arrange and clasify in his own mind the details of what he observes and experiences, will certainly fail in anything like a clear understanding of what passes before him. Not long since we visited a spot where nature in her magnificence of adornment had so piled one gem upon another that, notwithstanding our efforts to the contrary, the feelings with which we left the spot were those of bewilderment and confusion, and these remain with us still when memory carries us to those scenes which so deeply impressed us with the insignificance of man's material existence as compared with nature in her grandest forms. Even so there is in traveling the continual danger that new scenes and strange formations of society will only leave confusion in the mind, and fail to teach successfully those lessons which keen observation and a fair power of analysis should enable one to learn at every step where new and novel sights quicken the mind to activity and curiosity. Thus it happens that we, in these journeyings of ours amid surroundings so new and so suggestive to our minds, have endeavored anon to separate from the mosaic or kaleidoscope specific pieces, that, isolated from the rest, we might give them new settings of thought and moments of contemplation, hoping thereby to so arrange them in our mind that each may have its individuality and hold its place distinct from all the rest. Hence, also, we have treasured up in memory the forms of different peculiar characters we have met, and will try to draw the outlines of a few of them by the aid of our pen and our imagination.

The first of these is the portrait of a negro preacher as we saw him standing in the pulpit of a little chapel in the woods of Alabama. It was Sunday afternoon. The day, although just at the close of February, when northern hills are capped with snow and northern streams are bound in fetters of old giant Frost, was warm and clear as when the roses bloom. Morning services were ended at the little village church where our colony of "Yankees" worship on each Sabbath day. Chatting at the table of "mine host," we were told that during the afternoon religious services would be held in a "negro church" not far away. We had been waiting for an opportunity like this. Through all our life had come to us strange stories of that weird eloquence by which the negro orator could hold in awe his ignorant listeners. Therefore it was with pleasure that we accepted the invitation of those who were as inquisitive as ourselves, to listen to the services.

Nothing could be more picturesque or appropriate in its surrounding than the "meeting-house." Somehow we have never accepted the modern idea of church environments as the true one. We build our house of worship in the heart of our busiest city, on the corner lot around and opposite which for six days of the week the busy toil and strife of trade moves on without delay. In all that is without there is the thought of competition in profession and in trade, pausing but a moment while it catches breath for a greater effort. From these surroundings, which suggest no thought of worship or of that sweet communion with the unseen and the eternal which alone gives birth to truest reverence, and expect within the circuit of an hour to fill ourselves with spiritual longings and the peace and joy of heavenly things. Not so, and far more appropriate, were the environments of this house for negro worshippers. For a mile to the westward of the village, winding in and out between the undulating fields which stretched away on either hand till lost in distant hillsides or in mountain peaks, was coiled the snake-like outline of the sandy road, until it touched the base of wooded knolls, rising abruptly from the wayside close at hand. Upward along the steep incline was stretched a path, winding in and out among the trees, from the highway to the hilltop. And there upon the highest point, surrounded by dense forests of majestic pines, perched so high that all around the hillsides disappeared into the valleys which were out of sight within the woods, with nothing above except the great trees and their foliage, and higher still the deep blue dome of heaven, it seemed as if all nature had conspired to arrange a spot fit for the worship of the Infinite.

But the preacher is what we are after. The meeting house was made of unplaned boards, and its seats were such as to suggest, to those of tender birth or æsthetic culture why man was born so sensitive to pain, and why his backbone will not fit so many angles that are to unskilled mechanism. For the artist that had planned the seats had entirely forgotten that human beings were to sit on them and had constructed them with regard alone to space, and economy of material. When we entered, the building, which had a seating capacity of perhaps two hundred, was occupied by some score or more of worshippers who were holding a prayer meeting previous to the opening of the regular preaching services. It is impossible to use space enough to describe the different elements of this peculiar service in the church among the pine trees. Suffice it that from opening to closing they were to us full of suggestions of the rich possibilities of the Gospel when it touches with its mellowing influences even ignorant and brutal hearts and minds. The prayer, so full of unction even when spoken in the dialect and uncouth English of the colored man, the plaintive melodies, each line repeated by the leader and then caught up and echoed through the house, both filled us with the spirit of devotion which no doubt prepared us for the preacher's voice. He came at last and took his place behind the plain board alter, at either side of which the deacons sat.

Let us describe him as nearly as possible. A face as black as ever negro owned, thick lips which roll away from a double row of snow white teeth, a bushy head of hair clinging to the head with all the tenacity of imagination's "wool," this was the outline of the head. In height some five feet six, in breadth of great size, in weight two hundred pounds—in our imagination—this was the outline of the body. Fresh from the ore-beds where he had toiled throughout the week, with hands all marked by callous from pick or shovel, and with clothes unmarked by brush and hanging on the peg, our preacher stood before us almost the personification of awkward, uncouth ignorance.

By the time that the speaker had announced his text and gotten under way the house was crowded to the door. He was a Baptist, and whoever has heard a negro preacher of this persuasion, or one of the laymen who "exercises" in public, knows how much meaning is in this denominational designation.

The sermon had for its subject "baptism," and its text was from the sayings of Jesus, where he sent his disciples into the world with the command to preach the Gospel and "baptize those who believe." In its outline the address was natural and full of "points," from the speaker's standpoint.

One by one the incidents of apostolic labors were recounted, and each time with reference to those events, like the preaching of John, including the baptism of Jesus, and the conversion of Haamon, which plainly teach the intimate connection between repentance and baptism.

When the speaker began, his voice was keyed far down the scale and each word was uttered in a rich bass note which gave the sentence the effect that music has when trained hands touch the heavier notes of some great organ with just enough of power to suggest what possibilities are hidden in the instrument. Nature is a universal musician. Each atom of this wonderful material universe has its particular note. From the pebble on old ocean's beach, to the great rock quarry on the mountain side, from the uncouth barbarian with his war-club and his tomahawk, to the cultured child of civilization, all is tuned to some form of musical expression, and it is this universal presence of music in the soul that makes possible the deepest spiritual communion. What then is eloquence? It is, we believe, that perceptive faculty and power of expression which, combined in a single individual, enable him to sweep away all obstacles that the bias of education, of prejudice or of ignorance may have erected between our lives, and touch into activity and life those hidden chords of sympathy and love which, when manipulated by skilful players, bind all hearts as one, carrying us to valleys of humiliation or mountains of transfiguration, at the speaker's will. If this be eloquence, then the negro preacher of the chapel in the woods was eloquent to a degree which we have never found in human speech before. We do not exaggerate. Gradually as the speaker finished the recounting of those Bible incidents which point directly to baptism as a teaching of the Christ, he astonished us by passing out from and above this material conception of the words of Jesus and told with wondrous power how all this outward ceremony was but the mark or sign of thing that was going on within the Christian's life. He pictured Christ as coming from heaven to earth, baptised by the spirit of the living God that he might through this power of the Holy Ghost lay down his life for sinful man. And then he told how Christ had triumphed over sin and death and hell, and how upon that resurrection morn he returned again to God. Then heaven, the new Jerusalem, was spoken of as only simplicity can speak of it. The jasper walls, the pearly gates, the golden streets, the great white throne, the angels, and the Lamb of God all were grouped in one grand scene and passed in thought before the mind as physical realities, as the heavenly home where faithful saints would rest through all eternity. Then suddenly the transition was marvelous. No questions were asked, no doubts were entertained, but with a grand exultant lifting of the voice, in volume, not in key, until its music seemed to rise and fall like ocean waves, the speaker seemed to reach far down into his very soul and bring forth music such as only human hearts can feel. Gradually with the sweeping and the swinging of the voice as it moved in perfect harmony with poetic law, first the foot, and then the head, and then the body moved and beat in perfect time until the very being of the man, material and spiritual, seemed to be subject to a mighty masterly impulse or inspiration. In the meantime as great a change had taken place throughout the meeting-house. Every word and movement of the speaker seemed to find spontaneous response in the soul of every listener. As his feet moved, so did theirs; as his head beat time, so also did every head within the house beat time; as his body swayed from side to side, so the form of every listener seemed to own its power and moved in unison as though but one heart beat within the bosom of the whole assembly. And then, as though the harmony were not complete enough, from here, and there, and everywhere around the room, there came a low uncertain sound of voices hardly yet quite ready to break into speech. Higher and higher, ever more clearly defined, the accents came, until throughout the house there swept that "crooning" sound peculiar to the negroes when, under the influence of the orator, they are carried from silence unto speech. For fifteen minutes did the preacher hold his mastery over mind and form and speech. Higher and higher swept the exultant notes, and deeper and deeper was the hold they took upon his hearers until the surges rose and fell and carried with them every person in the room even to ourself, for e'er we were aware, our feet were keeping time and we had almost broken into voicing what we thought. And then, as sunbeams disappear and fade as twilight comes, or as the waves of ocean sink silently to rest when the storm has passed away and leave within us still the rythm of their movements, so the speaker's voice sank from note to note unil it passed from hearing into memory's chambers, there to be treasured up forever, while we left the meeting-house and turned our footsteps to the village, pondering the question as to what power could turn brutality and ignorance into such eloquence.

"How foolish," we hear the reader say, "how foolish to affirm that such speaking is the greatest eloquence. Put this man before an audience of educated people and his power would be gone." This is true no doubt, and yet it but bears evidence of our own need of development along certain lines. We love to tell our story to the minds of those who read and think. We doubt if we could make those negroes understand our message in its fulness. Yet we would surely doubt our power to exalt to nobler life the mind and heart that could sit untouched, unmoved, and uninspired 'neath utterances as poor and unrhetorical as those of this poor negro preacher, Henry Peoples.

The best of every human work must be found in what it undertakes to do. The best of every preacher's work must be found in answering how much power he possesses over those who are his people. If this be true, and it is, then the negro preacher owned a power which we have never witnessed in another's speech. And, moreover, as we've pondered on that sermon preached among the pine-trees in the little meeting-house, we have said that would the fairies or the angels give to us such powers of persuasion and subjection of contending passions, we would consider it a prize so rich that all the golden treasures of the world would not repay its loss.

A very prominent citizen of Steubenville, Ohio, has a habit of frequently looking at his watch. He is a regular attendant at church, and even in the sanctuary he is solicitous to find out how time is going. A Sunday or two ago he was in his regular seat, and every ten or fifteen minutes he would take out his watch, look at the hour and close it with a snap. The town clock struck 12, and out came the watch just as the minister was in the midst of an impressive passage in his sermon. Upon the appearance of the watch, and before it was opened, the minister paused in his discourse long enough to say, "It is just 12 o'clock, brother," and then proceeded.

"Penny walks" are popular at Buffalo. A young couple or a party set out for a walk and when they reach a corner one of them tosses up a cent. If it turns up head, they go to the right; tails, to the left." Next corner they do the same thing. Sometimes when they get ready to stop they don't know where they are.

Emancipation.

He's not of age, this boy of ours—
In fact, he's only five;
Yet, of creation's rulers, there's
No bigger lord alive.

Upon his baby brow there sits
The very crown and front
Of sovereignty—an iron will
Is in his naughty "won't!"

Already in his mind he is
A little man—bedight
In knickerbockers, roysters round,
Just spoiling for a fight.

He orders Nurse to clip his hair,
Nor spare a single curl;
"I don't want petticoats no more—
I guess I ain't a girl!"

Long since, he mastered his mamma,
And bullyragged his bonne,
This tiny little tyrant, Ted,
Who's just put breeches on.

SHE WOULDN'T INTERFERE.

"No," said old Mrs. Dragon, who had just arrived from her first visit at the home of her newly-acquired son-in-law, Chauncy Breene. "No, I don't believe in mother-in-laws interfering in the affairs of their married children. I've always said that I never would, and I—why, Hattie Breene, you ain't using your best silverware every day, I hope."

"Yes, mamma, Chauncy likes it."

"Oh, he does; well it makes an awful sight of work scouring it, and you know you ain't extra strong. But, as I was saying, I don't believe in—Hattie, I hope you don't try to keep that baby dressed in white all the time!"

"Yes, mamma dear, Chauncy dislikes colors on a baby."

"Oh, well, I suppose the child must wear white, then, but it must make your wash-bills awful heavy. However, as I was saying—Chauncy, if I was you I'd speak to the butcher about leaving so much fat on the steak."
